A tormentor, or one who kept him alive?

Picture of Groucho's woman companion divided

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seven years ago, a struggling actress with a background in Shakespeare and off-Broadway theater headed West to see if television could give her career a boost.

Instead, Erin Fleming abandoned the stage and attached herself to a retired comedian who is among the world's greatest.

She took it upon herself to rejuvenate his career and wove herself so thoroughly into his life that, according to court testimony last week, she once declared: "I am Groucho Marx ... I made him ... I am Groucho Marx."

Hardly — since the most successfully zany Marx Brothers pictures were made before the 37-year-old actress was even born.

But those around the 86-year-old Groucho credit Miss Fleming with infusing his old age with a new vitality.

"He was withering on the vine until she entered the picture," said a Marx relative.

But on Friday, Miss Fleming was suspended as Marx's temporary conservator, ending a spectacular and at times shabby court battle. The judge said testimony showed "an extraordinary degree of domination and control over Mr. Marx's mind and his will."

The judge named Nat Perrin, a long-time friend of Groucho, to handle his affairs, and set a hearing for May 13 on petitions by Miss Fleming and Marx's son, Arthur, to become permanent conservator of the comedian and his estate.

Perrin said he did not know whether Marx, in failing health and frequently confused, knew "the depth of what's been going on here, the seriousness and the ugliness of it. And I don't intend to acquaint him with that."

The picture that emerges of Miss Fleming is so divided that observers often wondered if she were one person or two.

As described in testimony by former Marx nurses, the green-eyed actress was a badgering, obscenity-shrieking tormentor, who left the frail comedian terrified and trembling.

Attorneys for Arthur Marx produced witnesses who told of finding concealed hypodermic syringes and drugs at the comedian's home, which they viewed as possible evidence of an attempt to improperly drug Marx. Some of the former nurses claimed the drugs were to keep Marx quiet and submissive, and said they sometimes threw the drugs away rather than administer them as Miss Fleming instructed.

Others described her as the woman who kept Marx alive. Zeppo, 74, the only other surviving brother, said: "I think she is the greatest girl in the whole world. Groucho's in love with her."

Groucho used to tell interviewers that "the relationship between Miss Fleming and myself is purely physical." But according to her, this was a myth, a part of the leering Groucho image it became her life work to produce and sell.

"She has made him a half-million to a million dollars since she has come into his life," says a source close to Groucho — and has taken 15 per cent as his manager.

"I operate like a computer around him," she said. "When he can't remember something, I remember it for him. I soon found that Groucho needed me. I urged him to give up retirement and do a oneman show at Carnegie Hall."

He did, and embarked on a series of one-man concerts. Some who saw those appearances were dismayed at the sight of a frequently befuddled old man being dragged into public by the omnipresent Miss Fleming.

Now, however, he has retired for good, and spends his time in his home fighting a series of medical problems. Everyone admits he is hard to deal with and Miss Fleming has been the one who has closely supervised his care.

At one time, there were plans for Groucho to adopt her and, although it never went through, it's a sign of the nature of their relationship.

Groucho, Miss Fleming told an interviewer, "is the only man who has given me encouragement since my father died when I was 14.

"Whatever I want to do, he says, 'You can do it, Erin.'"

3 die in Pomona car crashes

DEATH SCENE A San Clemente man was killed Saturday when this auto sheared off a cement light standard and then crashed into the curb at Garey Avenue and Arrow Highway in Pomona. The auto "wore" the light pole for a while before police and others finally removed it.

One driver being pursued by police

Three men were killed in three separate auto accidents in Pomona Saturday, police said.

Dead are Don Jones, 50, of 2407 Kellogg Park Drive, Pomona; Kelly Garcia, 22, of San Clemente; and a 50-year-old man who was not identified pending notification of next of kin.

Jones was killed about 1 p.m. when his car veered across Valley Boulevard at Ridgeway Street and struck a guard rail. He was alone in the auto at the time.

Officers reported Jones may have suffered a heart attack prior to the crash. The victim had a history of heart problems.

In a spectacular crash at Garey Avenue and Arrow Highwav about 4:30 p.m., a car being pursued by police at high speeds sideswiped another auto, then shear off a light standard. Garcia, a passenger in the auto, died afterwards at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

The driver, Mark Byrd, 20, suffered serious back injuries and was taken to Kaiser Hospital in Fontana.

Byrd's car was being chased by a LaVerne policeman, after the auto passed the officer at Arrow and Fulton doing speeds of 100 miles an hour.

Police said the officer had made a "routine" traffic stop on another car and saw Byrd's auto speed by.

The car barely missed one driven by Phyllis Boatwright of Pomona and hit the light standard. "When that car hit, it looked like an atomic bomb exploded," said La Verne Policeman Ed Morrett.

In a third accident, Ivan Allen, 53, of Montclair, was booked for felony manslaughter and drunk driving after his car turned in front of a motorcyclist at Holt and Clark avenues at 8 p.m. The cyclist, who was not identified, was westbound on Holt.

Allen was being held at Pomona city jail.

Russ, British act to slow nuclear spread

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain and Russia are promoting a joint initiative — with probable backing from the United States — to slow the spread of tools and materials that could make nuclear weapons.

The development, reported by European and U.S. officials, comes as the Carter administration sets out to rally world backing for building an ordered international energy program based on shared aims.

In advance of two major parleys on nuclear energy development — first in London, this week, then in Salzburg, Austria — the informants outlined the British-Soviet plan:

It proposes a ban on the sale of all plants, equipment, technology and fuels listed as sensitive to would-be user nations unless those nations expose all their nuclear energy installations to constant surveillance and inspection.

A draft of the British-Soviet proposal already has been circulated among the 15 members of the so-called "Nuclear Suppliers' Club." These are mainly European and North American countries, plus Japan, able to export nuclear technology.

Among items subject to the ban, listed in the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency document, are such things as:

—Defined categories of nuclear reactors.

—Reactor metal pressure vessels designed to contain more than 100 grams of plutonium yearly. Plutonium can be used for bombs.

—Reactor control rods which can be used in plutonium-producing reactors.

—Heavy water and deuterium which can be used in reactors for the production of plutonium.

—And a host of other techniques and equipments, materials and chemicals on a socalled "trigger list" that would enable a determined government to go nuclear.

The Carter administration seems ready to support the British-Soviet plan whether or not it applies to nations which are parties to the world treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons. In some situations the U.S. government would need to renegotiate various of its 30-odd nuclear cooperation accords with foreign countries.

Canada has been so much in favor of the plan that it is contemplating one-sided application of its rules whether the whole plan is accepted internationally or not.

France has raised objections. It has argued that any country which, like France itself, has developed part of its nuclear technology by its own unaided efforts should not be required to expose that sector to foreign surveillance. The West Germans have said they'll do anything to which the French agree.

The British-Soviet plan has a particular significance for the Carter administration. This is because the United States is pondering whether, in the future, to supply anything in the nuclear field to countries which have declined to sign or ratify the world nonproliferation treaty designed to check the further spread of nuclear weapons. Experts in the administration are split. Some raise the case of Taiwan, and Korea, both with nuclear programs, both non-adherents to the treaty.

Rites held for couple killed in airliner crash

Graveside services were held Saturday for a former Chino teacher and her husband who were killed in the crash of two jetliners March 27 in the Canary Islands.

Hazel and William J. Weller were buried at Pomona Cemetery.

The bodies of the Chino couple were returned from the Canary Islands to Ontario Airport Friday, along with many other victims of the worst airline crash in history.

Mrs. Weller was a Chino High School teacher from 1934 until her retirement in 1972. She was a counselor at the time of her retirement.

Mr. Weller worked at the Chino Post Office from 1940 until 1968.

Griffith Mortuary in Chino handled funeral arrangements for the Wellers.

The bodies of another Chino couple killed in the crash, Albert and Verne Roberts, were returned to the local area Friday.

They will be buried Wednesday at Westminster Memorial Park in a memorial ceremony planned for a number of crash victims.

Roberts formerly operated a plumbing firm in Chino and was a member of the Chino Lions Club. His wife was a member of to the Chino Women's Club.

Weather

Fair through Monday with sunny and warm days, but a bit cooler Monday. Overnight lows about 55. High today in the upper 80's, high Monday about 84. Sunset tonight 7:29 p.m., sunrise Monday 6:08 a.m., sunset 7:30 p.m.

3 Ontarians wounded by gunfire

Three Ontario residents were shot in two unrelated incidents Saturday morning leaving two of the victims in critical but stable condition in Ontario Community Hospital.

Estuaro Vargas, 52, 202 E. Nevada St., was shot in an attempted robbery as he and two companions were leaving the Juarez Club, 730 E. Holt Ave., around 12:45 a.m.

Ontario police said witnesses told them four male Latins and one female Latin were loitering in the parking area near the club when Vargas and his party were climbing into their car. The five assailants demanded Vargas' money and, when he refused, the female assailant shot him five times in the upper body.

The five attackers fled the scene on foot south on Campus Avenue. Police are continuing their investigation. No arrests have been made.

In the second incident, Anthony Rangel and Joe Marines, both 15 of Ontario, were wounded by pellets fired from one shotgun round near the intersection of Bellmont and Greenwood Streets around 1:30 a.m. A third companion, Danny Gonzalez, 14, of Ontario, was unhurt.

Police believe the shot was fired from a passing dark-colored van.

Marines was listed in critical but stable condition Saturday night at Ontario Community Hospital. Rangel was listed in fair condition at San Antonio Community Hospital.

Police are investigating the possibility that the shooting was gang related. No arrests have been made.

Truck found, $80,000 gone

CHICAGO (AP) — A armored tollway truck missing since Friday after picking up $80,000 in coins and currency from toll plazas was recovered Saturday with the money gone and the driver tied up inside.

Police said an anonymous telephone caller told them where to find the vehicle, ending a massive search by federal, state and county authorities using squad cars and helicopters.

The truck was found behind a garage on Chicago's northwest side not far from the downtown district. The driver, Darko Kucan, 27 was unharmed. He had a ski mask over his head so he could not see, police said.

Police said the truck had contained $30,000 in coins, some in rolls and some in bags, weighing 1.5 tons, and $50,000 in currency.

Kucan, an employe of the Illinois Toll Highway Authority for two years, told police he was leaving the tollway in Rosemont, a suburb northwest of Chicago, when a car behind him began flashing its lights.

Kucan said he pulled over to the side of the road and got out of the truck. He said two men approached him and forced him into their car and tied him up.

Remember, it's Daylight Savings

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the world seems a bit ahead of you Sunday, chances are you're still on standard time.

Daylight Saving Time was to take effect officially at 2 a.m. EST Sunday — thus making it 3 a.m. EDT. It perhaps steals an hour's sleep, but it gives back an extra hour of daylight in the evening. It will last six months, until the last Sunday in October.

So your clocks should be turned ahead an hour.

Fireman, paramedic deliver baby

The Heather bloomed a little earlier than expected this year for Michael and Lorie Reynolds of Chino.

The Reynolds, 13189 16th St. summoned the Chino Fire Dept. Saturday morning around 10:45 when Mrs. Reynolds, at that time was having contractions.

Paramedic Jeff Gaull and Firefighter Clark Holroyd arrived shortly thereafter to find Mrs. Reynolds in labor with the couple's first child. The two firefighters summoned an ambulance, but the child, Heather Michele, just couldn't wait.

Gaull delivered the baby girl at 11:05 a.m. Mother and daughter were transported to Doctors Hospital in Montclair and from their to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in Fontana. For both Gaull and Holroyd, as well as the Reynolds, it was the first delivery.

Brazilian government calls it off

MARTIN BORMANN

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Brazilian government announced this week that it was giving up the search for the most hunted Nazi war criminal, Martin Bormann. But West Germany closed the books on Hitler's phantom deputy four years ago.

Brazil's attorney general said the Supreme Court shelved West Germany's 1967 request for Bormann's extradition because there was no evidence he was in the country.

"I didn't even know we had a request out for his extradition," said a spokesman for the West German Foreign Ministry.

Another spokesman couldn't remember who Bormann was.

In the days of the Third Reich, Bormann was the least known of Hitler's men and the most powerful. He stayed out of the limelight that Goering, Goebbels and Himmler courted. But he ran the Nazi party and through it the country, managed Hitler's private life and his fortune and was the Fuehrer's closest aide, adviser and associate.

He emerged from Hitler's shadow to become the target of a worldwide search for nearly three decades, the only one of the major war criminals arraigned at Nuernberg who could not be found. Over the years there were thousands of reports that he had been seen. They all proved false or inconclusive. An Italian monk, a Guatemalan farmer and a German emigrant to Colombia were among those mistaken for the missing man.

The most recent Bormann stir was caused by Ladislas Farago, a best-selling author and former U.S. intelligence agent. In November, 1972, in a series of newspaper articles he reported that the missing man was living in South American and had been photographed as he crossed into Argentina from Chile. An Argentine school teacher, Rudolfo Nicholas Siri, later identified himself as the man in the photograph. Siri was 54 at the time; Bormann would have been 72.

The West German government declared Bormann officially dead in 1973 after two skeletons were found during excavation of a construction site in Berlin.

Frankfurt Attorney General Horst Gauf announced: "Martin Bormann died on May 2, 1945, between 1 and 3 a.m. on the Invalidenstrasse railroad bridge in Berlin a short time after his accomplice Adolf Hitler."

Gauf said one skeleton was Bormann's, the other was that of Hitler's doctor, Ludwig Stumpfegger, who was known to have tried to break through the Russian lines with Bormann.

The attorney general reported:

The smaller skeleton was that of a man about 5 feet 7 inches tall, Bormann's height. Mended bone fractures in one arm and the collar bone matched injuries suffered by Bormann. A face reconstructed by police experts to fit the skull looked like Bormann's last photographs. Photomontages showed the skull matched Bormann's head. And the dental bridges matched impressions of Bormann's.

Gauf said glass fragments in the skulls indicated the two men committed suicide by chewing up cyanide capsules.

"The Bormann case is herewith closed," Deputy Attorney General Joachim Richter told a news conference in April 1973. "I will ask the court to lift the arrest warrant, and we will advise the Foreign Ministry that clues will no longer be investigated."

Last February an American expert, Dr. Reidar F. Sognnaes of the University of California at Los Angeles, reported he matched the Bormann skull "tooth by tooth and crown by crown" to the Nazi leader's dental charts and he believed the identification conclusive.

Richter at the 1973 news conference gave this account of Bormann's probable end:

He and six other Nazis broke out of Hitler's bunker and tried to get through the Russian lines behind a German tank on the night of May 1. The tank was hit by a Russian shell on the Wiedendammer bridge over an arm of the Spree River.

Bormann, unwounded, retreated with the others but ran into a Soviet patrol. The Russians were celebrating May Day and were in a friendly mood, not knowing who the Germans were. Bormann and Stumpfegger broke away, ran down Invalidenstrasse, found no escape route and bit into the cyanide capsules.

Hitler Youth leader Arthur Axmann reported seeing the lifeless bodies of Bormann and Stumpfegger on the Invalidenstrasse bridge about 4 a.m. on May 2, 1945. The two skeletons found in 1973 were buried 15 yards from the spot where a German postal employe reported in 1965 that the Russians had him bury two decomposing bodies on May 8, 20 years before.

Oil slick threatens North Sea shores

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — The countries bordering the North Sea watched the wind and weather Saturday as a huge oil slick from a deep-sea well threatened to pollute their shores.

Oil well "blowout" specialists were being rushed to the North Sea drilling platform to cap a burst pipe that had already spread a slick 10 miles long and almost two miles wide in the middle of the sea, 180 miles southwest of this Norwegian oil center.

The blowout sent up a 180-foot-high fountain of crude oil over the Phillips Petroleum Co. rig "Bravo" in the Ekofisk field, situated approximately in the center of the North Sea. The rig's 112 crewmen were evacuated safely after the pipe broke late Friday night.

Officials said the oil was gushing out at the rate of about 49,000 gallons an hour. The growing slick was drifting to the southeast.

Norwegian authorities warned of possible severe pollution in a few days on the southern coast of Norway, about 160 miles from the well, and on Denmark's southern Jutland coast, some 180 miles away, depending on wind and weather conditions.

Phillips flew one of the world's foremost blowout specialists, Red Adair, from Houston, Tex., to Europe. A company spokesman said Adair or one of his top assistants would go directly to the midsea site.

Only a month ago Adair, who has become a millionaire dealing with oil well disasters, said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. that a North Sea blowout could occur at any time.

Adair's crews put out the biggest oil well blowout and fire in history several years ago at Gassi Touil in the Sahara Desert.

Production was halted at all other wells in the Ekofisk field and aircraft were ordered to stay 10 miles from the field.

Brian C. Hague, a Phillips spokesman in London, said a company utility and firefighting vessel was pumping water on the platform as a fire prevention measure. Officials said gas was escaping from the pipe with the oil, but Phillips said there was little danger of fire.

Norwegian oil officials said it would take about a week at best and perhaps one to three months to halt the leak. An unchecked 6½-day flow would equal the 7.6 million gallons that poured from the wrecked tanker Argo Merchant off Nantucket Island, Mass., last December.

Judge asked to rule

Artificial inseminator seeks visiting rights

BRIDGETON, N.J. (AP) — A county judge has been asked to rule whether a sperm donor who fathered a child through artificial insemination can visit the child despite the mother's objections.

Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court Judge Frank J. Testa, who declined to identify the persons in the case, delayed a decision.

Most artificial inseminations involve sperm obtained anonymously through a registered sperm bank. Ordinarily, a woman impregnated in this manner would not know who donated the sperm, nor would the donor ever know who the recipient was.

Testa said Thursday that the young mother objects to granting visitation rights.

She did not want to marry or have sex, but wanted a child of her own, court papers state.

After discovering the costs of artificial insemination would be prohibitive for her, she chose as a willing donor a man she had known socially, who also was not interested in marriage, the papers state.

He agreed to be a donor, but she maintains that part of their agreement was that he have no interest in the child and would not be required to support it financially.

She performed the insemination herself, according to instructions she received from a doctor, the papers said.

Bomb blast at airport kills janitor

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pipe bomb planted inside a workman's toolbox exploded in a locker room at Washington National Airport Saturday, killing a janitor.

The area was immediately sealed off by the FBI which began a search of the airport.

Authorities identified the victim as Julious B. Rogers, 51, of Washington, a custodial employe of the Federal Aviation Administration since February 1970. The FAA operates the airport.

Rogers was identified as a widower, and officials said they were having difficulty locating relatives.

Airport spokesman David Hess said workmen in the area heard an explosion about 11 a.m.

Ethiopia orders five U.S. agencies closed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leftist military government of Ethiopia on Saturday ordered five U. S. government facilities closed and their staffs out of the country within four days, the State Department said.

Arthur Tienken, the U. S. charge d'affaire in Addis Ababa, was informed of the move by the Ethiopian government, the department said.

"The United States is protesting the short deadline period," the department said, although it declined to speculate immediately on the reason for the ouster by the government of Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, the Ethiopian head of state.

A White House spokesman said President Carter had been told of the expulsion order but had no immediate comment.

The facilities involved are the Naval Medical Research Center, the U. S. Information Service and the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Addis Ababa and the U. S. Consulate General and Kagnew Station communications facility in Asmara.

The U. S. Embassy in Addis Ababa is not affected by the order.

The spokesman said Tienken was told that the five facilities were to cease operation and that their personnel should be repatriated to the United States.

A spokesman for the Pentagon said it was too early to talk of the logistics of complying with the Ethiopian government order.

It wasn't immediately known how many American military and civilian personnel were affected by the ouster.

Fewer headlines but greater influence

Nader's Raiders are invading White House 'establishment'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ralph Nader may not make quite so many headlines as he used to, but by one measure anyway his influence on government policy has soared. Many of "Nader's Raiders" now hold important posts in the Carter administration and in Congress.

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the 1960's, when they worked for Ralph Nader in makeshift offices in a crumbling Victorian mansion, Harrison Wellford, Theodore Jacobs and Lowell Dodge hardly imagined they'd some day get a crack at reorganizing the government.

But they and scores of other former Nader workers have found places in the higher reaches of the Carter administration and on Capitol Hill.

They insist that holding office won't dilute their consumerist ideals, but there's a difference. Wellford, associate director of the Office of Management and Budget, summed it up:

"When you're on the outside, you don't have to face up to the consequences of your ideas, the trade-offs, the scope of responsibilities," he says. "You didn't have to worry that some cabinet member or the President was going to implement your proposals."

Most of the Nader folk now on Capitol Hill made the transition slowly, first working for the Carter campaign, then during the transition period.

Wellford, for example, worked at Nader's Center for Study of Responsive Law from 1969 to 1972, was the late Sen. Philip Hart's chief of staff through 1976, joined Carter's campaign and worked on his transition team.

Being associated with Nader, however, isn't without its drawbacks. Some say they have been accused of having an anti-business bias, of being Nader's inside agents, although Wellford and James Fallows, at least, say Nader is just one of the many voices they listen to.

Fallows, who once dug out corporate corruption in the South and now is Carter's head speech writer, says he is on the phone with Nader from time to time, sometimes seeking advice, sometimes taking his criticism. "A lot of people who bear his stamp are in the Carter administration. But it isn't that he's been laying plans to place his people into federal government."

Wellford, Jacobs and Dodge are working on the much-heralded federal reorganization.

Jacobs has known Nader since 1951 when they were freshmen at Princeton. He was director of Nader's "Center" from the beginning of the Nixon years "when we always viewed ourselves as working from the outside. But always inherent was a feeling that something could be done from within." Needing a change, Jacobs left Nader in 1975 for the House Investigations Committee, chaired by former New York Congresswoman Bella Abzug.

Now he is a member of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, where he will cooperate with Wellford in the reorganization effort.

Dodge had a more distant, and at times, strained relationship with Nader, heading an affiliated group called the Center for Auto Safety from 1969 to 1974.

"I'm getting paid three times more to do what I was doing for Ralph," he says. "Ralph might consider that a sellout."

Of working with the Congress, he says: "I'd always criticized it for being political and too superficial. But some of my preconceptions have been shattered."

Joan Claybrook, if confirmed by the Senate as head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, probably will have the most powerful administrative job of any former Nader associate. She worked in the Transportation Department in the 1960s and had done legislative staff work on several occasions. In the 1970s, as head of Nader's Congress Watch group, she earned the reputation, which she agrees with, of being one of Washington's best lobbyists.

Already some in the auto industry have questioned her objectivity since she openly advocates such things as cars which are crash-worthy at 50 miles per hour.

"People can use any excuse they want to criticize," she says. "I'd rather be judged on the merits. I think I have gained a lot of respect on Capitol Hill."

The auto industry isn't the only corner for her critics. Some of Nader's people reportedly told her they'd give her three weeks to settle in — and then start their blitz.

"Ralph wouldn't be doing his job if he didn't," she says with a chuckle.

Years of fighting for change from the outside have left all of the former Nader people a bit skeptical about what they can do on the inside to change Washington.

Brazilian government calls it off

MARTIN BORMANN

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Brazilian government announced this week that it was giving up the search for the most hunted Nazi war criminal, Martin Bormann. But West Germany closed the books on Hitler's phantom deputy four years ago.

Brazil's attorney general said the Supreme Court shelved West Germany's 1967 request for Bormann's extradition because there was no evidence he was in the country.

"I didn't even know we had a request out for his extradition," said a spokesman for the West German Foreign Ministry.

Another spokesman couldn't remember who Bormann was.

In the days of the Third Reich, Bormann was the least known of Hitler's men and the most powerful. He stayed out of the limelight that Goering, Goebbels and Himmler courted. But he ran the Nazi party and through it the country, managed Hitler's private life and his fortune and was the Fuehrer's closest aide, adviser and associate.

He emerged from Hitler's shadow to become the target of a worldwide search for nearly three decades, the only one of the major war criminals arraigned at Nuernberg who could not be found. Over the years there were thousands of reports that he had been seen. They all proved false or inconclusive. An Italian monk, a Guatemalan farmer and a German emigrant to Colombia were among those mistaken for the missing man.

The most recent Bormann stir was caused by Ladislas Farago, a best-selling author and former U.S. intelligence agent. In November, 1972, in a series of newspaper articles he reported that the missing man was living in South American and had been photographed as he crossed into Argentina from Chile. An Argentine school teacher, Rudolfo Nicholas Siri, later identified himself as the man in the photograph. Siri was 54 at the time; Bormann would have been 72.

The West German government declared Bormann officially dead in 1973 after two skeletons were found during excavation of a construction site in Berlin.

Frankfurt Attorney General Horst Gauf announced: "Martin Bormann died on May 2, 1945, between 1 and 3 a.m. on the Invalidenstrasse railroad bridge in Berlin a short time after his accomplice Adolf Hitler."

Gauf said one skeleton was Bormann's, the other was that of Hitler's doctor, Ludwig Stumpfegger, who was known to have tried to break through the Russian lines with Bormann.

The attorney general reported:

The smaller skeleton was that of a man about 5 feet 7 inches tall, Bormann's height. Mended bone fractures in one arm and the collar bone matched injuries suffered by Bormann. A face reconstructed by police experts to fit the skull looked like Bormann's last photographs. Photomontages showed the skull matched Bormann's head. And the dental bridges matched impressions of Bormann's.

Gauf said glass fragments in the skulls indicated the two men committed suicide by chewing up cyanide capsules.

"The Bormann case is herewith closed," Deputy Attorney General Joachim Richter told a news conference in April 1973. "I will ask the court to lift the arrest warrant, and we will advise the Foreign Ministry that clues will no longer be investigated."

Last February an American expert, Dr. Reidar F. Sognnaes of the University of California at Los Angeles, reported he matched the Bormann skull "tooth by tooth and crown by crown" to the Nazi leader's dental charts and he believed the identification conclusive.

Richter at the 1973 news conference gave this account of Bormann's probable end:

He and six other Nazis broke out of Hitler's bunker and tried to get through the Russian lines behind a German tank on the night of May 1. The tank was hit by a Russian shell on the Wiedendammer bridge over an arm of the Spree River.

Bormann, unwounded, retreated with the others but ran into a Soviet patrol. The Russians were celebrating May Day and were in a friendly mood, not knowing who the Germans were. Bormann and Stumpfegger broke away, ran down Invalidenstrasse, found no escape route and bit into the cyanide capsules.

Hitler Youth leader Arthur Axmann reported seeing the lifeless bodies of Bormann and Stumpfegger on the Invalidenstrasse bridge about 4 a.m. on May 2, 1945. The two skeletons found in 1973 were buried 15 yards from the spot where a German postal employe reported in 1965 that the Russians had him bury two decomposing bodies on May 8, 20 years before.

Freeway phantom is back

RIVERSIDE (AP) — The phantom of the freeway is again pelting motorists with rocks from his outpost on the median strip of the Riverside Freeway — and police still don't know why.

But California Highway Patrol officer Marshall Little said Sunday that evidence indicates the phantom may be a veteran of the Special Forces in Vietnam.

Little said the phantom, who has frequently been seen but never been caught, had been absent for nearly a month by being sideswiped and apparently injured by a passing motorist in March as he sprinted onto the freeway. The motorist that hit him was not one of his targets, police said.

However, the phantom limped away from that accident and was not found.

Little said bits of evidence that have been pieced together since the phantom started accosting cars in January indicate the man was in the military.

Besides the outer trappings of the military — fatigues and combat boots — police said the phantom at one point was able to escape only because of a hastily built bamboo bridge he laid across the Santa Ana River between Corona and Anaheim. The bridge was a special type that the U.S. Special Forces in Vietnam were trained to build, Little said.

So far, Little said, the phantom has caused no major damage. A few broken mirrors and lights, and windshields.

Mexico may help western U.S. in natural gas crisis

TIJUANA, Mex. (AP) — Mexico is again being asked to help meet the shortage of natural gas in the United States, as it did during the severe winter crisis in the East, only this time for the West Coast.

After meeting privately for 45 minutes Saturday with President Jose Lopez Portillo, California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. told a news conference that Mexico's new leader is open to agreements that would funnel natural gas production from its Baja peninsula into the western United States.

"Mexico is now exploring and developing its natural gas potential and I believe it would be mutually beneficial for sales arrangements to be entered into between California and other states and the Republic of Mexico," Brown said.

"We will follow this up with discussions with the official agencies here in Mexico and our energy department and Public Utilities commission.

Brown, addressing several hundred reporters from both sides of the border at the new Baja state office building where he met with Lopez Portillo, said the Mexican president will direct officials of Pemex, the Mexican government petroleum corporation, to meet in the next few months with California officials at Sacramento.

Brown said Lopez Portillo took a hard line on the question of illegal drug traffic, castigating the United States for demanding that Mexico halt the production of marijuana and heroin poppy crops while American drug manufacturing firms pour out tons of addictive pharmaceuticals.

"We discussed the drug problem and the president expressed his commitment to do everything possible to stamp out the cultivation and transportation of illegal drugs."

"He added, however, that he felt on our part many drugs manufactured by American companies should also be curtailed in a dramatic way.

Diamond Bar girl is named coloring contest winner

Tracey Meents, an 11-year-old Diamond Bar girl, has been named grand prize winner of the Progress Bulletin's 1977 Ice Capades Coloring Contest.

Tracey, a sixth grade student at Pomona First Baptist School, will receive eight tickets to the Ice Capades at the Sports Arena in Los Angeles.

Nine other top prize winners in the contest will each receive four tickets to the Ice Capades. They are: Wendy Campbell, 10, Pomona; Trinidad Rangel, 3, Pomona; Tina Luana Ketchum, 9, Pomona; Kristine Kerivan, 9, Upland; David Van Sickle, 7, San Dimas; LeeAnn Fujimoto, 11, Claremont; Deanna Glick, 5, Ontario, and Carrie Christine Phillips, 7, Chino.

More than 400 entries were received in the contest which ran from April 3 to 18. Children entering had to color a scene with various Ice Capades characters who will be performing at the Sports Arena Tuesday to May 8.

Judging in the contest was based on artistic effect, creativity and neatness.

Dymally changes mind; to run for re-election

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally, who had said he would not run for reelection in 1978, says he has changed his mind.

Dymally, who had complained he was misunderstood by the media and unhappy with his job, had earlier said he planned to leave his state post at the end of his term and run for Congress or return to teaching.

But he said Friday night that a talk with Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has changed his mind.

Israel probes Eban funds in foreign banks

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli Treasury Department is investigating allegations that former Foreign Minister Abba Eban illegally kept thousands of dollars in foreign bank accounts, a Finance Ministry spokesman said Saturday.

Similar charges, later proven, led to the political downfall of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin two weeks ago.

The spokesman confirmed an Israel radio report that the week-old inquiry was begun after police received an anonymous letter that said Eban kept two bank accounts in New York and which included a photostat copy of a bank statement as purported evidence.

The radio quoted Eban as saying the charge was a fabrication.

But the radio report went on to say Eban had "apparently committed a technical breach of treasury regulations." It said he apparently had maintained foreign bank accounts at a time when it was easy to obtain official permission for such dealings.

The radio noted that the Treasury Department changed its policy two years ago to make it illegal in almost all instances for Israelis to keep foreign accounts.

Rabin quit as head of the ruling Labor party after his wife, Leah, was charged with maintaining two illegal bank accounts in Washington, D.C. She pleaded guilty and was fined $26,852.

Rabin, who has taken a final leave of absence from his post as prime minister, was fined $1,611 as coholder of the accounts.

Eban is expected to once again become foreign minister if the Labor party, now led by Defense Minister Shimon Peres, wins the May 17 national elections.

After meeting privately for 45 minutes Saturday with President Jose Lopez Portillo, California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. told a news conference that Mexico's new leader is open to agreements that would funnel natural gas production from its Baja peninsula into the western United States.

"Mexico is now exploring and developing its natural gas potential and I believe it would be mutually beneficial for sales arrangements to be entered into between California and other states and the Republic of Mexico," Brown said.

"We will follow this up with discussions with the official agencies here in Mexico and our energy department and Public Utilities commission.

Brown, addressing several hundred reporters from both sides of the border at the new Baja state office building where he met with Lopez Portillo, said the Mexican president will direct officials of Pemex, the Mexican government petroleum corporation, to meet in the next few months with California officials at Sacramento.

Brown said Lopez Portillo took a hard line on the question of illegal drug traffic, castigating the United States for demanding that Mexico halt the production of marijuana and heroin poppy crops while American drug manufacturing firms pour out tons of addictive pharmaceuticals.

"We discussed the drug problem and the president expressed his commitment to do everything possible to stamp out the cultivation and transportation of illegal drugs."

"He added, however, that he felt on our part many drugs manufactured by American companies should also be curtailed in a dramatic way.

Israel probes Eban funds in foreign banks

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli Treasury Department is investigating allegations that former Foreign Minister Abba Eban illegally kept thousands of dollars in foreign bank accounts, a Finance Ministry spokesman said Saturday.

Similar charges, later proven, led to the political downfall of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin two weeks ago.

The spokesman confirmed an Israel radio report that the week-old inquiry was begun after police received an anonymous letter that said Eban kept two bank accounts in New York and which included a photostat copy of a bank statement as purported evidence.

The radio quoted Eban as saying the charge was a fabrication.

But the radio report went on to say Eban had "apparently committed a technical breach of treasury regulations." It said he apparently had maintained foreign bank accounts at a time when it was easy to obtain official permission for such dealings.

The radio noted that the Treasury Department changed its policy two years ago to make it illegal in almost all instances for Israelis to keep foreign accounts.

Rabin quit as head of the ruling Labor party after his wife, Leah, was charged with maintaining two illegal bank accounts in Washington, D.C. She pleaded guilty and was fined $26,852.

Rabin, who has taken a final leave of absence from his post as prime minister, was fined $1,611 as coholder of the accounts.

Eban is expected to once again become foreign minister if the Labor party, now led by Defense Minister Shimon Peres, wins the May 17 national elections.

HUMANE SOCIETY

HUMANE WEEK — Roger Van Oordt, kennel manager at the Humane Society of Pomona Valley, places a "pink elephant" sign on the animal shelter to call attention to "Be Kind to Animals" week activities which start April 30.

'Be Kind to Animals' week activities set

The Humane Society of Pomona Valley will celebrate "Be Kind to Animals" week May 1 to 7.

During the week, pet owners are urged to give special attention to their pets. This may include a checkup by a veterinarian, professional grooming or clipping, or having the pet spayed or neutered, said Bruce Richards, executive director.

Noting a serious over-population of pets, Richards said 10,000 puppies and kittens are born every hour in the U. S., including 30 per hour in the valley. Richards said most of the unwanted pets will be surrendered to animal shelters.

"It is impossible for the society to find new homes for all of them. We strongly urge all pet owners to consider the physical and economical advantages of having their pets altered," he said.

Special activities planned includes:

—A pancake breakfast April 30 from 8:30 to 11 a.m., sponsored by the Pomona Firemen's Association. This will be held at a fire station at 590 S. Park Ave. Proceeds will be given to the humane society to assist in medical treatment of injured animals. The cost is $1 for adults and 50 cents for those under 12 years old.

—An "open house" will be held at the animal shelter, 500 Humane Way, Pomona, May 1 from noon to 4 p.m.

To help offset the daily expense of feeding more than 200 animals per day, the society is asking residents to donate unopened can and dry pet foods to the shelter, said Richards.

Yellow Cab Co. sold

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has approved the sale of the Yellow Cab Co.'s Los Angeles franchise for $550,000.

The high bidder Monday in the auction in the court of Judge Herbert Katz was Gene Maday. Asst. Los Angeles City Atty. John F. Haggerty identified Maday as a Las Vegas cab operator.

Yellow Cab has been out of business in Los Angeles since Dec. 1, when it failed to meet city insurance requirements.

In 'City Marvelous'

Rio residents view changes

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — As old-time residents of Rio de Janeiro look around the town they call the "City Marvelous" it sometimes seems as if the only famous landmarks left are Sugar Loaf and Corcovado's Statue of Christ.

Rio de Janeiro was once a leisurely city of trolley cars, sidewalk cafes, second-hand bookstores and elegant, graceful buildings of two and three stories which dated from the 18th and 19th enturies. Today all but two trolley lines have disappeared and buses belch diesel fumes in the faces of patrons of the sidewalk cafes.

A spokesman for the mayor's office, Aryton Torquato, said he estimated about 80 per cent of downtown Rio has changed completely in the last 20 years. There are no figures on the number of stately old buildings demolished and replaced by skyscrapers. But he said newspaper continually carry accounts of famous restaurants or old bookstores wiped out by the path of progress.

Replacements include the $2 million city Cathedral, a 282-foot-high structure shaped like a rounded pyramid, and the starkly modern office building which houses petrobras, Brazil's state oil monopoly.

Many famous and beautiful old buildings as well as parks have been demolished because they lie in the path of the city subway, now under construction. Subway construction has so upset life in the "City Marvelous" that it has become the theme of a television soap opera called "Two Lives." The soap opera deals with the problems of shopkeepers and apartment owners of limited resources who must move becuase of subway construction.

The path of the Rio subway most often resembles the path of low level bombers—gaping holes and piles of rubble. But in Rio, citizens shrug; something is almost always under construction and residents are used to finding streets and sidewalks blocked by boards and confusing wooden walkways that resemble a children's game or a rat maze, where once a tree lined avenue existed.

One of Rio's most famous spots was Cinelandia, where the best movie theaters were located along with sidewalk cafes and bars like the Amarelinho. Musicians, composers and singers used to gather there. It was a peaceful, popular area.

Then came the subway and Cinelandia disappeared for three years in gaping hole and jangling guitars were replaced by the thud of the pile driver.

Construction was at last completed in October 1976 and a new Cinelandia emerged. To old-time residents it's just not the same but newcomers find it a cheerful place of broad flower beds and replicas of old-fashioned street lamps. Pigeons flock there and children play.

The movie theaters continue and their customers who stop afterward for a cold beer at an outdoor cafe have an excellent view of the remaining grand old buildings on the Avenida Rio Branco, Rio's main downtown street. These are the Municipal Theater, the National Library and the Fine Arts Museum — which are lit by floodlights at night.

The fine old Palacio Monroe, a structure which served as the seat of the Federal Senate before Brasilia replaced Rio as the nation's capital, was recently demolished, however, to be replaced by a park.

Diversion project discussion is slated

The Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project and the 1977-78 school enrollment will be two of several items discussed Monday at 7:30 p.m. at a joint meeting of the Claremont school board and Claremont City Council at the district education center.

The juvenile diversion group is seeking $1 per capita in Claremont to run its program during 1977-78, and is seeking support from both the city and the school district.

The impact of new housing in northeast Claremont on school enrollment will be reported to both agencies, as well as a status report on San Antonio High School, community recreational facility needs, CETA programs, and the traffic problem on Base Line Road.

Animal fodder

Fenugreek is an herb native to central Europe and Western Asia. Its seeds are ground and used as an ingredient in curry powder, but it gets its name from the fact that in ancient Greece it was used as an animal fodder.

HUMANE SOCIETY

HUMANE WEEK — Roger Van Oordt, kennel manager at the Humane Society of Pomona Valley, places a "pink elephant" sign on the animal shelter to call attention to "Be Kind to Animals" week activities which start April 30.

'Be Kind to Animals' week activities set

The Humane Society of Pomona Valley will celebrate "Be Kind to Animals" week May 1 to 7.

During the week, pet owners are urged to give special attention to their pets. This may include a checkup by a veterinarian, professional grooming or clipping, or having the pet spayed or neutered, said Bruce Richards, executive director.

Noting a serious overpopulation of pets, Richards said 10,000 puppies and kittens are born every hour in the U. S., including 30 per hour in the valley. Richards said most of the unwanted pets will be surrendered to animal shelters.

"It is impossible for the society to find new homes for all of them. We strongly urge all pet owners to consider the physical and economical advantages of having their pets altered," he said.

Special activities planned includes:

—A pancake breakfast April 30 from 8:30 to 11 a.m., sponsored by the Pomona Firemen's Association. This will be held at a fire station at 590 S. Park Ave. Proceeds will be given to the humane society to assist in medical treatment of injured animals. The cost is $1 for adults and 50 cents for those under 12 years old.

—An "open house" will be held at the animal shelter, 500 Humane Way, Pomona, May 1 from noon to 4 p.m.

To help offset the daily expense of feeding more than 200 animals per day, the society is asking residents to donate unopened can and dry pet foods to the shelter, said Richards.

Yellow Cab Co. sold

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has approved the sale of the Yellow Cab Co.'s Los Angeles franchise for $550,000.

The high bidder Monday in the auction in the court of Judge Herbert Katz was Gene Maday. Asst. Los Angeles City Atty. John F. Haggerty identified Maday as a Las Vegas cab operator.

Yellow Cab has been out of business in Los Angeles since Dec. 1, when it failed to meet city insurance requirements.

In 'City Marvelous'

Rio residents view changes

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — As old-time residents of Rio de Janeiro look around the town they call the "City Marvelous" it sometimes seems as if the only famous landmarks left are Sugar Loaf and Corcovado's Statue of Christ.

Rio de Janeiro was once a leisurely city of trolley cars, sidewalk cafes, second-hand bookstores and elegant, graceful buildings of two and three stories which dated from the 18th and 19th enturies. Today all but two trolley lines have disappeared and buses belch diesel fumes in the faces of patrons of the sidewalk cafes.

A spokesman for the mayor's office, Aryton Torquato, said he estimated about 80 per cent of downtown Rio has changed completely in the last 20 years. There are no figures on the number of stately old buildings demolished and replaced by skyscrapers. But he said newspaper continually carry accounts of famous restaurants or old bookstores wiped out by the path of progress.

Replacements include the $2 million city Cathedral, a 282-foot-high structure shaped like a rounded pyramid, and the starkly modern office building which houses petrobras, Brazil's state oil monopoly.

Many famous and beautiful old buildings as well as parks have been demolished because they lie in the path of the city subway, now under construction. Subway construction has so upset life in the "City Marvelous" that it has become the theme of a television soap opera called "Two Lives." The soap opera deals with the problems of shopkeepers and apartment owners of limited resources who must move becuase of subway construction.

The path of the Rio subway most often resembles the path of low level bombers—gaping holes and piles of rubble. But in Rio, citizens shrug; something is almost always under construction and residents are used to finding streets and sidewalks blocked by boards and confusing wooden walkways that resemble a children's game or a rat maze, where once a tree lined avenue existed.

One of Rio's most famous spots was Cinelandia, where the best movie theaters were located along with sidewalk cafes and bars like the Amarelinho. Musicians, composers and singers used to gather there. It was a peaceful, popular area.

Then came the subway and Cinelandia disappeared for three years in gaping hole and jangling guitars were replaced by the thud of the pile driver.

Construction was at last completed in October 1976 and a new Cinelandia emerged. To old-time residents it's just not the same but newcomers find it a cheerful place of broad flower beds and replicas of old-fashioned street lamps. Pigeons flock there and children play.

The movie theaters continue and their customers who stop afterward for a cold beer at an outdoor cafe have an excellent view of the remaining grand old buildings on the Avenida Rio Branco, Rio's main downtown street. These are the Municipal Theater, the National Library and the Fine Arts Museum — which are lit by floodlights at night.

The fine old Palacio Monroe, a structure which served as the seat of the Federal Senate before Brasilia replaced Rio as the nation's capital, was recently demolished, however, to be replaced by a park.

Many reminders of the Drs. Mayo

It's the medical mecca of the world: Rochester, Minn.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Miami has its beaches, New York City the Empire State Building and the United Nations. Hollywood has its stars and Anaheim has Disneyland. But what about Rochester, Minn., population 60,000, which attracts some 300,000 visitors annually? It's the medical mecca of the world, and almost every place you look, there are reminders of the Drs. Mayo.

By GALE TOLLIN
Associated Press Writer

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Where else can a hotel guest dial room service for an enema?

Or order up a nurse to get you ready for a medical examination?

Or choose from a "low fat" or "salt free" option on the hotel menu?

Only in Rochester, Minn., home of the Mayo Clinic, the world's largest private hospital, renowned for its life-saving capabilities, somehow or other larger than the city of 60,000 it inhabits.

Other cities may rely on conventions or golf courses or bathing beaches. Rochester has none of these of tourist appeal. But the $180-million Mayo Clinic draws a quarter-of-a-million visitors from all over the world each year. Not only the sick, but their families as well.

There are more than 3,500 hotel and motel rooms, and some 22 tourist or guest homes. Rates range from $3 to $100 a day. Three airlines operate more than 50 flights a day. They land at an all-weather airport, managed by a Mayo Clinic subsidiary. Total for the year: 320,000 passengers.

Less visible differences include the fact that Rochester has avoided the financial and social ills affecting many other cities, and it doesn't know the meaning of financial insolvency.

Unemployment in February was only 3 per cent compared with 6.7 per cent for the state and 7.5 per cent for the nation. Per capita indebtedness is only $85, and, says Mayor Alex Smekta, "If we don't build any new schools in the next four years, we'll be free of bonded indebtedness in the city.

"For $15 a month, the Rochester taxpayer gets police and fire protection, library services, streets, clean water and a fine recreation program," he says.

The clinic was founded in the early 1900s by two brothers, Drs. Will and Charles Mayo.

Without it, says Charles H. Withers, editor of the Rochester Post-Bulletin, the city would be "only a wide spot in the road."

While Rochester has 70 manufacturing firms and is by no means a one-business town, medicine is No. 1. The medical complex employs more than 10,000 people. IBM, which came to Rochester in 1956, has 5,000 employes.

"Over half of Rochester's families are supported directly by the medical complex," says Odean "Gunn" Erickson, president of the Chamber of Commerce and a Mayo controller.

The Mayo Graduate School of Medicine and the new Mayo Medical School have about 1,000 students.

Erickson says professionals, including the Mayo M.D.'s and the IBM Ph.D.'s, lend a cosmopolitan aura beyond that normally found in a city this size. He says it's part of what attracts people and keeps them.

"A lot of physicians now seem to be glad to get out of large cities where there are problems with crime, traffic and pollution," says Dr. Emmerson Ward, director of the Mayo Foundation development program.

"They maybe came with an idea that Rochester wouldn't be much of a place in which to live, but after three or four years they find it a pretty nice place, after all."

ARRIVING VISITORS — An elderly couple carefully prepare to cross a street in Rochester, Minn., beside one of the city's "curb cuts." Such provisions are what make the medical community famous the world over and attracts thousands to the special care.

Something more than a guest column

EDITOR'S NOTE: Amy Pett edits the weekly Port Washington, N.Y., News. Her father writes for The Associated Press. One day recently, in her absence she was busy with other things, her father offered a guest column to her paper as a gift. We reprint it here as a glimpse into the secret diary fathers keep.

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

Although he has long been a professional writer, the father of the bride is nervous writing here in his daughter's place. Understandably. The last time he wrote about Amy Pett she complained bitterly about invasion of her privacy. Understandably. There is no privacy like the privacy of an intense, imaginative, sensitive lady crowding the age of 12. She never forgave him.

But now both are older and she is wiser and knows that columns are not easy to come by and, perhaps, she will forgive this one, the least her father could do in lieu of a big catered bash at some chandeliered hall.

At any rate, Amy and Mike are honeymooning as you read this. They were married Sunday in Port Washington, N.Y., in what has come to be known in these days of horrendous inflation as a small but tasteful affair.

Please don't be offended if you weren't invited. The huge majority of her friends and fans weren't. Look at it this way, a father's way: So many from her side, a precisely equal number from the groom's. Since she edits and writes the Port Washington News and Mike writes for Newsday, which has the largest suburban circulation in America, what's a poor father to do? The guest list had to be pruned, ruthlessly.

Although she has probably told her readers more about herself than any columnist in the Western Hemisphere, could you indulge a father talking about his first-born on this, her wedding day?

Amy Jane Pett, editor, columnist, concerned citizen, a one-woman conglomerate of the human spirit, was born on an icy night in January in Michael Reese Hospital on the southside of Chicago. That was the first Michael in her life.

She made her debut in journalism at the age of 8 as the founder and publisher of "The Adams Ave. News," an uneven but spirited collation of split-level developments in a New Jersey suburb featuring a clipped style and such unassailable bulletins as: "The Overaths now have six daughters and they're all girls." The entire circulation area also read with dread a regular department titled: "Hurts & Diseases."

Her unofficial motto was to print all the news she could dictate and her father could type, with six carbons. Her sometime editorial staff consisted of one Eddie Kleinhanz, a young gentleman even then in the throes of an identity crisis, who couldn't decide whether he wanted to be a four-star reporter or the five-star commander of a guerrilla force then stalking the neighborhood lots. Nonetheless, Amy never missed a deadline. She was then, as she is now, determined.

The second Michael in Amy's life appeared at a time when she was approaching a round 12 and he, a four-foot square of solid rock removed from an adolescent Mt. Rushmore. He materialized one night at our front door, announcing in no uncertain terms that he was taking our daughter to the school square dance. He wore a navy pea jacket.

It being Amy's first date, her family was determined to make it as easy as possible. Her father had planned to discuss Bobby Thompson's epic home run to put the young man at ease. Totally unnecessary. Michael had decided to put her father at ease by discussing such manly topics as the stock market.

Anyway, as far as anyone could learn, the evening proved a success. As necessity would have it a few days later, father was desperate for something to write about and he wrote about Amy's first date. As bad luck would have it, the piece appeared in the local paper. As worse luck would have it, a teacher chose to read it aloud to Amy and her class.

Amy was devastated, and I was forever bent with guilt.

Later, there was a third Michael, a serious young man who returned with Amy from a small progressive college in New England and, as I recall, expounded over dinner on the general theme of a suspected incestuous relationship between Romeo and Juliet. Or was it that Hiawatha was basically a red-skinned Uncle Tom in the pay of the white imperialists?

And now, and we kid no more, there is The Michael. A tender delight to his bride and her parents. And Amy? What can I say that you don't know? A young woman of substance and feeling, a source of pride for her father and mother, a citizen of concerns with a surprising eye and ear, with a spontaneity and a passion for life that time does not dare diminish. So, go, Michael. Go, Amy. Go in love.

AMY AND MIKE — Amy and Mike Unger, recently married, pose at home in Port Washington, N.Y. Amy, daughter of AP Special Correspondent Saul Pett, made her debut in journalism at age 8.

Navrozov, known in Russia as an underground writer and scholar, refers to himself as "an absolutely unattached and fiercely uncommitted thinker," very much opposed to the Communist regime in the Soviet Union. After immigrating to the United States, he published the first of a seven-book series, "The Education of Lev Navrozov," that describes Russia.

Between speaking engagements, Navrozov is touring the country, starring in his one-actor play, "Welcome to Soviet America." For further information concerning the free public lecture persons may call: 626-8511.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Amy Pett edits the weekly Port Washington, N.Y., News. Her father writes for The Associated Press. One day recently, in her absence she was busy with other things, her father offered a guest column to her paper as a gift. We reprint it here as a glimpse into the secret diary fathers keep.

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

Although he has long been a professional writer, the father of the bride is nervous writing here in his daughter's place. Understandably. The last time he wrote about Amy Pett she complained bitterly about invasion of her privacy. Understandably. There is no privacy like the privacy of an intense, imaginative, sensitive lady crowding the age of 12. She never forgave him.

But now both are older and she is wiser and knows that columns are not easy to come by and, perhaps, she will forgive this one, the least her father could do in lieu of a big catered bash at some chandeliered hall.

At any rate, Amy and Mike are honeymooning as you read this. They were married Sunday in Port Washington, N.Y., in what has come to be known in these days of horrendous inflation as a small but tasteful affair.

Please don't be offended if you weren't invited. The huge majority of her friends and fans weren't. Look at it this way, a father's way: So many from her side, a precisely equal number from the groom's. Since she edits and writes the Port Washington News and Mike writes for Newsday, which has the largest suburban circulation in America, what's a poor father to do? The guest list had to be pruned, ruthlessly.

Although she has probably told her readers more about herself than any columnist in the Western Hemisphere, could you indulge a father talking about his first-born on this, her wedding day?

Amy Jane Pett, editor, columnist, concerned citizen, a one-woman conglomerate of the human spirit, was born on an icy night in January in Michael Reese Hospital on the southside of Chicago. That was the first Michael in her life.

She made her debut in journalism at the age of 8 as the founder and publisher of "The Adams Ave. News," an uneven but spirited collation of split-level developments in a New Jersey suburb featuring a clipped style and such unassailable bulletins as: "The Overaths now have six daughters and they're all girls." The entire circulation area also read with dread a regular department titled: "Hurts & Diseases."

Her unofficial motto was to print all the news she could dictate and her father could type, with six carbons. Her sometime editorial staff consisted of one Eddie Kleinhanz, a young gentleman even then in the throes of an identity crisis, who couldn't decide whether he wanted to be a four-star reporter or the five-star commander of a guerrilla force then stalking the neighborhood lots. Nonetheless, Amy never missed a deadline. She was then, as she is now, determined.

The second Michael in Amy's life appeared at a time when she was approaching a round 12 and he, a four-foot square of solid rock removed from an adolescent Mt. Rushmore. He materialized one night at our front door, announcing in no uncertain terms that he was taking our daughter to the school square dance. He wore a navy pea jacket.

It being Amy's first date, her family was determined to make it as easy as possible. Her father had planned to discuss Bobby Thompson's epic home run to put the young man at ease. Totally unnecessary. Michael had decided to put her father at ease by discussing such manly topics as the stock market.

Anyway, as far as anyone could learn, the evening proved a success. As necessity would have it a few days later, father was desperate for something to write about and he wrote about Amy's first date. As bad luck would have it, the piece appeared in the local paper. As worse luck would have it, a teacher chose to read it aloud to Amy and her class.

Amy was devastated, and I was forever bent with guilt.

Later, there was a third Michael, a serious young man who returned with Amy from a small progressive college in New England and, as I recall, expounded over dinner on the general theme of a suspected incestuous relationship between Romeo and Juliet. Or was it that Hiawatha was basically a red-skinned Uncle Tom in the pay of the white imperialists?

And now, and we kid no more, there is The Michael. A tender delight to his bride and her parents. And Amy? What can I say that you don't know? A young woman of substance and feeling, a source of pride for her father and mother, a citizen of concerns with a surprising eye and ear, with a spontaneity and a passion for life that time does not dare diminish. So, go, Michael. Go, Amy. Go in love.

On campus

CITRUS COLLEGE cosmetology students will sponsor a 24-hour muscular dystrophy fund-raising drive April 29 and 30.

Students will exchange their hair-cutting service for donations to the Muscular Dystrophy Fund and will also sponsor a 24-hour dance marathon, all proceeds going to the cause.

Each event will be held in the college Student Center and will begin at 6 p.m., April 29 and continue until 6 p.m. the next day.

The customary service fees will not be in effect during the cut-a-thon. Patrons may donate to the Muscular Dystrophy Fund as they see fit, however.

The entry fee to the dance marathon is 50 cents.

For further information, persons may call the Citrus College Cosmetology Department at (213) 335-1234.

Sessions are beginning in 24 classes for senior citizens offered this spring by MT. SAN ANTONIO COLLEGE'S adult education office.

Registration takes place in the classroom at the first meeting attended. The 10-week courses are held in the morning and early afternoon hours at the Church of the Brethren and the Community Center in La Verne; the library and Community Center in San Dimas, and the First Presbyterian Church, Pilgrim Congregational Church, Mt. San Antonio Gardens, and Palomares Community Center in Pomona.

Classes include communications, conversational German and Spanish, beginning and advanced French, techniques of writing short stories, writing and marketing the short story, psychology of behavior in later life, nutrition and exercise, physical education, leadership, drawing, painting, design crafts, literature of the Bible, the vehicle, detective fiction and the techniques of genealogical research.

A complete schedule of class locations and time may be obtained by calling the adult education office, 598-2811, ext. 321.

CHAFFEY COLLEGE will offer an off-campus 10-hour spring program for school bus drivers seeking to renew their driver certificates.

The six-hour classroom requirement can be met by attending two 7 to 10 p.m. sessions in the Upland High School cafeteria, one on April 27, and the other on May 2.

For those persons needing four more hours of the program, a session will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on May 5.

Participation in the program is limited to school bus drivers whose certificates expire on June 30. Chaffey College transportation supervisor Ray Bailey will be the instructor.

Registration will be at the first class session Wednesday. Additional information on the tuition-free program may be obtained by calling Bailey at 987-1737, ext. 256.

Russian novelist Lev Navrozov will speak on "How Western Democracies Can Survive in an Age of War Societies," Wednesday.

The lecture, sponsored by Scripps Association for the Study of Freedom, will begin at 4 p.m. in the Humanities Auditorium, SCRIPPS COLLEGE.

Navrozov, known in Russia as an underground writer and scholar, refers to himself as "an absolutely unattached and fiercely uncommitted thinker," very much opposed to the Communist regime in the Soviet Union. After immigrating to the United States, he published the first of a seven-book series, "The Education of Lev Navrozov," that describes Russia.

Between speaking engagements, Navrozov is touring the country, starring in his one-actor play, "Welcome to Soviet America." For further information concerning the free public lecture persons may call: 626-8511.

To many people around the world

President Carter is still a political oddity without label

EDITOR'S NOTE: Next Friday, Jimmy Carter will have served the first 100 days of his presidency. This article, based on reports from AP correspondents around the world, tells what people abroad are saying about him as this traditional milestone nears.

By THOMAS FENTON
Associated Press Writer

Even as he approaches 100 days in office, President Carter is still a puzzle for many people around the world, a political oddity without a label, an object of both praise and alarm. A survey by Associated Press correspondents abroad showed Carter has evoked controversy with his support for human rights, his handling of arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union and his commitment to stop the spread of nuclear weapons — all major issues of his administration, which will be 100 days old next Friday.

The British, traditional allies, hailed Carter's appeal for human rights, but criticized the U.S. administration's handling of the arms control talks in Moscow and for its refusal to pressure the Port Authority of New York to give landing rights to the British-French Concorde supersonic jetliner.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France has said the barring of Concorde from New York would have "political consequences," but the French in general have praised Carter on his human rights stand. Some cautioned it could have pitfalls, however.

"Waving the flag of liberty to attack the Soviet regime, Jimmy Carter risks exacerbating hostile feelings with the Kremlin leaders," said the newspaper Le Matin de Paris.

The Lisbon newspaper A Capital said Carter "has managed to: exasperate the Soviet Union, irritate Argentina and Brazil, inspire dissident Russians and alarm disarmament campaigners."

But Prof. Yoshimitsu Ide of Tsukuba University in Japan maintained that Carter was only bringing back "an American tradition since the founding of the republic" when he linked human rights to U.S. foreign policy.

"It is only natural to think that Carter's diplomacy of human rights is dangerous enough to invite the antagonism of the nations concerned because it is 'naive and interventionistic'," Prof. Ide wrote in the newspaper Yomiuri. "This is true especially at the present time when there are many who think Carter is ruralistic, religious and moralistic and cannot understand the complex framework of the present world."

After the Soviet Union rejected the Carter proposals for arms limitations, the newspaper Tages-Anzeiber of Switzerland wrote: "Seldom has the big power prestige of the Soviet Union been challenged in a more amateurish way."

One Moscow resident said, "Carter is the cowboy in the White House. He is not a diplomat. He has not been in Washington. This shows what happens when a man who has been a peanut farmer tries to be President of the United States."

Soviet leaders have watched Carter warily. They avoided direct criticism during the early days of his administration, but on March 31 Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko told a news conference that "everything said about human rights by the United States ... hurts the political atmosphere for discussions of other issues, including arms limitations."

Carter's approach to diplomacy has caused some confusion in Israel. Defense minister Shimon Peres, the strongest possibility for prime minister after the May 17 elections, said one of his top priorities would be "political negotiations with a new U.S. administration, of whose intentions we know little."

Local students advocate continuing 'death penalty'

Students taking part in the Progress Bulletin-VEC School Program say the United States should keep the death penalty as a means of dealing with certain crimes.

The students were among more than 190,000 young people across the nation who participated in what is believed to be the largest student opinion poll ever conducted.

The poll asked the question: "Should capital punishment be abolished in our nation?" Local students responded with a "No." Their response revealed that 59.7 per cent of the students felt that capital punishment should be retained, while 28 per cent said it should be abolished, and 12.3 per cent remained undecided or offered no opinion.

The local service is used by students in 46 schools in Pomona, Walnut, Claremont, Ontario and Montclair.

The local student response verified the response of students across the nation who participated in the survey. Of the 190,488 students who answered the poll question, 107,756 — or 56.6 per cent — said that capital punishment should not be abolished. Another 58,776 students, representing 30.8 per cent of the participants, voted to end the death penalty; 23,956 were undecided or offered no opinion on the question.

The student poll on capital punishment was conducted by the Progress Bulletin, along with nearly 300 other daily newspapers throughout the United States that provide a weekly current events program to their area schools. The Progress bulletin provides local schools with the VEC School Program, a timely news filmstrip program, which brings current events materials into the classrooms early each week. The materials cover news events and issues that were in the headlines just days before.

The filmstrip program uses lively news wirephotos, editorial cartoons, graphs and maps to bring the most current news events and issues to students for their discussion and analysis. Schools taking part in the program receive 35 news filmstrips and accompanying guides throughout the school year. In addition, each participating school receives 10 filmstrip studies during the year. The studies cover in depth many of the important continuing news events and issues of the year.

The student opinion poll question concerning capital punishment appeared in the VEC School Program materials less than two weeks after the execution of Gary Gilmore. Last January, Gilmore became the first person to be executed since the Supreme Court ruled on the constitutionality of the death penalty 10 years ago. The students learned about the arguments for and against capital punishment through provocative discussion materials designed to encourage their critical anaylsis of the subject. They were asked to examine their own reactions to the Gilmore execution as well as to the High Court ruling on the death penalty.

Regionally, the poll results seemed to bear out the nationwide response. Students in western states, however, gave the most emphatic support to retaining the death penalty. They voted 58.7 per cent to 28.7 per cent to keep capital punishment. Not surprisingly, the greatest vote in favor of the death penalty came from the state of Utah, where 80 per cent of the 1,316 responses rejected abolition of capital punishment. Utah was the state in which Gilmore was executed.

Students in the South and the Midwest most closely paralleled the nationwide response. In the South, students voted against abolishing the death penalty 56.8 per cent to 30.3 per cent. Students in eastern states voted to retain capital punishment 55 per cent to 34.5 per cent.

The student poll results contrast markedly with those of a 1972 student survey conducted by VEC on the same question. The 1972 results showed that students across the nation were almost evenly split on whether or not capital punishment should be abolished. At that time the "yes" votes held a slight edge over the "no" votes: 44.9 per cent of the students said the death penalty should be abolished, while 44.3 per cent said it should be retained, and 10.8 per cent were undecided.

The response to this year's poll was more than double that of 1972, when 91,412 students participated.

Young writer earns laudits

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Young, black and gifted Judi Ann Mason has written eight plays, worked with Norman Lear on a television series and become the first person to win a national writing award twice.

Imagine what she could do with her own typewriter.

Her latest effort on a borrowed machine, "A Star Ain't Nothin' But a Hole in Heaven," won this year's American College Theater Festival national playwriting competition — making her the first repeat winner in the festival's nine-year history.

She also won the Norman Lear comedy writing award in 1975 for "Livin' Fat," which enabled her to work on several scripts for Lear's "Good Times" TV series.

So far, all of the 22-year-old's works have dealt with rural blacks in the South and have come from her personal experience, growing up in Elm Grove, La., and becoming an orphan at age 15.

I don't feel able to write about other races yet," she says. "I don't want to misrepresent anyone. I have dedicated myself to showing people that the South is beautiful. I want to show the rest of the nation that everyone here is not a pig farmer."

"Livin' Fat," which has been performed off-Broadway by the Negro Ensemble Company in New York, is about a black family that was left with a large sum of money.

It is set in Bossier City, the northwest Louisiana town where Miss Mason attended high school after her father died when she was 15. Her mother had died seven years earlier.

"A Star Ain't Nothing But a Hole in Heaven" deals with a 17-year Louisiana orphan girl's decision about attending college in Ohio. It is set in Elm Grove.

That play is scheduled to be performed at the Back Alley Theater in Washington.

Despite her success, Miss Mason says she is in no hurry to leave Louisiana and hasn't even decided whether to continue playwriting as a career. She has a double major in journalism and drama and is considering graduate school.

Whatever the future holds for her, one thing is sure. Any more plays will be written on her own typewriter.

Carter's days —

recently, Egypt looked more favorably toward Carter, but other Arabs express misgivings. Saudi Arabia's government has shown some dismay about Carter's Middle East policy and Crown Prince Fahd was quoted as saying this month that another Arab-Israeli war is likely if momentum toward a peace settlement is frozen.

"Carter still lacks a clear Middle East vision," said a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization. "All he has been doing so far is to put out trial balloons to help him formulate a definite U.S. policy on the Arab-Israeli conflict."

In southern Africa, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Andrew Young, has received greater attention, but the minister of information for South Africa's apartheid government, Connie Mulder, recently assailed Carter in Parliament.

"President Carter should be cautious in order not to go down in history as the man who had lost the case for the West by busying himself with high moral issues while Russia was concentrating on practical things," he said.

A spokesman for the white minority government of Rhodesia said: "Jimmy Carter is a man of undoubted ability, but the litmus test of his leadership will be the career of Andrew Young and the other ignorant crusaders now coming into, conflict with the pragmatic attitude of old hands like (Secretary of State) Cyrus Vance.

Military governments in Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay and Paraguay all have rejected Carter's policy of tying human rights to military aid and intervention in their own internal affairs.

But since Carter's election thousands of persons regarded as political prisoners have been freed from South American jails.

'Easy' border truce reached

Norwegian reindeer herds unrestrained by Red rule

EDITOR'S NOTE: Some 200 miles above the Arctic Circle, Norway and Russia's Kola Peninsula meet. Although they don't share Russia's political ideologies, the people of Kirkenes occasionally cross the border for cultural enrichment. Of course, they need the proper papers. But now there is a segment of the population that needs no documents and can pass freely — but only in winter.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

KIRKENES, Norway (AP) — The Soviet Union and Norway have just concluded an agreement allowing hundreds to freely cross their common Arctic border without ID cards, visas or passports.

All they need is their earlobes properly notched.

The hundreds happen to be reindeer who each winter wander into Russia when the snow drifts higher than the threedeep rows of barbed-wire Soviet security fences.

"We have worked for five years to get this agreement," says Col. Finn Roemsey, Norwegian chairman of the border commission, who meets once a month with his Soviet counterpart to down a few vodkas and discuss common problems. "Our reindeer herders can now cross into Russia on snow scooters with members of my staff to lasso their strays. Ear notches identify the different herds."

Some 200 miles above the Arctic Circle, Norway curves around the top of Finland to form a 122-mile border with Russia's strategic and heavily fortified Kola Peninsula.

Norway does not permit stationing of foreign troops on its soil in peacetime or stockpiling of nuclear weapons. Norway keeps its cool even cooler by not allowing NATO exercises or allied military aircraft or naval ships near the Soviet border.

Kirkenes, a iron mining frontier town with 5,000 people and, in the vicinity, 10,000 reindeer, always has had a cultural and economic affinity to Russia. Oslo, Norway's capital, is 2,000 miles away. But Murmansk, with its opera, ballet, soccer stadium and hockey rink, is only two hours by train. Nikel, the Soviet nickle mining town six times as big as Kirkenes, is just across the Pasvik River.

"Our citizens go there on bus trips several times a year," says Kirkenes Mayor Arnt Isksen, "but no tourists come here from Russia."

On formal occasions, like a big Communist holiday or "liberation day," celebrating the arrival of the Red Army to end the German occupation of World War II, Mayor Isaksen goes to Nikel to exchange toasts with his counterpart. Behind his desk is a hammer and sickle pennant, a memento of his last visit.

Before World War II, when the border was open, people regularly went back and forth to visit, shop, tend reindeer and get married, which accounts for the Russian, Lapp and Finnish names in the phone book.

The Soviet side of the border is patrolled by frontier guards from the ministry of the interior, but the Red Army in great strength is not far away. "We sometimes see their tanks on maneuvers, and at night we see the gun flashes from the firing ranges," says Col. Roemsey.

According to London's International Institute for Strategic Studies, the Soviet Union has two motorized divisions and a marine amphibious infantry regiment on the Kola Peninsula, in addition to 175 submarines, 60 major surface ships and 300 bombers and interceptors. Against this, the Norwegians have the crack South Varanger Brigade, with about 700 men, all on skis but with snowmobile and helicopter support, 15 coastal submarines, five frigates and 40 fast torpedo boats equipped with penguin surface-to-surface missiles.

The Norwegians say there have been very few border incidents over the years.

The streets of Kirkenes are illuminated by electricity bought from the Russian power plant across the river, which was built by Norwegian contractors to fit into the local grid system.

Town folk living on the high ground regularly pick up Russian TV. "Hero workers, ballet, soccer and exciting hockey games," Col. Roemsey says of the Soviet fare.

The reindeer agreement, delicately negotiated, is a fair example of how the cold peace is maintained in what could be a very hot corner of the globe. Since the Russian Revolution, the population of the Kola Peninsula has increased from 14,300 to 820,000, due as much to its strategic position along the only open and ice-free passage, to the Atlantic Ocean as to the lucrative mining and fishing.

Relations are cordial, but the Norwegians never forget that it is a closed border, that there are Lapp families who haven't seen their friends and relatives on the Soviet side in decades, that the rows of barbed wire begin on Russian soil and are meant to keep people in as well as out.

"People here," says Hans Jacobsen, the only reporter on the South Vananger Avis, the thrice-weekly newspaper, "remember the morning in 1968 when Russian tanks by the hundreds rolled up to the border and aimed their guns on us. It was a warning to NATO not to interfere in the Czech uprising. A show of strength, an ugly one, but the Norwegian units stayed in place."

COOL BUT CORDIAL — Some 200 miles above the Artic circle, two Norwegian border patrol soldiers peer across part of the 122-mile border Norway shares with the U.S.S.R.'s Kola Peninsula. The peninsula is strategically important to Russia and heavily fortified. Russian forces in the area outnumber Norwegian forces about 15 to 1. But relations across the border are cordial, and there's practical cooperation to help things along.

'Easy' border truce reached

Norwegian reindeer herds unrestrained by Red rule

EDITOR'S NOTE: Some 200 miles above the Arctic Circle, Norway and Russia's Kola Peninsula meet. Although they don't share Russia's political ideologies, the people of Kirkenes occasionally cross the border for cultural enrichment. Of course, they need the proper papers. But now there is a segment of the population that needs no documents and can pass freely — but only in winter.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

KIRKENES, Norway (AP) — The Soviet Union and Norway have just concluded an agreement allowing hundreds to freely cross their common Arctic border without ID cards, visas or passports.

All they need is their earlobes properly notched.

The hundreds happen to be reindeer who each winter wander into Russia when the snow drifts higher than the threedeep rows of barbed-wire Soviet security fences.

"We have worked for five years to get this agreement," says Col. Finn Roemsey, Norwegian chairman of the border commission, who meets once a month with his Soviet counterpart to down a few vodkas and discuss common problems. "Our reindeer herders can now cross into Russia on snow scooters with members of my staff to lasso their strays. Ear notches identify the different herds."

Some 200 miles above the Arctic Circle, Norway curves around the top of Finland to form a 122-mile border with Russia's strategic and heavily fortified Kola Peninsula.

Norway does not permit stationing of foreign troops on its soil in peacetime or stockpiling of nuclear weapons. Norway keeps its cool even cooler by not allowing NATO exercises or allied military aircraft or naval ships near the Soviet border.

Kirkenes, a iron mining frontier town with 5,000 people and, in the vicinity, 10,000 reindeer, always has had a cultural and economic affinity to Russia. Oslo, Norway's capital, is 2,000 miles away. But Murmansk, with its opera, ballet, soccer stadium and hockey rink, is only two hours by train. Nikel, the Soviet nickle mining town six times as big as Kirkenes, is just across the Pasvik River.

"Our citizens go there on bus trips several times a year," says Kirkenes Mayor Arnt Isksen, "but no tourists come here from Russia."

On formal occasions, like a big Communist holiday or "liberation day," celebrating the arrival of the Red Army to end the German occupation of World War II, Mayor Isaksen goes to Nikel to exchange toasts with his counterpart. Behind his desk is a hammer and sickle pennant, a memento of his last visit.

Before World War II, when the border was open, people regularly went back and forth to visit, shop, tend reindeer and get married, which accounts for the Russian, Lapp and Finnish names in the phone book.

The Soviet side of the border is patrolled by frontier guards from the ministry of the interior, but the Red Army in great strength is not far away. "We sometimes see their tanks on maneuvers, and at night we see the gun flashes from the firing ranges," says Col. Roemsey.

According to London's International Institute for Strategic Studies, the Soviet Union has two motorized divisions and a marine amphibious infantry regiment on the Kola Peninsula, in addition to 175 submarines, 60 major surface ships and 300 bombers and interceptors. Against this, the Norwegians have the crack South Varanger Brigade, with about 700 men, all on skis but with snowmobile and helicopter support, 15 coastal submarines, five frigates and 40 fast torpedo boats equipped with penguin surface-to-surface missiles.

The Norwegians say there have been very few border incidents over the years.

The streets of Kirkenes are illuminated by electricity bought from the Russian power plant across the river, which was built by Norwegian contractors to fit into the local grid system.

Town folk living on the high ground regularly pick up Russian TV. "Hero workers, ballet, soccer and exciting hockey games," Col. Roemsey says of the Soviet fare.

The reindeer agreement, delicately negotiated, is a fair example of how the cold peace is maintained in what could be a very hot corner of the globe. Since the Russian Revolution, the population of the Kola Peninsula has increased from 14,300 to 820,000, due as much to its strategic position along the only open and ice-free passage, to the Atlantic Ocean as to the lucrative mining and fishing.

Relations are cordial, but the Norwegians never forget that it is a closed border, that there are Lapp families who haven't seen their friends and relatives on the Soviet side in decades, that the rows of barbed wire begin on Russian soil and are meant to keep people in as well as out.

"People here," says Hans Jacobsen, the only reporter on the South Vananger Avis, the thrice-weekly newspaper, "remember the morning in 1968 when Russian tanks by the hundreds rolled up to the border and aimed their guns on us. It was a warning to NATO not to interfere in the Czech uprising. A show of strength, an ugly one, but the Norwegian units stayed in place."

COOL BUT CORDIAL — Some 200 miles above the Artic circle, two Norwegian border patrol soldiers peer across part of the 122-mile border Norway shares with the U.S.S.R.'s Kola Peninsula. The peninsula is strategically important to Russia and heavily fortified. Russian forces in the area outnumber Norwegian forces about 15 to 1. But relations across the border are cordial, and there's practical cooperation to help things along.

Second screen set for drive-in

The Mt. Baldy Drive-in in La Verne is going to get a second screen, even if it does obstruct the view of the mountains for some, because the city wants free land.

A request by John Forte, manager of the theater, squeaked through the City Council by a 3-2 margin this week.

Forte told the council that if the request was approved he would donate the necessary land to the city to realign White Avenue so it meets Fruit Street at Foothill Boulevard.

White Avenue ends at Foothill right now and a jog to the west allows traffic to continue north on Fruit Street.

The council wants to eliminate the jog so that when the Foothill Freeway is completed there can be a continuous flow to a proposed ramp there.

Steve Jones, an attorney for the Villa La Verne Homeowners Association, urged the council to deny Forte's request not only because it would block the view of some residents, but also because it would bring more traffic and noise to the neighborhood.

But Councilman Melvin Belcher pointed out that the second screen would be 25 per cent smaller than the one already there, and Councilman Alan Mackay recalled that the city has been planning the realignment for a number of years.

Councilman Frank Johnson said he was opposed to the project because the freeway and the realignment were a long way off. And Councilman Robert Neher objected to the request because he felt the visual impact of the second screen will be "a lot worse than we can imagine."

The tie was broken by Mayor Mike Morales.

For floating feeling, try the 'Dead Sea'

EIN GEDI, Israel (AP) — Swimming in the Dead Sea produces the otherworldly sensation of floating in an astronaut's zero-gravity chamber. Due to high concentrations of minerals, the human body floats in the Dead Sea.

When walking into it, you reach a point — usually when you are between waist and chest deep — when buoyancy sweeps your feet to the surface. Sun worshippers simply prop their hands behind their heads and soak up the rays with almost no distractions, except a hardy breed of flies.

For tourists in Israel, a visit to the 500-square-mile Dead Sea is as essential as going to the top of the Empire State Building is in New York. Apart from its quirky swimming qualities, the Dead Sea is the lowest point on earth, lying 1,292 feet below sea level. It is part of the great Jordan rift that cleaves the earth from Syria to southeast Africa.

A head-first plunge is definitely not the best way to experience this natural phenomenon since the salt level is 10 times greater than the open seas. Most bathers enter cautiously, trying not to splash water above the neck.

Dead Sea water is painful if a swimmer has cuts or sores. It's a literal case of pouring saltwater into wounds.

Surrounded by the sparsely populated, lunarlike Judean hills, the Dead Sea is nearly dead quiet.

Floating in a smooth sport because of minimal wave action and because floaters don't have to keep a watchful eye out for sharks, crabs, jellyfish or other ordinary nuisances to swimmers.

Unlike at other rocky-bottomed beaches, swimmers don't have to worry about slipping on algae-covered stones because no plants or animals survive in this land-locked sea. The Jordan River empties its waters and some fish into the salty basin, but the fish don't last long.

The Dead Sea's name accurately describes this body of water, but some Israelis feel it is a misnomer because the ancient sea is a great source of raw chemicals for industry and agriculture..

Of course, there is a catch to the relaxing sensation of weightlessness. The body's balancing mechanism becomes accustomed to the bouyancy of the water and therefore when swimmers walk out of the sea they experience the clumsiness of a newborn animal.

Returning from the dense water, bathers head for the nearest shower to rinse off the potent mineral solution. Without a shower, hair begins to feel gritty and a chalky white powder appears on the skin.

Only two inches of rain fall annually at the Dead Sea. The Jordan River pours 6.5 million tons of water daily into the lake, but all its living contents die soon after contact with the salt liquid.

The water evaporates so fast in the baking sun that a permanent vapor cloud hangs over the Dead Sea. Parts of the lake smell of sulphur. Greek author Nikos Kazantzakis wrote that the Dead Sea was his vision of hell.

But there are optimists. A Jewish settlement has existed, on and off, for decades on the shore of the lake. Its name, Kalia, is a Hebrew acronym for the words "the Dead Sea is alive again."

Claremont 'traffic' study is proposed

The newly-organized Memorial Park Neighborhood Association has urged the Claremont City Council to appropriate $10,000 for an independent study of Claremont traffic.

The association urged this week at a public hearing on revenue-sharing that the study should have as one of its ultimate goals the development of alternative routes to and from northern Claremont so as to retain Indian Hill Boulevard as a residential collector rather than a secondary highway.

The association through its president, Forest Harrison, urged that the city adopt an ordinance which would ban all truck traffic, other than for local delivery service, from Indian Hill Boulevard.

It also urged that there be a continuous enforcement of the 30 mph speed limit on Indian Hill Boulevard between Harrison Avenue and Foothill Boulevard.

The association asked that the city post alternative routes on South Indian Hill Boulevard to redirect traffic to northeast Claremont, Padua Hills and Mt. Baldy.

Harrison said the constantly increasing traffic volume on Indian Hill Boulevard constitutes a threat to the stability of the residential area.

He said that access to Memorial Park is difficult and dangerous, especially for children.

The committee also recommended that an adequate tree maintenance budget be provided so that the Indian Hill-Memorial Park area of central Claremont be restored to its most attractive appearance.

Superman gets older

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even Superman gets older. Kirk Alyn, who played Superman in 30 movie serials in the late 1940s and early 1950s is now 66 years old and drawing Social Security checks.

"But I feel like I'm 39," the actor said. "And I wish they would stop offering me the same roles."

For years after producers stopped making the serials, Alyn found it difficult to get acting parts. Movie-makers felt the public wouldn't believe him as anybody other than Superman.

"Now I get offers, but it's only for detective roles," he lamented. "I just turned down two such parts. For one thing, I can't get used to the language they want you to use today."

Cubans: they hope someday to return

Two worlds meet and melt in New Jersey's 'Little Havana'

EDITOR'S NOTE: It is called Little Havana on the Hudson, although only the people resemble anything from Cuba. They came when Castro took over their homeland where they hoped someday to return. But more and more they have taken on American ways. It's not Miami. It's Union City, N.J., which has the heaviest concentration of Cubans outside the Caribbean.

UNION CITY, N.J. (AP) — When 19-year-old Richard Gaynor takes his girl friend to the movies, he bows to Cuban custom and takes her mother along.

When the high school throws a dance, the band plays the salsa as well as the hustle.

And while non-Cubans dominate the Emerson High football team, only two could make the baseball team against the Cuban competition.

So do two worlds meet and melt in this New Jersey town, far from the sunny, sandy beaches and the palmetto and palm trees of Cuban climes. Yet the Cubans, 30,000 strong, make up 64 per cent of the town's population, a heavier majority than in Miami where they constitute slightly more than half.

So it is that Union City, which called itself the Embroidery Capital of the world, and whose other claim to fame was the old Hudson Theater burlesque house, now also is known as Little Havana on the Hudson.

Though the two worlds melt on their facing edges, they keep their separate identities.

Cubans here and in adjacent West New York can go about their business without ever dropping a word of English. They can watch Spanish-language soap operas on TV at night and haunt restaurants that serve their native food.

By the same token, non-Cubans can shop in American stores, go to Anglo doctors, attend the one remaining English-language movie theater and never try black beans and rice — much less master Spanish.

Yet commerce being what it is, most merchants cater to Cuban customers. Druggists, for instance, stock $40 bottles of cologne for Cuban men and Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for Cuban women, items their customers haven't bought for years.

It is, in a sense, a strange place for Cubans to alight, so different is it from their homeland.

Union City is a densely populated area of 48,000 just across the Lincoln Tunnel from Manhattan's Times Square. It's blue collar with a mean income of $9,000 to $12,000, with cops making about $14,000 and teachers starting at $9,900. Its little homes, covered with asbestos shingles, are jammed around light industry on the narrow one-way streets. It's cold and gray in winter, has no large industry, no waterfront, no railroad and no similarities to Cuba.

Aleida Duran, a school teacher in her native Cuba but a journalist here, explains:

"Many years ago, before Castro, a few people from the town of Fomento came here as immigrants. They were not coming for political reasons. They were just coming for a better life. That was back in the 1950's. When Castro came to power, many Cubans came here because they knew someone, or they had just heard there were some Cubans living here." Mrs. Duran writes for the Hudson Dispatch, a daily newspaper that prints four pages in Spanish once a week.

From there, it mushroomed. The timing was right. The natives were moving out to greener parts of New Jersey. Thirtyeight of the 267 shops on the main drag, Bergenline Avenue, were empty.

"If it weren't for the Cubans, Union City would be a parking lot now," says Mrs. Dadaian, a sociologist and guidance counselor at Emerson High School.

The city already had welcomed Swiss and German immigrants, the Irish, the Jews and before the Cubans, the Italians.

"Each group was always coming in when another was moving out," says Mayor William V. Musto. "This is not Cuba in a foreign place. This is America. We are all Yankee Doodle Dandies."

Bergenline Avenue changed.

"At first, it was difficult for some people to walk along Bergenline Avenue and see all the Spanish stores and all the signs in Spanish. First they were just in Spanish, and then in Spanish and English. Someday, it will be all English," says Musto.

There's been little serious friction. Occasionally, the non-Cuban school kid will feel out of place in classes with an overwhelming majority of Spanish speakers (and the teacher sometimes lapses into Spanish). There was a little moaning when the local paper started to print Spanish sections. No one did that for the Italian immigrants, some of their descendants noted.

About 10 per cent of the 132-man police force can get by in Spanish, 7 per cent is bilingual, 4 per cent is Cuban-born, says Police Chief Herman Bolte.

One high school senior, born in Cuba, laments: "I have a cousin who was born here who speaks better Spanish than I do."

"I wish my mother would speak Spanish at home. But she says she's an American now and she will speak English," says Rosie Vasquez, 16.

"She has an American bald eagle hanging in the living room, and she puts up the flag on every holiday."

As the years ago by, there is more dating between the young people and more marriages. But some Cuban parents hang fast to the tradition of the constant chaperone.

The younger generation objects and says it produces premature marriages. It also produces more smooching in the halls of the high school since that is the only time two young people can see each other without adults hovering about.

Says Cuban-born Betty Gulin; 17: "You take the mother, the sister, the aunt, the uncle, the brother, the sister and the dog.'

The Cubans created another social tradition here, one that only the wealthy practiced back home. It's called a "Fifteen" and is an elaborate party for a 15-year-old girl, much like a debutante party. Publisher Avila, who runs pictures of the affairs in his weekly, says it can cost as much as $10,000.

Politically, the large Cuban majority has had little impact on Union City, since only an estimated 4,000 are U.S. citizens. For a long time, they lived with the hope of returning to Cuba, a dream that slowly faded as the Castro regime consolidated itself and their children gradually became Americanized.

Today, more Cubans are seeking citizenship, but many in the Cuban community feel it will be a while yet before they become a political force in the city.

"It is not time yet," one woman said. "We're up to here with politics. If we couldn't save our own country and keep it, can we think we are good politicians?"

Pomona school patrol slated

The Pomona school board has voted funds to continue the patrol of secondary campus perimeters by off duty Pomona police officers on an intermittent basis one or two days a week through the remainder of the school year.

Cost of the continued program is estimated at between $1,620 to $3,240 depending on the amount of police time used.

Trustee Eugene Whitlock requested that the board receive copies of the Pomona Police Department report on the month-long trial program which ended April 15.

In a memo to the board, Associate Supt. Sidney Moses said, "All evaluation reports from the high school administrators indicate that the program has been highly successful, particularly in terms of reducing the number of outsiders coming on to or loitering near the campuses. They would like to see the program continue.

While making that approval, the board also approved summer workshops for 400 district employes in assertive discipline. The program will cost approximately $24,800 of which $21,000 will be made up in average daily attendance (ADA) funds from the state.

The board approved the measure on a motion by trustee C. Allen Braswell who said he intends to enroll in the course and take it himself. The course lasts 15 hours.

Land gift bolsters YMCA funds campaign

Three families have presented two acres of land in La Verne to the Pomona Valley YMCA to establish permanent quarters for the San Dimas-La Verne YMCA.

The land is on the northeast corner of Bonita and Damien avenues and is valued at $45,000. The gift came from three Todd Memorial Chapel executives and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Todd, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Smith.

The gift was announced as the YMCA was preparing a $760,000 fund-raising campaign with the theme, "The Promise of Youth." The goal for the San Dimas-La Verne area is $185,000. Judge Thomas F. Nuss, chairman of the YMCA's board of managers in the area, accepted the land on behalf of the organization.

"This is a really significant gift," he said. "Now the YMCA will have a home in our area, something it has needed for a long time. With the land given, more of the funds raised in this campaign can be used for building and equipment."

With the campaign money, the YMCA will construct a building for offices, exercise classes and general indoor activities of the organization. YMCA leaders plan to include at the new site a jogging track, a bicycle motocross, basketball and tennis areas and an outdoor teaching pool. They also plan to expand the YMCA's outdoor recreation for families.

"The Promise of Youth" campaign will begin officially May 10. Teams of solicitors are being organized in Pomona, San Dimas, La Verne and Claremont. James Kostoff is general chairman, Paul Walker is honorary chairman, and Charles T. Richardson is directing the steering committee. In the San Dimas-La Verne area, Robert Poff, San Dimas city manager, is chairman, assisted by Aaron Burchard and Mel Durston of La Verne and Gordon Gaffikin of San Dimas.

Work prospects appear brighter

Cal Poly director foresees better conditions for college graduates

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Employment prospects for some of this year's college graduates appear brighter than in the past several years.

Especially for those in engineering fields.

According to Gary Fredericksen, career planning and placement director at Cal Poly Pomona, things look good for engineering and technical field graduates. But prospects may still be limited for liberal arts graduates.

Fredericksen said about 85 per cent of the June 1976 graduates in engineering took jobs in fields related to their degrees.

The percentage was similar for those graduates in accounting and business fields.

Surveys now being completed by the university on fall and winter graduates in the same fields indicate that the trend is continuing, the counselor said.

"According to salary offers being made by recruiters, the engineering discipline is the highest paid field," Fredericksen said.

He added that job placements and salary offers at Cal Poly compared well with those compiled in a national survey in which the university participated.

The recent survey by the College Placement Council is based on information provided on an ongoing basis by 160 colleges and universities throughout the country.

At the bachelor's-degree level, 49 per cent more offers were reported than at the same point a year ago. At the master's level, volume was up 74 per cent and at the doctoral level it was 73 per cent higher.

Relatively speaking, the picture for women continued to brighten. At the bachelor's level, the number of salary offers to women rose 68 per cent over last March, and this was on top of last year's 27 per cent gain over March 1975.

At the national level, business disciplines rose 53 per cent in volume, sciences were up 51 per cent and engineering categories were 45 per cent higher.

In terms of dollar values, petroleum engineering, a small but growing field of study, topped the salary scale at the bachelor's level with an average offer of $1,508 a month. Other bachelor's engineering averages ranged from $1,182 for civil engineering to $1,380 for chemical engineering.

"We have recruiters on the Cal Poly campus during all but the first and last weeks of each quarter of the year," Fredericksen said. "However, recruiting by major firms steps up between now and summer."

Cal Poly's placement department has five offices for interviewers. The arrival dates of the representatives from such firms as Bunker Ramo, IBM, Hughes and other major industrial companies are announced throughout the campus. Students make interview appointments with the recruiters.

"Our staff has been enlarged so that we can now do more counseling and assist the students with interviews, preparation of resumes, and so forth.

"But, actually, only about five per cent of the students obtain their employment through recruiters on the campus," Fredericksen added.

He said many students obtain employment after graduation through their summer jobs, business or personal contacts, or listings of positions.

Fredericksen hopes to broaden the concept of his department to stress more career counseling for undergraduates.

His first priority is to enlist the aid of "specialized" counselors. Instead of handling all fields, each staff member would serve about 10 majors.

"In this way, the counselor could maintain close contact with the faculty of that department and be more aware of changes, job opportunities and other relevant information," said the director.

The university has also applied for a grant to install a System on Interactive Guidance and Information (SIGI) which is designed to help students and alumni with the selection of careers.

Fredericksen said only two such systems are now operating on the state. They are at Pasadena City College and UC Irvine.

The director, who came from Humboldt State University recently, said high school students interested in career counseling information are welcome to call the placement office at 598-4281.

Courts proliferating

Racquetball 'craze' sweeping the valley

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

The racquetball craze is making its impact on the valley area, and two promoters are taking advantage of the great interest in the easy-to-learn activity by building handball-racquetball-health spa complexes.

In Claremont, Stan Clark and his wife Doris watch the daily progress of construction of a 19,000-square-foot facility, which includes 10 racquetball-handball courts, a snack shop, pro shop and lounge, steam room and dry sauna on Claremont Boulevard south of their tennis center.

In Montclair, former track and baseball coach Harold Wright is waiting while Racquet Time, Inc. builds a 10-championship court complex at 5515 Moreno Boulevard. Wright will manage the center when it opens, hopefully the latter part of May.

Two courts are in the planning stage for the Pomona YMCA on Garey Avenue. Their completion will help alleviate the pressure for play on the two present handball courts.

Neither Clark nor Wright are looking just at the handball-racquetball craze to satisfy, but will offer their customers a fully-rounded sports program.

As Clark sat in the comfortable lounge of the custom built rock house which became headquarters for his tennis complex opened in August 1973, he had hopes that the facility would be completed this month.

The complex will contain a health spa for women and men with a supervised instruction program.

Clark said the two-story building will contain a special smog filter which will trap 95 per cent of the harmful ingredients.

Wright is signing up memberships in his construction trailer office on the site of the new building. He is pushing the 10 courts, the sunken whirlpools, steam and sauna, the free beginners' clinic, the completely-equipped pro show and giant closed-circuit television.

Comparing tennis with racquetball, Wright said that in tennis, the arm is the thing, while in racquetball the wrist is what counts.

Wright said he has played the game four years, and recalled standing around for hours while waiting for a court at Long Beach State College.

Another person interested in the coming courts is Larry Ryals of Upland. A former tennis player, Ryals has competed in tournaments in San Diego, which he says is the racquetball capital of the nation.

Ryals stresses that racquetball is a sport that anyone can learn to play, but as that player increases in his playing proficiency, he finds that the game demands great skill.

"I enjoy playing, and the game gives me an all-round workout," Ryals said.

No one knows when the first paddleball player swapped his solid, wooden paddle for a string racquet, or a tennis player experimented by sawing off half the handle of his racket, but racquetball officially arrived in 1968 with the formation of the International Racquetball Association at Skokie, Ill.

The number of racquetball players has been estimated at between five and seven million throughout the nation.

At first, handball players complained loudly because racquetball players were taking over the courts, but in the 1960s, the sheer numbers of racquetball enthusiasts finally forced handball players to recognize them.

Blood needed for surgery

Donations of 20 units of blood are being sought by Martin Yarborough of Claremont for his son, Marshall, 2, who will undergo open heart surgery Wednesday at Loma Linda University Medical Center.

The blood may be donated after the surgery, according to Yarborough. Donations s may be made from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Thursday or on May 12 or 26 at the West End YMCA, 215 W. C St., Ontario.

Blood from the Riverside San Bernardino Counties Blood Bank must be replaced two pints for one used within 30 days or may be bought for $34 per pint. The Yarboroughs' medical insurance does not cover blood costs.

Young Marshall had his first heart operation at the age of 3 days and has undergone two subsequent catherizations. He was born with a transposition of the aortal and pulmonary vessels.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the family at 621-3436.

In La Verne-San Dimas effort

Land gift bolsters YMCA funds campaign

Three families have presented two acres of land in La Verne to the Pomona Valley YMCA to establish permanent quarters for the San Dimas-La Verne YMCA.

The land is on the northeast corner of Bonita and Damien avenues and is valued at $45,000. The gift came from three Todd Memorial Chapel executives and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Todd, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Smith.

The gift was announced as the YMCA was preparing a $760,000 fund-raising campaign with the theme, "The Promise of Youth." The goal for the San Dimas-La Verne area is $185,000. Judge Thomas F. Nuss, chairman of the YMCA's board of managers in the area, accepted the land on behalf of the organization.

"This is a really significant gift," he said. "Now the YMCA will have a home in our area, something it has needed for a long time. With the land given, more of the funds raised in this campaign can be used for building and equipment."

With the campaign money, the YMCA will construct a building for offices, exercise classes and general indoor activities of the organization. YMCA leaders plan to include at the new site a jogging track, a bicycle motocross, basketball and tennis areas and an outdoor teaching pool. They also plan to expand the YMCA's outdoor recreation for families.

"The Promise of Youth" campaign will begin officially May 10. Teams of solicitors are being organized in Pomona, San Dimas, La Verne and Claremont. James Kostoff is general chairman, Paul Walker is honorary chairman, and Charles T. Richardson is directing the steering committee. In the San Dimas-La Verne area, Robert Poff, San Dimas city manager, is chairman, assisted by Aaron Burchard and Mel Durston of La Verne and Gordon Gaffikin of San Dimas.

Work prospects appear brighter

Cal Poly director foresees better conditions for college graduates

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Employment prospects for some of this year's college graduates appear brighter than in the past several years.

Especially for those in engineering fields.

According to Gary Fredericksen, career planning and placement director at Cal Poly Pomona, things look good for engineering and technical field graduates. But prospects may still be limited for liberal arts graduates.

Fredericksen said about 85 per cent of the June 1976 graduates in engineering took jobs in fields related to their degrees.

The percentage was similar for those graduates in accounting and business fields.

Surveys now being completed by the university on fall and winter graduates in the same fields indicate that the trend is continuing, the counselor said.

"According to salary offers being made by recruiters, the engineering discipline is the highest paid field," Fredericksen said.

He added that job placements and salary offers at Cal Poly compared well with those compiled in a national survey in which the university participated.

The recent survey by the College Placement Council is based on information provided on an ongoing basis by 160 colleges and universities throughout the country.

At the bachelor's-degree level, 49 per cent more offers were reported than at the same point a year ago. At the master's level, volume was up 74 per cent and at the doctoral level it was 73 per cent higher.

Relatively speaking, the picture for women continued to brighten. At the bachelor's level, the number of salary offers to women rose 68 per cent over last March, and this was on top of last year's 27 per cent gain over March 1975.

At the national level, business disciplines rose 53 per cent in volume, sciences were up 51 per cent and engineering categories were 45 per cent higher.

In terms of dollar values, petroleum engineering, a small but growing field of study, topped the salary scale at the bachelor's level with an average offer of $1,508 a month. Other bachelor's engineering averages ranged from $1,182 for civil engineering to $1,380 for chemical engineering.

"We have recruiters on the Cal Poly campus during all but the first and last weeks of each quarter of the year," Fredericksen said. "However, recruiting by major firms steps up between now and summer."

Cal Poly's placement department has five offices for interviewers. The arrival dates of the representatives from such firms as Bunker Ramo, IBM, Hughes and other major industrial companies are announced throughout the campus. Students make interview appointments with the recruiters.

"Our staff has been enlarged so that we can now do more counseling and assist the students with interviews, preparation of resumes, and so forth.

"But, actually, only about five per cent of the students obtain their employment through recruiters on the campus," Fredericksen added.

He said many students obtain employment after graduation through their summer jobs, business or personal contacts, or listings of positions.

Fredericksen hopes to broaden the concept of his department to stress more career counseling for undergraduates.

His first priority is to enlist the aid of "specialized" counselors. Instead of handling all fields, each staff member would serve about 10 majors.

"In this way, the counselor could maintain close contact with the faculty of that department and be more aware of changes, job opportunities and other relevant information," said the director.

The university has also applied for a grant to install a System on Interactive Guidance and Information (SIGI) which is designed to help students and alumni with the selection of careers.

Fredericksen said only two such systems are now operating on the state. They are at Pasadena City College and UC Irvine.

The director, who came from Humboldt State University recently, said high school students interested in career counseling information are welcome to call the placement office at 598-4281.

Racquetball 'craze' sweeping the valley

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

The racquetball craze is making its impact on the valley area, and two promoters are taking advantage of the great interest in the easy-to-learn activity by building handball-racquetball-health spa complexes.

In Claremont, Stan Clark and his wife Doris watch the daily progress of construction of a 19,000-square-foot facility, which includes 10 racquetball-handball courts, a snack shop, pro shop and lounge, steam room and dry sauna on Claremont Boulevard south of their tennis center.

In Montclair, former track and baseball coach Harold Wright is waiting while Racquet Time, Inc. builds a 10-championship court complex at 5515 Moreno Boulevard. Wright will manage the center when it opens, hopefully the latter part of May.

Two courts are in the planning stage for the Pomona YMCA on Garey Avenue. Their completion will help alleviate the pressure for play on the two present handball courts.

Neither Clark nor Wright are looking just at the handball-racquetball craze to satisfy, but will offer their customers a fully-rounded sports program.

As Clark sat in the comfortable lounge of the custom built rock house which became headquarters for his tennis complex opened in August 1973, he had hopes that the facility would be completed this month.

The complex will contain a health spa for women and men with a supervised instruction program.

Clark said the two-story building will contain a special smog filter which will trap 95 per cent of the harmful ingredients.

Wright is signing up memberships in his construction trailer office on the site of the new building. He is pushing the 10 courts, the sunken whirlpools, steam and sauna, the free beginners' clinic, the completely-equipped pro show and giant closed-circuit television.

Comparing tennis with racquetball, Wright said that in tennis, the arm is the thing, while in racquetball the wrist is what counts.

Wright said he has played the game four years, and recalled standing around for hours while waiting for a court at Long Beach State College.

Another person interested in the coming courts is Larry Ryals of Upland. A former tennis player, Ryals has competed in tournaments in San Diego, which he says is the racquetball capital of the nation.

Ryals stresses that racquetball is a sport that anyone can learn to play, but as that player increases in his playing proficiency, he finds that the game demands great skill.

"I enjoy playing, and the game gives me an all-round workout," Ryals said.

No one knows when the first paddleball player swapped his solid, wooden paddle for a string racquet, or a tennis player experimented by sawing off half the handle of his racket, but racquetball officially arrived in 1968 with the formation of the International Racquetball Association at Skokie, Ill.

The number of racquetball players has been estimated at between five and seven million throughout the nation.

At first, handball players complained loudly because racquetball players were taking over the courts, but in the 1960s, the sheer numbers of racquetball enthusiasts finally forced handball players to recognize them.

Military draft still looms

Military conscription, which lasted through the long World War II-Cold War-Korea-Vietnam period, was an aberration in American history. Only twice before, in the Civil War and in World War II, had the nation relied on the draft to fill its military manpower needs, and then only briefly.

The ending of the draft and the return to an all-volunteer Army in 1973 was really a return to the old American belief that except in time of overriding national emergency, a person's body belongs to himself, not to the state.

But the days are long gone when America, secure behind thousands of miles of ocean on either side, could make leisurely preparations for war, mustering its yeomen farmers and mechanics while a small professional army and navy held the line. The next war, we are told, will begin with a massive Soviet invasion of Western Europe which, unless we can throw it back or contain it with conventional forces, will escalate into general nuclear war and the destruction of our cities. Either that, or we will have to capitulate.

Not only has the all-volunteer Army failed to provide the defense strength in depth needed to prevent a nuclear war, say its critics, but it has become so costly that it is draining funds that could be used for research and development of new weapons and equipment modernization.

Since 1964, military pay has nearly doubled and now accounts for 60 per cent of the defense budget. The Army plans to spend $60 million this year to recruit 5,000 additional soldiers, or about $12,000 each, and is not sure it will get even that small number.

The situation will worsen in the next decade. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that even if unemployment remains at its present high level, the military services will face a shortfall of 20 per cent in recruiting by 1980 simply because the number of draft-age men is declining.

Army reserve units are currently 80,000 men short of their peacetime level and the shortage will reach 250,000 by the early 1980s as the last of the Vietnam-era reservists finish their tours of duty, warns Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Another criticism is that volunteers have come predominately from poor, uneducated and minority groups who have not been able to find work in civilian life. Blacks now make up 24 per cent of Army personnel, more than twice their percentage in the general population.

"Unfortunately, the volunteer Army has not attracted across the board our whole social spectrum in this country," says Sen. John H. Glenn, D-Ohio, "so I think we have to seriously consider going back to some form of draft."

One form of draft that has been suggested is a truly universal system in which all youths would be called upon to perform a year or two of service either in the military or in organizations like the Peace Corps or Vista.

But this would still be coercion and would still go against the grain of American tradition. There is also the fear, thanks to the Vietnam experience, that the existence of conscription, even on a standby basis, would constitute a "blank check" enabling an adventurist president to involve the nation in little wars around the world.

One alternative to the revival of the draft, which has in fact been suggested by Army Secretary Clifford Alexander, is a restoration of GI Bill education benefits as a recruiting incentive. Other suggestions are the use of more civilians in certain categories now filled by soldiers and the recruitment of more women.

Until and unless the critics of the all-volunteer Army can prove their case that the country's defense is in jeopardy, Americans will likely opt for exploring every alternative before resorting to the draft. But they will have to accept the fact that it can't be done on the cheap. Whatever we do, it will cost billions.

Joyce Hifler

Think on these things

What is your favorite time of day? . . . Is it after you've done all you can, played all your roles . . . and now you can sit back and relax? . . . Or is it at the very beginning when everything is new and fresh and you can plan the hours ahead? . . . Could it be a moment of personal quietness any time . . . that allows you to think your own thoughts . . . dream your own dreams and adjust your own attitudes?

There are night people and day people and people who split the difference . . . but the important thing is to find that hour . . . that hour of personal, relaxed awareness that charges the battery . . . and gives you a bit of reflection to size up your performance . . . for wisdom will come to you in that hour that has been shut away in all the others.

How about tax control?

Dear Editor:

About the rent control that the city of La Verne is proposing to place on mobile home parks: In your article it was stated that it cost $1,500 to $2,000 to relocate a mobile home and therefore the renter was at a disadvantage.

Well, I have been thinking about the next control the city of La Verne can place on property: No property taxes on single family homes can go up more than the cost of living.

The fixed income homeowner is also at a disadvantage. He does not want to sell, but because the assessed value of his home goes up, his taxes go up and we all know it costs more than $2,000 to sell a home.

So get with it, city of La Verne, and place a tax control on single family homes.

Admirable deed

Dear Editor:

I think it was wonderful that you had such a nice article and picture of Bob Bailey, who saved a man's life in the burning house.

There are so many bad incidents which I realize are news and therefore must be reported. If, when something good and admirable is done by young people, it can be given a good write-up such as this. I think it's wonderful. Young people especially need something worthwhile to emulate.

CIA enters scene, then misery

WASHINGTON — The games that the Central Intelligence Agency plays have produced a terrible toll in human suffering. The consequences have been catastrophic for forlorn peoples from the Khambas in the high Himalayas to the Kurds in the Mideast hinterlands.

The painful details are buried deep in the CIA's vaults, but enough can now be pieced together to tell the suppressed story. It is a story of how the CIA has consciously exploited unsophisticated and primitive peoples for political, economic and military purposes. Invariably, the hinterlanders who were used by the CIA suffered severely for trusting in the United States.

This sad, sordid chapter in American history should be exposed while Washington is still debating the CIA's future. For three decades, the CIA has considered it necessary to get down and operate at the Communist level, without regard for fair play and human rights. There is no place for American traditions, contend the CIA sophisticates, in the dirty game of world intrigue.

The purpose for the CIA's secret intrigues, presumably, has been to bolster U.S. power and influence around the world. Yet the results, unhappily, have been distressingly the opposite. This has led some policymakers to suggest that the CIA should give up its dirty tricks and restrict its activities to gathering intelligence.

In the early 1960s, for example, the CIA recruited Tibetan tribesmen, known as Khambas, who had fled the Red Chinese on wiry ponies into the high fastnesses of Nepal. The Khambas were brought to the United States for training; then they were outfitted with American saddles, small arms and other provisions suitable for mountain warfare.

At the instigation of the CIA, the galloping Khambas would swoop down on Chinese military encampments in Tibet. The tribesmen were led by the CIA to believe they would reconquer their lost homeland with American help. They continued their harassments against the Chinese sporadically for a decade until the CIA lost interest. Then the proud Khambas, without CIA supplies to sustain them, straggled down from the mountains into the valleys of Nepal. They subsist today as pitiful and unwanted refugees.

During the mid-1960s, the CIA persuaded primitive Vietnamese tribesmen, called Montagnards, to exchange their bows and arrows for guns and grenades. They were recruited as scouts and border guards for the U.S. forces. Their reward: As the war spluttered to an end, thousands of Montagnards were herded into refugee camps where many perished from malnutrition, exposure, tuberculosis and pneumonia.

In Laos, the CIA formed a 14,000-man army of fierce Meo tribesmen to battle the Pathet Lao Communists. As the war dragged on, the Meo ranks were severely depleted, and children as young as 10 were recruited to fill the boots of the dead. The triumphant Pathet Lao drove tens of thousands of Meos from their villages. Yet today, the pathetic remnants of the mercenary army continue to fight the secret war that the CIA started. According to intelligence reports, the Pathet Lao have called on North Vietnam to help them root the remaining Meos out of their mountain hideouts.

Perhaps no primitive people have been so cruelly manipulated, however, as the Kurds who lived in the mountainous region of the Middle East where Iran, Iraq, Turkey, Syria and the Soviet Union come together. The unfortunate Kurds became pawns on Henry Kissinger's chessboard in May 1972.

Kissinger looked upon Iran as the geopolitical base for U.S. operations in the area and developed a close relationship with the Shah. The Shah, in turn, was involved in border and navigation disputes with Iraq. He also felt threatened by Iraq's close relationship with the Soviet Union. He, therefore, sought to stir up the simmering struggle between the Kurds and the Iraqis.

In May 1972, Kissinger brought his mentor, then-President Richard Nixon, to Tehran for a meeting with the Shah. At the Shah's insistent request, the two American leaders agreed to arm the Kurds for warfare against the Iraqis. The CIA, to its credit, resisted this particular scheme. But Nixon and Kissinger had made their decision.

During the months that followed, the CIA smuggled some 16 million worth of untraceable Chinese and Soviet arms through Iran to the Kurds. They fought the Iraqis to a standstill. The jubilant Kissinger dispatched a telegram through CIA channels to the Kurdish leader, Gen. Mustafa Barzani, on Feb. 22, 1975.

"My dear General," Kissinger's message began, "I want you to know of our admiration for you and your people and for the valiant effort you are making . . . I am convinced that secrecy has been of paramount importance in maintaining our ability to do what we have done; it is only for this reason — plus our concern for your personal safety — that I hesitate to suggest a personal meeting here with you."

No more than two weeks later, the Shah suddenly announced he had come to terms with Iraq. One of the terms, apparently, was the termination of American-Iranian support for the Kurds. Overnight, this support dried up; without the military wherewithal, the Kurds were overpowered. Thousands poured into Iran, helpless refugees, without bullets for the guns the CIA had given them. Gen. Barzani pleaded with Nixon and Kissinger for humanitarian help. His appeals were ignored.

Eventually, a token 400 Kurdish refugees were admitted to the United States, and another 300 visas have now been granted. But last January, the State Department also granted visas to an official Iraqi delegation to call upon the Kurds in America ostensibly to persuade them to come home.

5-4 votes with lasting effects

The most lasting impact which any President makes on history is the result of his choices for the U.S. Supreme Court.

We are still affected in our daily living — and our children, too, perhaps for all their lives will be — by the appointments of Franklin Roosevelt.

Not in generations has the Supreme Court been so evenly balanced, left and right, as now.

President Carter may tip that balance either way. Which way?

In late March the U.S. Supreme Court handed down a decision of so-so significance, but the infighting within the court over that decision was indeed significant.

Here's the background.

A little girl disappeared in Iowa in 1968.

Two days later an escaped mental patient confessed — and led police to where he had buried the body.

It is difficult to imagine a more open-and-shut case.

Yet the guilty verdict was appealed on a technicality.

Police who picked up the confessed killer — while driving him toward the jailhouse — "talked to him about the crime" without a lawyer present.

What the arresting officer said was that the little girl's parents were entitled to a Christian burial for their child so he hoped the body would be found.

And it was then that the confessed kidnap-killer led the police to the body where he had left it in a roadside ditch.

On that technicality — talking to the accused about the crime without a lawyer present — the guilty verdict was set aside.

The defendant will have to be retried — with the stipulation that his having directed police to the body must not be mentioned to the next jury.

The complexity of the decree diluted its newsworthiness. In effect, it will make this killer more difficult to convict. An Iowa attorney called it "a bitter pill."

But hear this: The Supreme Court was divided 5 to 4. Bitterly divided.

The four dissenters called the decision "weird," "bizarre," "irrational," "senseless."

Chief Justice Warren Burger dissented out loud! He accused the court majority of "punishing the public."

A confessed kidnap-killer had led police to the body and yet conceivably could go free!

Justice Thurgood Marshall justified his nullifying vote by saying, "Every American must be protected from the awesome power of the state."

But who is going to protect Americans from the awesome cruelty of chronic killers?

The high court, especially since Earl Warren was chief justice, tended to bend over backward in protecting the rights of wrongdoers.

That prejudice remains.

But it is now supported by a hairline margin of 5 to 4.

President Carter will likely make the next appointment to the court. There is no way to exaggerate the significance of that next choice.

Carter back-off shows maturity

WASHINGTON — The political problems which played a major role in forcing President Carter to withdraw his $50-per-person tax rebate plan were vividly portrayed last week in an unlikely and obscure forum — the Columbia, S.C. Chamber of Commerce.

Only 24 hours before Carter announced he was abandoning all efforts to convince the Senate to approve the scheme, South Carolina's two senators stood before the businessmen attending a Chamber luncheon and jointly denounced the rebate.

What made that event significant is the fact that there are few states whose senators are so ideologically disparate. Strom Thurmond is one of the most conservative Republicans in Congress, while Ernest F. Hollings is a "New South" moderate Democrat in the Carter mold.

Thurmond and Hollings seldom even appear together on the same platform, and their agreement on the rebate issue clearly illustrated the broad dimension of the difficulties Carter would have faced if he had decided to press for a Senate vote of confidence in his economic revival program.

At least a dozen Senate Democrats, including a number of liberals and moderates who normally would be counted as Carter loyalists, opposed the rebate proposal on its merits.

For example, Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., was a leader in the effort to kill the plan, but unlike some rebate critics he had no interest in using the issue to gain leverage with the White House in the dispute over curtailment of water reclamation and power projects in the South and West.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate majority whip whose preliminary vote counts in such situations are famed for their accuracy, was privately telling colleagues only a few days before Carter's reversal that the President probably could have won if he insisted upon a Senate showdown — but the vote would have been extremely close and the fight a bloody one.

Instead, Carter wisely concluded that it simply wasn't worth risking his political prestige on an economic stimulus package whose efficacy was questionable when first proposed in February and virtually nonexistent by April because the economy heated up faster than Congress moved.

Particularly surprising were recent indicators that many taxpayers apparently were concerned less about the loss of their potential cash bonanza than about its impact on the seemingly endless growth of the national debt. The rebate would have added $11.4 billion to this year's deficit, and future interest payments would have amounted to $700 million annually.

Carter's decision to cut his losses and acknowledge that his proposal had been outpaced by events demonstrated political maturity and raised serious questions about one of the recurring themes in the many political biographies of the President.

According to that popular but not necessarily correct notion, the President maintains an open mind during the decision-making process but becomes stubborn and unwilling to budge from his position once he has taken a stand on an issue.

Finally, Carter deserves considerable credit for the forum he chose to announce abandonment of a major legislative goal. Most of his recent predecessors were firm believers in the concept that bad news should never come from the White House and certainly not from the president himself.

If he had chosen to follow that practice, Carter could readily have delegated the task of announcing the news to his treasury secretary, director of office of management and budget or press secretary.

Instead, the President chose to appear personally in the White House press room to explain why he was tossing in the towel. And in another welcome departure from the practice of recent predecessors, he was candid enough to acknowledge that the political situation in the Senate did indeed play a role in his decision.

Military draft still looms

Military conscription, which lasted through the long World War II-Cold War-Korea-Vietnam period, was an aberration in American history. Only twice before, in the Civil War and in World War II, had the nation relied on the draft to fill its military manpower needs, and then only briefly.

The ending of the draft and the return to an all-volunteer Army in 1973 was really a return to the old American belief that except in time of overriding national emergency, a person's body belongs to himself, not to the state.

But the days are long gone when America, secure behind thousands of miles of ocean on either side, could make leisurely preparations for war, mustering its yeomen farmers and mechanics while a small professional army and navy held the line. The next war, we are told, will begin with a massive Soviet invasion of Western Europe which, unless we can throw it back or contain it with conventional forces, will escalate into general nuclear war and the destruction of our cities. Either that, or we will have to capitulate.

Not only has the all-volunteer Army failed to provide the defense strength in depth needed to prevent a nuclear war, say its critics, but it has become so costly that it is draining funds that could be used for research and development of new weapons and equipment modernization.

Since 1964, military pay has nearly doubled and now accounts for 60 per cent of the defense budget. The Army plans to spend $60 million this year to recruit 5,000 additional soldiers, or about $12,000 each, and is not sure it will get even that small number.

The situation will worsen in the next decade. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that even if unemployment remains at its present high level, the military services will face a shortfall of 30 per cent in recruiting by 1980 simply because the number of draft-age men is declining.

Army reserve units are currently 80,000 men short of their peacetime level and the shortage will reach 250,000 by the early 1980s as the last of the Vietnam-era reservists finish their tours of duty, warns Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Another criticism is that volunteers have come predominately from poor, uneducated and minority groups who have not been able to find work in civilian life. Blacks now make up 24 per cent of Army personnel, more than twice their percentage in the general population.

"Unfortunately, the volunteer Army has not attracted across the board our whole social spectrum in this country," says Sen. John H. Glenn, D-Ohio, "so I think we have to seriously consider going back to some form of draft."

One form of draft that has been suggested is a truly universal system in which all youths would be called upon to perform a year or two of service either in the military or in organizations like the Peace Corps or Vista.

But this would still be coercion and would still go against the grain of American tradition. There is also the fear, thanks to the Vietnam experience, that the existence of conscription, even on a standby basis, would constitute a "blank check" enabling an adventurist president to involve the nation in little wars around the world.

One alternative to the revival of the draft, which has in fact been suggested by Army Secretary Clifford Alexander, is a restoration of GI Bill education benefits as a recruiting incentive. Other suggestions are the use of more civilians in certain categories now filled by soldiers and the recruitment of more women.

Until and unless the critics of the all-volunteer Army can prove their case that the country's defense is in jeopardy, Americans will likely opt for exploring every alternative before resorting to the draft. But they will have to accept the fact that it can't be done on the cheap. Whatever we do, it will cost billions.

Think on these things

What is your favorite time of day? . . . Is it after you've done all you can, played all your roles . . . and now you can sit back and relax? . . . Or is it at the very beginning when everything is new and fresh and you can plan the hours ahead? . . . Could it be a moment of personal quietness any time . . . that allows you to think your own thoughts . . . dream your own dreams and adjust your own attitudes?

There are night people and day people and people who split the difference . . . but the important thing is to find that hour . . . that hour of personal, relaxed awareness that charges the battery . . . and gives you a bit of reflection to size up your performance . . . for wisdom will come to you in that hour that has been shut away in all the others.

How about tax control?

Dear Editor:

About the rent control that the city of La Verne is proposing to place on mobile home parks: In your article it was stated that it cost $1,500 to $2,000 to relocate a mobile home and therefore the renter was at a disadvantage.

Well, I have been thinking about the next control the city of La Verne can place on property: No property taxes on single family homes can go up more than the cost of living.

The fixed income homeowner is also at a disadvantage. He does not want to sell, but because the assessed value of his home goes up, his taxes go up and we all know it costs more than $2,000 to sell a home.

So get with it, city of La Verne, and place a tax control on single family homes.

Admirable deed

Dear Editor:

I think it was wonderful that you had such a nice article and picture of Bob Bailey, who saved a man's life in the burning house.

There are so many bad incidents which I realize are news and therefore must be reported. If, when something good and admirable is done by young people, it can be given a good write-up such as this. I think it's wonderful. Young people especially need something worthwhile to emulate.

CIA enters scene, then misery

WASHINGTON — The games that the Central Intelligence Agency plays have produced a terrible toll in human suffering. The consequences have been catastrophic for forlorn peoples from the Khambas in the high Himalayas to the Kurds in the Mideast hinterlands.

The painful details are buried deep in the CIA's vaults, but enough can now be pieced together to tell the suppressed story. It is a story of how the CIA has consciously exploited unsophisticated and primitive peoples for political, economic and military purposes. Invariably, the hinterlanders who were used by the CIA suffered severely for trusting in the United States.

This sad, sordid chapter in American history should be exposed while Washington is still debating the CIA's future. For three decades, the CIA has considered it necessary to get down and operate at the Communist level, without regard for fair play and human rights. There is no place for American traditions, contend the CIA sophisticates, in the dirty game of world intrigue.

The purpose for the CIA's secret intrigues, presumably, has been to bolster U.S. power and influence around the world. Yet the results, unhappily, have been distressingly the opposite. This has led some policymakers to suggest that the CIA should give up its dirty tricks and restrict its activities to gathering intelligence.

In the early 1960s, for example, the CIA recruited Tibetan tribesmen, known as Khambas, who had fled the Red Chinese on wiry ponies into the high fastnesses of Nepal. The Khambas were brought to the United States for training; then they were outfitted with American saddles, small arms and other provisions suitable for mountain warfare.

At the instigation of the CIA, the galloping Khambas would swoop down on Chinese military encampments in Tibet. The tribesmen were led by the CIA to believe they would reconquer their lost homeland with American help. They continued their harassments against the Chinese sporadically for a decade until the CIA lost interest. Then the proud Khambas, without CIA supplies to sustain them, straggled down from the mountains into the valleys of Nepal. They subsist today as pitiful and unwanted refugees.

During the mid-1960s, the CIA persuaded primitive Vietnamese tribesmen, called Montagnards, to exchange their bows and arrows for guns and grenades. They were recruited as scouts and border guards for the U.S. forces. Their reward: As the war spluttered to an end, thousands of Montagnards were herded into refugee camps where many perished from malnutrition, exposure, tuberculosis and pneumonia.

In Laos, the CIA formed a 14,000-man army of fierce Meo tribesmen to battle the Pathet Lao Communists. As the war dragged on, the Meo ranks were severely depleted, and children as young as 10 were recruited to fill the boots of the dead. The triumphant Pathet Lao drove tens of thousands of Meos from their villages. Yet today, the pathetic remnants of the mercenary army continue to fight the secret war that the CIA started. According to intelligence reports, the Pathet Lao have called on North Vietnam to help them root the remaining Meos out of their mountain hideouts.

Perhaps no primitive people have been so cruelly manipulated, however, as the Kurds who lived in the mountainous region of the Middle East where Iran, Iraq, Turkey, Syria and the Soviet Union come together. The unfortunate Kurds became pawns on Henry Kissinger's chessboard in May 1972.

Kissinger looked upon Iran as the geopolitical base for U.S. operations in the area and developed a close relationship with the Shah. The Shah, in turn, was involved in border and navigation disputes with Iraq. He also felt threatened by Iraq's close relationship with the Soviet Union. He, therefore, sought to stir up the simmering struggle between the Kurds and the Iraqis.

In May 1972, Kissinger brought his mentor, then-President Richard Nixon, to Tehran for a meeting with the Shah. At the Shah's insistent request, the two American leaders agreed to arm the Kurds for warfare against the Iraqis. The CIA, to its credit, resisted this particular scheme. But Nixon and Kissinger had made their decision.

During the months that followed, the CIA smuggled some 16 million worth of untraceable Chinese and Soviet arms through Iran to the Kurds. They fought the Iraqis to a standstill. The jubilant Kissinger dispatched a telegram through CIA channels to the Kurdish leader, Gen. Mustafa Barzani, on Feb. 22, 1975.

"My dear General," Kissinger's message began, "I want you to know of our admiration for you and your people and for the valiant effort you are making . . . I am convinced that secrecy has been of paramount importance in maintaining our ability to do what we have done; it is only for this reason — plus our concern for your personal safety — that I hesitate to suggest a personal meeting here with you."

No more than two weeks later, the Shah suddenly announced he had come to terms with Iraq. One of the terms, apparently, was the termination of American-Iranian support for the Kurds. Overnight, this support dried up; without the military wherewithal, the Kurds were overpowered. Thousands poured into Iran, helpless refugees, without bullets for the guns the CIA had given them. Gen. Barzani pleaded with Nixon and Kissinger for humanitarian help. His appeals were ignored.

Eventually, a token 400 Kurdish refugees were admitted to the United States, and another 300 visas have now been granted. But last January, the State Department also granted visas to an official Iraqi delegation to call upon the Kurds in America ostensibly to persuade them to come home.

5-4 votes with lasting effects

The most lasting impact which any President makes on history is the result of his choices for the U.S. Supreme Court.

We are still affected in our daily living — and our children, too, perhaps for all their lives will be — by the appointments of Franklin Roosevelt.

Not in generations has the Supreme Court been so evenly balanced, left and right, as now.

President Carter may tip that balance either way. Which way?

In late March the U.S. Supreme Court handed down a decision of so-so significance, but the infighting within the court over that decision was indeed significant.

Here's the background.

A little girl disappeared in Iowa in 1968.

Two days later an escaped mental patient confessed — and led police to where he had buried the body.

It is difficult to imagine a more open-and-shut case.

Yet the guilty verdict was appealed on a technicality.

Police who picked up the confessed killer — while driving him toward the jailhouse — "talked to him about the crime" without a lawyer present.

What the arresting officer said was that the little girl's parents were entitled to a Christian burial for their child so he hoped the body would be found.

And it was then that the confessed kidnap-killer led the police to the body where he had left it in a roadside ditch.

On that technicality — talking to the accused about the crime without a lawyer present — the guilty verdict was set aside.

The defendant will have to be retried — with the stipulation that his having directed police to the body must not be mentioned to the next jury.

The complexity of the decree diluted its newsworthiness. In effect, it will make this killer more difficult to convict. An Iowa attorney called it "a bitter pill."

But hear this: The Supreme Court was divided 5 to 4. Bitterly divided. The four dissenters called the decision "weird," "bizarre," "irrational," "senseless."

Chief Justice Warren Burger dissented out loud! He accused the court majority of "punishing the public."

A confessed kidnap-killer had led police to the body and yet conceivably could go free!

Justice Thurgood Marshall justified his nullifying vote by saying, "Every American must be protected from the awesome power of the state."

But who is going to protect Americans from the awesome cruelty of chronic killers?

The high court, especially since Earl Warren was chief justice, tended to bend over backward in protecting the rights of wrongdoers.

That prejudice remains.

But it is now supported by a hairline margin of 5 to 4.

President Carter will likely make the next appointment to the court. There is no way to exaggerate the significance of that next choice.

Carter back-off shows maturity

WASHINGTON — The political problems which played a major role in forcing President Carter to withdraw his $50-per-person tax rebate plan were vividly portrayed last week in an unlikely and obscure forum — the Columbia, S.C. Chamber of Commerce.

Only 24 hours before Carter announced he was abandoning all efforts to convince the Senate to approve the scheme, South Carolina's two senators stood before the businessmen attending a Chamber luncheon and jointly denounced the rebate.

What made that event significant is the fact that there are few states whose senators are so ideologically disparate. Strom Thurmond is one of the most conservative Republicans in Congress, while Ernest F. Hollings is a "New South" moderate Democrat in the Carter mold.

Thurmond and Hollings seldom even appear together on the same platform, and their agreement on the rebate issue clearly illustrated the broad dimension of the difficulties Carter would have faced if he had decided to press for a Senate vote of confidence in his economic revival program.

At least a dozen Senate Democrats, including a number of liberals and moderates who normally would be counted as Carter loyalists, opposed the rebate proposal on its merits.

For example, Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., was a leader in the effort to kill the plan, but unlike some rebate critics he had no interest in using the issue to gain leverage with the White House in the dispute over curtailment of water reclamation and power projects in the South and West.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate majority whip whose preliminary vote counts in such situations are famed for their accuracy, was privately telling colleagues only a few days before Carter's reversal that the President probably could have won if he insisted upon a Senate showdown — but the vote would have been extremely close and the fight a bloody one.

Instead, Carter wisely concluded that it simply wasn't worth risking his political prestige on an economic stimulus package whose efficacy was questionable when first proposed in February and virtually nonexistent by April because the economy heated up faster than Congress moved.

Particularly surprising were recent indicators that many taxpayers apparently were concerned less about the loss of their potential cash bonanza than about its impact on the seemingly endless growth of the national debt. The rebate would have added $11.4 billion to this year's deficit, and future interest payments would have amounted to $700 million annually.

Carter's decision to cut his losses and acknowledge that his proposal had been outpaced by events demonstrated political maturity and raised serious questions about one of the recurring themes in the many political biographies of the President.

According to that popular but not necessarily correct notion, the President maintains an open mind during the decision-making process but becomes stubborn and unwilling to budge from his position once he has taken a stand on an issue.

Finally, Carter deserves considerable credit for the forum he chose to announce abandonment of a major legislative goal. Most of his recent predecessors were firm believers in the concept that bad news should never come from the White House and certainly not from the president himself.

If he had chosen to follow that practice, Carter could readily have delegated the task of announcing the news to his treasury secretary, director of office of management and budget or press secretary.

Instead, the President chose to appear personally in the White House press room to explain why he was tossing in the towel. And in another welcome departure from the practice of recent predecessors, he was candid enough to acknowledge that the political situation in the Senate did indeed play a role in his decision.

Dr. Miller

Dog in a crate, but not too long

OWROOOO

DEAR DR. MILLER: An article I just read suggests you can leave a difficult dog like mine in a crate during the day while you're at work. The one I've ordered is plenty big enough for Jinx to stand up in, turn around, and lie down in comfortably. It's light and airy and, being metal, is easy to clean and strong. For a dog like Jinxy that tends to chew up things in the apartment when she's by herself, keeping her in a crate during the day is a great way to go, and I thought you'd like to pass this helpful advice along to your readers. I don't know why I hadn't thought of this answer to my Jinxy problem before. — M.A.

DEAR M.A.: Crates for canines can be advantageous under many circumstances. When shipping a dog, they're an obvious necessity. In car, trailer, or boat they may, under some circumstances, be an excellent way to keep the canine secure and safe. Around the home there are occasions when keeping the dog crated for a short period would be by far the simplest way to handle a situation. The key to success in the above situations is to have a properly constructed, adequately sized crate to begin with, and then (and this is vital) train the dog to accept, and, if possible, even appreciate, this airy little cave as its own temporary quarters. However, conning your canine into accepting a cage can be carried only so far. A dog which is bored and consequently destructive because it's left alone for long periods in an apartment, is going to be bored and "bonkers," too, in a lot shorter time cooped up in a crate.

Long term caging is for the birds (and some small, furry friends). Canines can't cope with it physically or psychologically.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The question's about some young swordtails I'm getting on a trade. How will they fit into a community tank? — C.Y.

DEAR C.Y.: The (ital) X. helleri (unital) (and related swordtails), like most tropicals, prefer privacy on occasion and are basically strong swimmers, needing some wide-open spaces for exercise. Many community tanks are too cluttered with paraphernalia, plants and other fish to provide ideal conditions for strong-swimming swordtails. If you do have that rarity, a community tank with adequate open space, then the swordtails might do well there.

Ann Landers

Just keep fingers crossed

Dear Ann: I am writing about a problem that has concerned me for a long time. It started in grade school and continued into my high school years.

My brother (four years older) used to pester me sexually. He'd ask me to pose in the nude and undress in front of him. Once he even tried to rape me. I told my mother about it. She said, "Tell your father." I did. He looked at me as if I was crazy. So I kept away from my brother best I could. It wasn't easy.

He was remarried recently to a woman who has a five-year-old daughter. My heart aches when I think of my brother alone with this little girl. Maybe not now, maybe when she "matures," he will put her through the same hell he put me through.

This is his second marriage and I don't want to make trouble. My brother and his wife seem to get along very well together.

They live 200 miles away, so I have no way of watching for the signs I know too well. Ann, should I MYOB or what? It took me many years and the help of a wonderful husband to get over my fears and anxieties. I'd hate to see my neice go through what I did. What should I do? — Concerned In Arizona

Dear Concerned: There is no way you can discuss this with your brother's wife or with the child and not stir up a hornet's nest.

If there's a chance that you can spend enough time with the youngster to win her confidence (perhaps take her for a few weekends) you might stress the importance of her body as "private property" and instruct her to tell her mother if at once in ANYONE, even relatives, tries to get too "friendly." This is as far as you can go, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: Why doesn't the United States learn something from the more civilized countries?

Every year the number of children who die in traffic accidents rises in the United States, but not in Norway and Sweden. In Norway, for example, traffic fatalities among preschool children have been reduced by 30 per cent. The reason: traffic clubs.

Children are enrolled on their third birthdays. They receive four years of "training." The traffic clubs teach children to look both ways before crossing the street, never to cross against a red light, and never to take foolish chances.

The club also warns parents not to violate traffic rules in order that they might serve as good examples for their children.

Professor Per Schioldborg of Oslo studied the traffic behavior of children and discovered that the club-trained youngsters were nearly 50 per cent more cautious than nonclub members when not accompanied by adults.

Any suggestions, Ann? — I Love Kids

Dear Love: Yes. Let's hope the National Safety Council (which does a very good job in the U.S.) sees your letter and takes some action.

CONFIDENTIAL to Needing a Lift: Surely a happy, healthy, productive day is a great joy, but it would not be so if all our days were happy, healthy and productive. We must visit a few valleys in order to appreciate the mountaintops.

Erma Bombeck

Warning to Bombeck visitors

If President Carter ever considers spending the night at our house, maybe I should give him the top line.

There's a plaque in our spare bedroom that reads, "If we get to drinking Sunday afternoon and start insisting that you stay over until Tuesday, please remember we don't mean it."

That's as close to being the "Nation's Innkeeper" as we get.

Friends of our children who have "slept over" will tell you on a scale of Motel Six, we're about a three and a half.

I read an article once that told you how you make your guests more comfortable. They had a checklist that consisted of luggage racks, writing paper, envelopes, pens, sachets in drawers, extra light bulbs, hangers, shoe polish, spot remover, needle and thread, dental floss, nasal spray, non-prescription laxatives, cotton-tipped swabs, eye drops, foot powder, terry bathrobe, magnifying mirror, hair dryer and throat lozenges.

Half of those things I've never seen myself.

Possibly the only plus we have to offer is that you are treated like a member of the family. That is why we advise:

Don't lock your door at night. You'll just have to get up out of bed and unlock it early the next morning when the child whose room you are occupying rummages through the doors and closets after his clothes.

Don't ask for extra towels. After the kids have used one for their body, one for their hair, one for the left leg, one for the right leg, one to stand on, and one to throw over their neck, that's it. There are no more towels.

Check for messages. They will be posted (a) on the refrigerator door, (b) on the back of the milk bill, (c) on the envelope of yesterday's mail, (d) etched in the kitty litter.

Report for meals promptly. The Bombeck Hilton is strictly family style. Members have not been trained to hold back and have been known to cross forks and draw blood over the last chop.

Although the television is in the family room, reading in the guest room is permitted and reading material is furnished. (Please refrain from smart remarks about the selection of books as they were all written by me.)

Please do not ask us to accept pets. We don't have enough traps for the ones we got.

For laundry and valet, wake-up call, food and beverage, maid service, transportation, and other services, dial H-O-M-E.

Dr. Lamb

Home blood pressure kit

DEAR DR. LAMB — Relatively inexpensive self-taking blood pressure kits have appeared on the market (about 20 to 25 dollars). Would you please comment on their accuracy since they do not use a column of mercury for measuring pressure but depend upon an aneroid manometer?

Do you have some advice on the use of these instruments since I would suppose they are becoming popular for use in the home?

When measuring my own blood pressure I notice that the needle on the gauge appears to respond to the rhythm of my pulse before I can hear the heartbeat through the stethoscope. There is about a 10 point difference between the visual and aural measure points. Which represents the systolic pressure reading, the higher visual point or the lower auditory point?

I am able to measure the diastolic pressure more easily since I can hear the pulse slowly fading away.

I am 50, healthy and hope to continue to find my blood pressure satisfactory at 118 over 68 — approximately.

DEAR READER — That is a good question. Yes, anyone can buy an instrument to measure his own blood pressure. I note Sears catalog has both the aneroid type or the mercury column type.

The round dial aneroid type does suffer from the problems of any such pressure gauges. They can become faulty. They do need to be checked regularly against a known pressure or a mercury column. The mercury column reading is always accurate, if the mercury level is kept at the proper level — which you can see

The height of the mercury column is a standard that follows basic laws of physics — just as a water column does and if the column is straight up and down it will be accurate.

The reading you are taking is dependent upon sound, not the needle vibration that you are seeing. As soon as you hear the heartbeat that is the top or systolic reading. When the sound changes markedly, just fading out, that is the diastolic level. Now if you have the stethoscope in the wrong place, not over the artery, you may not hear the sound soon enough.

How can you check that? Put your stethoscope away and find your pulse at the wrist below the cuff on your arm and above the base of the thumb. Pump up the cuff and let it gradually deflate. As the pressure falls low enough you will suddenly feel the pulse in the wrist. The arterial blood has started to flow again. Look at the dial and this is the systolic pressure.

Taking the systolic pressure this way usually gives a reading slightly lower than the reading you hear — but if it is higher it means you have the cuff on wrong, too loose, or do not have the stethoscope in the best place to pick up the sound.

Remember blood pressure is variable. A reading early in the morning before you get out of bed and face life's problems is more indicative of your true state. Late in the afternoon or evening is a better indication of life's toll on you.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

South's whole problem was to get to play at four or maybe five hearts. The fact that he got West to double was just icing on his cake.

Of course, dummy came down with the right cards to make five hearts a lay down, but South wasn't satisfied. He went after an overtrick.

He ruffed the opening spade and led his ace of hearts. When both opponents followed, South was ready for operation overtrick.

He led his 10 of clubs. At this point in time, the defenders could have saved the overtrick if West had played small and East dropped his king. But West put on the jack and now it didn't matter what East did.

East had held his king of clubs and had to win the trick. Then he had to lead a spade or diamond. South ruffed in dummy while discarding his last club.

Glad you asked

Q: Aren't Richard Burton and Raquel Welch bitter enemies? — Mrs. A. Burke, Oakland.

A: No. Actually the two stars have so much regard and respect for the other's professionalism that when Raquel broke her arm in a fall while making "Kansas City Bomber," Burton penned this "postcard" on her cast: "Love and admiration, not unmixed with lust."

Q: Is that lovely star, Annabella, once married to Tyrone Power, still alive and active? — Conrad Noonan, Philadelphia.

A: Very much so, although she's long retired from the screen. Now in her late 60s, Annabella lives quietly in the Basque sector of France. She spends her time visiting prisons — bringing books, candy and cheer to the inmates.

Q: Why do you frequently see Tony Martin at important baseball games singing the national anthem? — Doug Durnell, Columbus, Ohio.

A: Because when he was a kid, the Oakland-born entertainer had visions of being a ballplayer and worked out with the then minor league team. "Besides," he once explained "where else could I perform and be guaranteed a standing ovation before I even began?"

Q: We heard that Desi Arnaz will have his son speak for him on his next book promotion tour. Did Junior like the boy who played little Ricky in "I Love Lucy"? — Stuart L. San Jose, Cal.

A: Yes. "One of the things Richard Keith did was play drums," young Desi recalls, "and that's really what got me interested in music. I'll always be grateful to him for that. Music has always been a very important part of my life." As for making the next book tour for his doting dad's paperback edition of "A Book," Desi Jr. is excited about the project. The two Desis are close pals and friends and Junior takes pride in pop's success as a writer.

Q: Settle an argument. My husband insists there are over a hundred rooms in the White House. I say there are less than half a hundred. Who's right? — Mrs. S. Duran, Lansing, Mich.

A: Your husband. The last time anyone counted, there were 132 rooms in the White House.

Q: There's a rare breed of dog, a "papillon" (or butterfly spaniel), gaining in popularity with the elite dog-lover. We'd like to know what it looks like, how much it weighs, how much it costs. Got any inside info? Just sign us — "Dog Lovers", Phoenix, Ariz.

A: Yes. The papillon is tiny (generally a mere five pounds), obedient, cheerful, loyal and quiet. It only barks when its master's privacy is invaded. It's especially an excellent companion for apartment dwellers who ask for and give constant affection. It eats only two tablespoons of food a day, is not destructive and always smells clean, seldom requiring a bath. Supposedly newly discovered, it's a 700-year-old breed as revealed in the biographies of the famous artists, Rubens and Titian. Both found the papillon to be a most unusual toy dog. Though expensive, its life span runs from 18 to 20 years.

Marriage and family counselor

Some marriages last no longer than it takes two people to summon up the courage to unmarry. Others, it seems, last forever in a netherworld of discontent, conflict and unfulfillment.

A marriage counselor sees what divorce statistics (alarmingly the rate in California is now one out of two marriages end in divorce) do not show: the larger number that would get a divorce if it weren't for money, children, religion, legal obstructions or just plain inertia, not to mention the ability, even need, to suffer. It seems that our capacity for a deep, unguarded, unstructured relationship — one in which there is freedom of response, spontaneously ignited compassion, a giving and a taking without keeping score — is something we all too easily take for granted in ourselves. Can we build such a relationship?

We each want a good, happy, vital marriage. We want to be understood, accepted, loved for what we really are rather than merely for our pretensions or social facade. This hope is deep within each of us. It is every bit as indelible as are our dreams of wealth and fame. We want to give understanding and love as well. We want passionately — tenderly to be one in truth with another.

Of course we need — and want, and I believe we can have — all the good that is possible in marriage. A large part of why so many fail in marriage is that most of us didn't get much in the way of preparation. We enter the most important relationship of our lives without the faintest idea of how to build a partnership based on love and trust.

Some questions I ask a couple seem to help them look into themselves and into their relationship.

Are you truly in love? Most of us start out in marriage as consumers of love, not suppliers. Being in love is a goal to be attained rather than a built-in actuality. If we every now and again remind ourselves of this, mistakes and setbacks won't seem so discouraging.

Are you guilty of too-great expectations? We seem to have so sentimentalized marriage that a lot of us expect constant bliss — and sulk when we don't get it. Very frequently I will be told that marriage is supposed to be a 50-50 proposition. "No," I respond. In some areas you have to give 70 per cent to get back 30. In others you may be able to give only 20 per cent, which means that your partner must supply 80. Stop demanding miracles, and try to make your mate happy.

Have you stopped listening? A marriage without communication cannot survive. Respect each other's views. You must care more about your marriage than you do about being proved right every time a disagreement comes up.

Do you think in terms of we? When you look ahead and plan, do you plan for the future of both of you? Have you talked over hopes and wishes together?

Can you express affection and appreciation? Day in and day out, this is the most effective technique for smoothing the rough edges of marriage. All of us need praise; we never lose our hunger for affection.

Dr. Miller

Dog in a crate, but not too long

OWROOOO
Basl

DEAR DR. MILLER: An article I just read suggests you can leave a difficult dog like mine in a crate during the day while you're at work. The one I've ordered is plenty big enough for Jinx to stand up in, turn around, and lie down in comfortably. It's light and airy and, being metal, is easy to clean and strong. For a dog like Jinxy that tends to chew up things in the apartment when she's by herself, keeping her in a crate during the day is a great way to go, and I thought you'd like to pass this helpful advice along to your readers. I don't know why I hadn't thought of this answer to my Jinxy problem before. — M.A.

DEAR M.A.: Crates for canines can be advantageous under many circumstances. When shipping a dog, they're an obvious necessity. In car, trailer, or boat they may, under some circumstances, be an excellent way to keep the canine secure and safe. Around the home there are occasions when keeping the dog crated for a short period would be by far the simplest way to handle a situation. The key to success in the above situations is to have a properly constructed, adequately sized crate to begin with, and then (and this is vital) train the dog to accept, and, if possible, even appreciate, this airy little cave as its own temporary quarters. However, conning your canine into accepting a cage can be carried only so far. A dog which is bored and consequently destructive because it's left alone for long periods in an apartment, is going to be bored and "bonkers," too, in a lot shorter time cooped up in a crate.

Long term caging is for the birds (and some small, furry friends). Canines can't cope with it physically or psychologically.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The question's about some young swordtails I'm getting on a trade. How will they fit into a community tank? — C.Y.

DEAR C.Y.: The (ital) X. helleri (unital) (and related swordtails), like most tropicals, prefer privacy on occasion and are basically strong swimmers, needing some wide-open spaces for exercise. Many community tanks are too cluttered with paraphernalia, plants and other fish to provide ideal conditions for strong-swimming swordtails. If you do have that rarity, a community tank with adequate open space, then the swordtails might do well there.

Ann Landers

Just keep fingers crossed

Dear Ann: I am writing about a problem that has concerned me for a long time. It started in grade school and continued into my high school years.

My brother (four years older) used to pester me sexually. He'd ask me to pose in the nude and undress in front of him. Once he even tried to rape me. I told my mother about it. She said, "Tell your father." I did. He looked at me as if I was crazy. So I kept away from my brother best I could. It wasn't easy.

He was remarried recently to a woman who has a five-year-old daughter. My heart aches when I think of my brother alone with this little girl. Maybe not now, maybe when she "matures," he will put her through the same hell he put me through.

This is his second marriage and I don't want to make trouble. My brother and his wife seem to get along very well together.

They live 200 miles away, so I have no way of watching for the signs I know too well. Ann, should I MYOB or what? It took me many years and the help of a wonderful husband to get over my fears and anxieties. I'd hate to see my neice go through what I did. What should I do? — Concerned In Arizona

Dear Concerned: There is no way you can discuss this with your brother's wife or with the child and not stir up a hornet's nest.

If there's a chance that you can spend enough time with the youngster to win her confidence (perhaps take her for a few weekends) you might stress the importance of her body as "private property" and instruct her to tell her mother if at once in ANYONE, even relatives, tries to get too "friendly." This is as far as you can go, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: Why doesn't the United States learn something from the more civilized countries?

Every year the number of children who die in traffic accidents rises in the United States, but not in Norway and Sweden. In Norway, for example, traffic fatalities among preschool children have been reduced by 30 per cent. The reason: traffic clubs.

Children are enrolled on their third birthdays. They receive four years of "training." The traffic clubs teach children to look both ways before crossing the street, never to cross against a red light, and never to take foolish chances.

The club also warns parents not to violate traffic rules in order that they might serve as good examples for their children.

Professor Per Schioldborg of Oslo studied the traffic behavior of children and discovered that the club-trained youngsters were nearly 50 per cent more cautious than nonclub members when not accompanied by adults.

Any suggestions, Ann? — I Love Kids

Dear Love: Yes. Let's hope the National Safety Council (which does a very good job in the U.S.) sees your letter and takes some action.

CONFIDENTIAL to Needing a Lift: Surely a happy, healthy, productive day is a great joy, but it would not be so if all our days were happy, healthy and productive. We must visit a few valleys in order to appreciate the mountaintops.

Erma Bombeck

Warning to Bombeck visitors

If President Carter ever considers spending the night at our house, maybe I should give him the top line.

There's a plaque in our spare bedroom that reads, "If we get to drinking Sunday afternoon and start insisting that you stay over until Tuesday, please remember we don't mean it."

That's as close to being the "Nation's Innkeeper" as we get.

Friends of our children who have "slept over" will tell you on a scale of Motel Six, we're about a three and a half.

I read an article once that told you how you make your guests more comfortable. They had a checklist that consisted of luggage racks, writing paper, envelopes, pens, sachets in drawers, extra light bulbs, hangers, shoe polish, spot remover, needle and thread, dental floss, nasal spray, non-prescription laxatives, cotton-tipped swabs, eye drops, foot powder, terry bathrobe, magnifying mirror, hair dryer and throat lozenges.

Half of those things I've never seen myself.

Possibly the only plus we have to offer is that you are treated like a member of the family. That is why we advise:

Don't lock your door at night. You'll just have to get up out of bed and unlock it early the next morning when the child whose room you are occupying rummages through the doors and closets after his clothes.

Don't ask for extra towels. After the kids have used one for their body, one for their hair, one for the left leg, one for the right leg, one to stand on, and one to throw over their neck, that's it. There are no more towels.

Check for messages. They will be posted (a) on the refrigerator door, (b) on the back of the milk bill, (c) on the envelope of yesterday's mail, (d) etched in the kitty litter.

Report for meals promptly. The Bombeck Hilton is strictly family style. Members have not been trained to hold back and have been known to cross forks and draw blood over the last chop.

Although the television is in the family room, reading in the guest room is permitted and reading material is furnished. (Please refrain from smart remarks about the selection of books as they were all written by me.)

Please do not ask us to accept pets. We don't have enough traps for the ones we got.

For laundry and valet, wake-up call, food and beverage, maid service, transportation, and other services, dial H-O-M-E.

Dr. Lamb

Home blood pressure kit

DEAR DR. LAMB — Relatively inexpensive self-taking blood pressure kits have appeared on the market (about 20 to 25 dollars). Would you please comment on their accuracy since they do not use a column of mercury for measuring pressure but depend upon an aneroid manometer?

Do you have some advice on the use of these instruments since I would suppose they are becoming popular for use in the home?

When measuring my own blood pressure I notice that the needle on the gauge appears to respond to the rhythm of my pulse before I can hear the heartbeat through the stethoscope. There is about a 10 point difference between the visual and aural measure points. Which represents the systolic pressure reading, the higher visual point or the lower auditory point?

I am able to measure the diastolic pressure more easily since I can hear the pulse slowly fading away.

I am 50, healthy and hope to continue to find my blood pressure satisfactory at 118 over 68 — approximately.

DEAR READER — That is a good question. Yes, anyone can buy an instrument to measure his own blood pressure. I note Sears catalog has both the aneroid type or the mercury column type.

The round dial aneroid type does suffer from the problems of any such pressure gauges. They can become faulty. They do need to be checked regularly against a known pressure or a mercury column. The mercury column reading is always accurate, if the mercury level is kept at the proper level — which you can see

The height of the mercury column is a standard that follows basic laws of physics — just as a water column does and if the column is straight up and down it will be accurate.

The reading you are taking is dependent upon sound, not the needle vibration that you are seeing. As soon as you hear the heartbeat that is the top or systolic reading. When the sound changes markedly, just fading out, that is the diastolic level. Now if you have the stehoscope in the wrong place, not over the artery, you may not hear the sound soon enough.

How can you check that? Put your stethoscope away and find your pulse at the wrist below the cuff on your arm and above the base of the thumb. Pump up the cuff and let it gradually deflate. As the pressure falls low enough you will suddenly feel the pulse in the wrist. The arterial blood has started to flow again. Look at the dial and this is the systolic pressure.

Taking the systolic pressure this way usually gives a reading slightly lower than the reading you hear — but if it is higher it means you have the cuff on wrong, too loose, or do not have the stethoscope in the best place to pick up the sound.

Remember blood pressure is variable. A reading early in the morning before you get out of bed and face life's problems is more indicative of your true state. Late in the afternoon or evening is a better indication of life's toll on you.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Northeast of Cairo

Egypt building center for 'disabled' persons

NASR CITY, Egypt (AP) — Northeast of Cairo in Nasr City, where raw housing developments sprawl across the desert, the Society of Faith and Hope is planting grass, teaching the disabled to type and looking for money.

The society's name is apt, for it has committed itself to constructing the largest rehabilitative medical center in the Middle East and possibly the world.

The project is the brainchild of Egypt's first lady, Mrs. Jihan Sadat, whose tours of hospitals and visits with the wounded following the 1967 and 1973 Middle East wars convinced her of the need for a comprehensive medical facility.

The center, headed by Mrs. Sadat as chairwoman of the board of directors, has already admitted 63 patients, although less than 5 per cent of the project's 270-acre site has been completed.

As patients push their wheelchairs past bulldozers and workmen, the center's administrators sit in their offices and describe what the project will be like someday.

"We wanted to make a small village for the disabled," Dr. Zeinab el-Bendary, head of rehabilitative services, explained. "We started with 40 acres, then it grew to 270 acres.

"We thought why not make it a whole city, with rehabilitative centers, workshops and a hospital, to acclimatize the disabled before their return to normal life."

Construction on the center began in 1974 and will not be completed until at least 1982. The center's concept — that the disabled need not be regarded as unfortunate, useless members of society — will be served by the most modern medical technology.

When finished at an estimated cost of $70 million, the center will house 3,000 patients and include a 1,000-bed hospital, a prosthetic workshop producing 25,000 artificial limbs a year, vocational workshops and recreational and residential facilities.

Early this summer, the first phase of construction, a complex of residential villas for patients, central service and maintenance buildings and a rehabilitative training center, will open to admit 500 patients, center administrators said.

At present, the 63 patients admitted nearly a year ago are housed in villas that serve as homes, temporary training clinics and workshops.

While the aims of the Faith and Hope Society are inspiring, they are also expensive. To date, the $70-million project has relied on government subsidies and donations from foreign countries to finance construction. Lately, those donations have grown smaller.

The society's board of directors has established six international committees to drum up foreign donations for the project. But the center's financial director said that administrators were also studying other money-raising schemes.

Patients will share a part of the center's financial burden. Although they will be asked to pay only what they can afford, with fees as low as $3 a month for the poor, hospital officials hope that their first-class private rooms, which will cost $125 a day, will attract wealthy Arab patients.

The center's workshops, which teach patients skills such as radio and TV repair, engraving, carpet-weaving and typing, prepare patients for employment outside the center. Most of the trainers in the vocational workshops are disabled.

Machines replace mapmaking process

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rooms full of grizzled little mapmakers armed with colored pencils and dividers may be a nice image, but they are no longer the rule at the nation's largest mapmaking operation — the U.S. Geological Survey.

"The state of the art has changed considerably since those days," commented Charles D. Zeigler, assistant chief of the survey's eastern topographical mapping section.

Based in Reston, Va., the eastern section employs just under 300 people, including a few old-school mapmakers. But most are experts in aerial photography and operations of the many sophisticated modern machines which have mostly replaced the pencils and dividers.

The Reston operation, responsible for about one-quarter of the nation, is one of four geological survey mapping centers in the country and, although slightly smaller than the others, is typical of them.

Other centers are located in Rolla, Mo., Denver and Menlo Park, Calif.

Last year the geological survey distributed about 11 million copies of its maps, which it terms "silent guides to the outdoors."

The survey turns out about 6,000 maps a year, either new maps or revisions of old ones. Current inventory is 95 million copies of about 60,000 maps.

Biggest customers are hikers, campers, hunters, fishermen and other open-air enthusiasts and the top sellers as a group are topographical maps. Individual best sellers are maps of the national parks, officials say.

Topographic maps cost from $1.25 to $2 a sheet with specialized maps ranging up to $3.50 a sheet. Cheapest are some miscellaneous field studies which sell for 75 cents.

Especially useful for vacationers who want to stay away from the beaten path, the maps identify roads, trails and streams and a wide range of other natural and manmade features in detail.

There is also a special series of maps of various scales of National Parks, Monuments and Historic Sites.

"We probably construct 99 per cent of our maps today from aerial photographs," Zeigler explained.

Basically, he says, the system is to take two aerial photos and put them into a machine a little like the old-fashioned stereescope. This obtains three dimensional image from the pictures, allowing mapmakers to show changes in the elevation, or height of the ground.

"The machine automatically scans a pair of photographs to produce a terrain model and a contour model," Zeigler explained.

"Of course we still do hand work," Zeigler said, noting that there are instances where people are sent out with surveying instruments to make the basic measurements for maps. But he said this is becoming more and more rare because so much of the nation has already been surveyed by either the USGS or the National Geodetic Survey.

A part of the geological survey operation is the National Cartographic Information Center. The center holds more than 1.5 million maps and charts.

He's 1,800 miles up-South now

Old South author shifts heart to 'San Francisco'

AUTHOR ERNEST GAINES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — He's about 1,800 miles up-South now, but for author Ernest Gaines, it's close enough to renew memories and love for the Old South that once was his home and now is the heart of his novels.

Gaines is the city-dwelling writer of tales of the rural South that was a way of life for generations of blacks and whites.

"I think I can understand something about the interpretation of things around us, our lives, from an uneducated person's point of view because I've heard it over and over and over," he said in an interview.

"I don't have to go to the South to hear that. I can hear it here on the street corner, I can hear it in the barbershops, in bars, wherever I go."

Gaines worked nearly 20 years writing about the South before his novel "Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" became a widely acclaimed television movie with an audience of 85 million people.

For some, the film was an introduction to Gaines. But for those acquainted with his work, it was a reaffirmation of the skills of the 44-year-old black man full of pride and stubborn faith.

Gaines was raised on a plantation in Oscar, La., near Baton Rouge. He has been in the Bay area for 28 years and now lives in the heart of the Fillmore, a predominantly black neighborhood.

All of his published work — three novels and a collection of short stories — is placed in a Southern setting.

"I must write about things I think I know most about. I must write about things I care most about," he says.

The aunt who raised him inspired the folk autobiography of Miss Jane, a chronicle of black experience seen through the life of a 100-year-old black woman. The television version, a two-hour film starring Cicely Tyson, was first shown in January 1974 and rerun the following November.

"Of Love and Dust," Gaines' second novel, examines the black-white sexual tension in Southern life. His other published works are "Catherine Carmier," his first novel, and "Bloodlines," an anthology of stories.

His stepfather moved the family — nine boys and three girls — to Vallejo, Calif., when Gaines was 15. Urged to hang out in the library rather than in the street, he began reading established writers.

"The white writers who wrote about black characters were not writing about the people I knew, not my kind of blacks," he says. "It was then that I tried to write.

"I was not so much trying to tell the rest of the world about my people as much as I was trying to tell myself, to record it, to say it was beautiful."

Gaines refuses to be lumped into a "school" of black writing. He wrote "Miss Jane" over a 2½-year period in the midst of the turbulent '60s, aloof from the movement of younger writers toward more militant writing. The book has since been translated into Japanese and Russian and is in its 14th printing.

"Even if the house was exploding around me, I was going to write Miss Jane...," he says. "I always had faith in what I was writing about."

He has been working for five years on his latest novel, a book tentatively titled, "In My Father's House."

He lists Ernest Hemingway and William Faulkner as among his favorite authors. "The difference between Faulkner and myself," he says, "is that I ate in Miss Jane's kitchen, and Faulkner would have had her cooking in it."

With the success of "Miss Jane," he says he is able to "buy better food and better whisky." And when he makes his annual pilgrimage to Oscar, "I'm invited to the big house."

Problems are 'no' problem for some

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — If seven belly dancers can lose 20 pounds altogether in eight hours of dancing, how many more belly dancers would be needed to lose a total of 20 pounds in only four hours, providing the new dancers shed weight only half as fast as the original?

If you came up with the answer 14, you're smart or you guessed.

If you're smart you may qualify for membership in Mensa, one of the most exclusive clubs in the world. And if you only guessed the answer, don't worry; even Mensa members downplay the exalted deference often given to this type of problem-solving intelligence.

To become a Mensa member, you have to take an intelligence quotient test to prove you have an I.Q. higher than 130 — an intelligence level representing only 2 per cent of the population.

"It's not the sort of thing you like to advertise to your friends," says Mensa member Kenneth Moore of Sheffield Lake: some of them might resent you for it. He explains that intelligence — the raw analytic ability to solve problems — is a gift one is born with and has little to do with wisdom or happiness or creativity.

Moore considers himself an average guy who happens to have a high I.Q. He likes to play war games, he reads physics books and he's mad about Flash Gordon. He was graduated from college with a B average.

Other members in the area said they took the test as a challenge. Passing it was an ego booster to some. But most tended to downgrade the achievement.

"Really, it's just a character trait," said Juanita Scott of Vermillion, "like being a tall person, not something you do for yourself."

Northeast of Cairo

Egypt building center for 'disabled' persons

NASR CITY, Egypt (AP) — Northeast of Cairo in Nasr City, where raw housing developments sprawl across the desert, the Society of Faith and Hope is planting grass, teaching the disabled to type and looking for money.

The society's name is apt, for it has committed itself to constructing the largest rehabilitative medical center in the Middle East and possibly the world.

The project is the brainchild of Egypt's first lady, Mrs. Jihan Sadat, whose tours of hospitals and visits with the wounded following the 1967 and 1973 Middle East wars convinced her of the need for a comprehensive medical facility.

He wrote "Miss Jane" over a 2½-year period in the midst of the turbulent '60s, aloof from the movement of younger writers toward more militant writing. The book has since been translated into Japanese and Russian and is in its 14th printing.

"Even if the house was exploding around me, I was going to write Miss Jane...," he says. "I always had faith in what I was writing about."

He has been working for five years on his latest novel, a book tentatively titled, "In My Father's House."

He lists Ernest Hemingway and William Faulkner as among his favorite authors. "The difference between Faulkner and myself," he says, "is that I ate in Miss Jane's kitchen, and Faulkner would have had her cooking in it."

With the success of "Miss Jane," he says he is able to "buy better food and better whisky." And when he makes his annual pilgrimage to Oscar, "I'm invited to the big house."

Problems are 'no' problem for some

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — If seven belly dancers can lose 20 pounds altogether in eight hours of dancing, how many more belly dancers would be needed to lose a total of 20 pounds in only four hours, providing the new dancers shed weight only half as fast as the original?

If you came up with the answer 14, you're smart or you guessed.

If you're smart you may qualify for membership in Mensa, one of the most exclusive clubs in the world. And if you only guessed the answer, don't worry; even Mensa members downplay the exalted deference often given to this type of problem-solving intelligence.

To become a Mensa member, you have to take an intelligence quotient test to prove you have an I.Q. higher than 130 — an intelligence level representing only 2 per cent of the population.

"It's not the sort of thing you like to advertise to your friends," says Mensa member Kenneth Moore of Sheffield Lake: some of them might resent you for it. He explains that intelligence — the raw analytic ability to solve problems — is a gift one is born with and has little to do with wisdom or happiness or creativity.

Moore considers himself an average guy who happens to have a high I.Q. He likes to play war games, he reads physics books and he's mad about Flash Gordon. He was graduated from college with a B average.

Other members in the area said they took the test as a challenge. Passing it was an ego booster to some. But most tended to downgrade the achievement.

"Really, it's just a character trait," said Juanita Scott of Vermillion, "like being a tall person, not something you do for yourself."

FRIENDLY GAME — Susan Basch, 11, from Colorado Academy, Colo., tries her hand at ping pong in a setting far from home — at a school in China. She and 15 schoolmates aged 11 to 15 were on an 18-day visit, the youngest group of Americans to go to the Communist mainland in recent years. They visited Chinese schools almost daily.

Denver youngsters brave bamboo curtain, visit China

EDITOR'S NOTE: Roger Kirkpatrick organized a field trip for some of his students at Colorado Academy, a private school outside Denver. His was the youngest group of Americans ever to visit Red China. The kids, aged 11 to 15, studied the country extensively before they went and kept copious diaries while they were there. This story is based on their journals.

It was night when we arrived. The airport was dark except for the lights in the terminal and on the runways. On the bus ride to the hotel, we noticed there were no street lights, either.

The hotel lobby was cold, but we didn't care. We were in the People's Republic of China and already had seen a little of what it was like — a giant picture of Chairman Mao over the airport terminal door, baggage handled by men instead of machines. and we saw the bicycles in the streets that we had been told about before leaving home.

Roger Kirkpatrick, one of our three teacher chaperones organized the March trip. On a gamble, he asked the Chinese if he could take a group of young Americans to China to see life there. He said it would be a learning experience and that each of us would share our impressions with other Americans when we returned home. The Chinese agreed, and our school organized an essay contest to decide who could go. More than 40 kids applied, and we were the 16 chosen. Our families paid our way. Before we left, we had several orientation sessions with college professors and other China experts.

Everywhere we went we had a warm welcome, usually followed by a briefing, where, in the words of Charles Niimi, 14, "rivers of jasmine tea flow."

On our first commune visit we were applauded on our arrival by a number of old people. When people clap at you in China, it is proper to clap back. So for about two minutes we stood there clapping at each other.

Laura Plaut, 11, one of the youngest travelers in our group, later wrote: "we learned that old people are given a lot of respect because of their wisdom and experience. Grandparents often have the final say — a kind of veto power. The aged who do not have a son to live with are given five guarantees by the governments: Food, clothes, housing, medical care, and when they die — a proper funeral."

We traveled by bus and train to Yangchow, Suchou and Shanghai. We liked the

A ticklish problem

'Oh, feathers!' Indian art show finds snags

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Some laws can ruffle your feathers, the man who organized "Sacred Circles: 2000 Years of North American Indian Art" discovered during efforts to transport the famous exhibition from London to Kansas City.

The eagle feathers adorning many objects in the exhibition posed a particularly delicate problem, said Ralph T. Coe, director of the Nelson Gallery of Art-Atkins Museum of Fine Arts, where the show will open April 16.

"There is a law forbidding the sale or trading of objects containing migratory bird feathers, including eagle feathers. Beyond the obvious usage of feathers in Indian headdresses and warbonnets, other parts of the eagle show up in other applications," Coe said.

"All I could think of was the prospect of a bunch of U.S. marshals coming in and impounding loans from the British Museum and other lenders."

A series of laws enacted since 1940 and aimed at conserving certain migratory birds, restrict or prohibit the sale or possession of feathers or any other body parts of birds.

While American Indians may possess and exchange — but not sell — objects bearing eagle feathers, non-Indians without special permits are liable for prosecution. Recent interpretations of the laws have made it virtually impossible for non-Indians legally to possess Indian feather artifacts of any age without a government permit.

Other laws regulate the import and export of such items, and illegally imported objects containing body parts of certain endangered species may be impounded. Since 1971, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service — charged with enforcing these laws — has confiscated toy yaks, a crocodile foot, an armadillo guitar and a stuffed Andean condor, among other items.

In his international search for the "Sacred Circles" exhibition, Coe three years ago contacted the service about feathery objects expected to be transported in conjunction with showings in London and Kansas City. The service's law enforcement division located in Independence, Mo., pledged cooperation but requested certain conditions.

"An official assured me the last thing the government wanted to do was interfere with an important international exhibition," Coe said. "At the same time, he reminded me there were legal considerations to reckon with."

At first, the Fish and Wildlife Service wanted a complete list of everything in the exhibit containing an eagle feather or any other body part. Historically, Indians used many parts of the eagle, including feathers for decoration, talons for amulets — or charms — wingbones for whistles and the down for ceremonial sprinkling.

Coe explained that such an inventory would be likely to take years to compile. Many objects were found in corners and back rooms of museums and private collections. Some were only partially unwrapped when selected for the show. Objects which normally used feathers or body parts in certain ways didn't necessarily have them. Other artifacts may have contained them in places where even experts would not have guessed.

Finally, the service agreed to exempt the entire exhibit. Transportation permits were issued to allow articles belonging to American collectors and institutions to travel to England, to allow them to return and to permit objects belonging to European collectors to enter the United States.

Despite these permits, the feathery hassle was not yet over.

Because of inspection requirements the service was taken aback when it learned that the London to Kansas City journey was planned nonstop. New York is an official Fish and Wildlife port-of-entry. Kansas City is not.

Reminded of the enormous landing fees involved in a New York stop, the official relented.

"Sacred Circles," which opened last October at the Hayward Gallery in London, was assembled over a four-year period fron 90 museums and private collections in six countries. The 850 objects represent the largest assembly of Indian art ever put on public view.

The showing here will be the only one in the Western Hemisphere. After closing on June 19 the exhibition will be disbanded and the objects constituting it will be returned to their lenders in North America and Europe.

bus and train because we could see the countryside, where everybody worked, from little children to grown ups.

Almost every day we visited primary schools or middle schools. The Chinese children entertained us with songs and dances. Some of our group played recorders and a violin. We sang "Old MacDonald's Farm" and "Jingle Bells" for them.

We visited many kinds of factories. One made jade cravings. Others made sandalwood fans and processed silk from cocoons. The only time we had a briefing without tea was a Shanghai candy and soda pop factory. We had soda pop there.

At the sandalwood fan factory in Suchou, during a question-answer session with the head of the factory revolutionary committee, Tom Cowperthwaite, 13, asked what would happen if the demand for fans suddenly dropped. "Would workers be laid off or would pay scales drop or what?" he asked.

"The situation simply could not happen because all our production quotas are well planned," our host replied.

At the soda pop factory, we were told that women workers retire at 50 and men at 60. Betsy King, another teacher with us, asked why. The factory representative said this "shows our respect for women." He paused, and then added: "They usually do more housework than men."

We visited several homes on communes and in cities. One man showed us a two-room house he said he built for just over $1,000, about two years' wages.

One lesson we learned was that the Chinese waste nothing. People with baskets follow animals to collect manure for fertilizer, and Andl Hornbrook, 13, noted that wheat grows between the runways of the Nanking airport.

A highlight of the Shanghai stop was a visit to a hospital where we saw an ovarian tumor operation performed using acupuncture for the anesthetic. Tom Evans, 13, described it: "The patient was a woman of 35. The tumor was as big as a baseball. The woman was awake the whole time talking to a nurse. The operation cost only $7.50, plus slight charges for some extra medical care.

A ticklish problem

'Oh, feathers!' Indian art show finds snags

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Some laws can ruffle your feathers, the man who organized "Sacred Circles: 2000 Years of North American Indian Art" discovered during efforts to transport the famous exhibition from London to Kansas City.

The eagle feathers adorning many objects in the exhibition posed a particularly delicate problem, said Ralph T. Coe, director of the Nelson Gallery of Art-Atkins Museum of Fine Arts, where the show will open April 16.

"There is a law forbidding the sale or trading of objects containing migratory bird feathers, including eagle feathers. Beyond the obvious usage of feathers in Indian headdresses and warbonnets, other parts of the eagle show up in other applications," Coe said.

"All I could think of was the prospect of a bunch of U.S. marshals coming in and impounding loans from the British Museum and other lenders."

A series of laws enacted since 1940 and aimed at conserving certain migratory birds, restrict or prohibit the sale or possession of feathers or any other body parts of birds.

While American Indians may possess and exchange — but not sell — objects bearing eagle feathers, non-Indians without special permits are liable for prosecution. Recent interpretations of the laws have made it virtually impossible for non-Indians legally to possess Indian feather artifacts of any age without a government permit.

Other laws regulate the import and export of such items, and illegally imported objects containing body parts of certain endangered species may be impounded. Since 1971, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service — charged with enforcing these laws — has confiscated toy yaks, a crocodile foot, an armadillo guitar and a stuffed Andean condor, among other items.

In his international search for the "Sacred Circles" exhibition, Coe three years ago contacted the service about feathery objects expected to be transported in conjunction with showings in London and Kansas City. The service's law enforcement division located in Independence, Mo., pledged cooperation but requested certain conditions.

"An official assured me the last thing the government wanted to do was interfere with an important international exhibition," Coe said. "At the same time, he reminded me there were legal considerations to reckon with."

At first, the Fish and Wildlife Service wanted a complete list of everything in the exhibit containing an eagle feather or any other body part. Historically, Indians used many parts of the eagle, including feathers for decoration, talons for amulets — or charms — wingbones for whistles and the down for ceremonial sprinkling.

Coe explained that such an inventory would be likely to take years to compile. Many objects were found in corners and back rooms of museums and private collections. Some were only partially unwrapped when selected for the show. Objects which normally used feathers or body parts in certain ways didn't necessarily have them. Other artifacts may have contained them in places where even experts would not have guessed.

Finally, the service agreed to exempt the entire exhibit. Transportation permits were issued to allow articles belonging to American collectors and institutions to travel to England, to allow them to return and to permit objects belonging to European collectors to enter the United States.

Despite these permits, the feathery hassle was not yet over.

Because of inspection requirements the service was taken aback when it learned that the London to Kansas City journey was planned nonstop. New York is an official Fish and Wildlife port-of-entry. Kansas City is not.

Reminded of the enormous landing fees involved in a New York stop, the official relented.

"Sacred Circles," which opened last October at the Hayward Gallery in London, was assembled over a four-year period fron 90 museums and private collections in six countries. The 850 objects represent the largest assembly of Indian art ever put on public view.

The showing here will be the only one in the Western Hemisphere. After closing on June 19 the exhibition will be disbanded and the objects constituting it will be returned to their lenders in North America and Europe.

Over marshes

Clam shells used to make roads

By GUY COATES
Assoc. Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — with the help of two Turkishborn engineers, Louisiana has developed a method of building "floating" highways over marsh as soft as ice cream.

The main ingredient is a lot of clam shells. And Louisiana has a lot of clam shells.

"In 1971 we were just getting involved with relocation of U.S. 90 and needed to come up with a cheap method to cross a marsh," said Ali Kemahli, soil design engineer for the State Highway Department.

His division linked up with a Louisiana State University engineering team to research the idea of using clam shells for a highway embankment.

The university team was headed by Ara Arman, a civil engineering instructor who, like Kemahli, moved to the United States from Istanbul years ago.

They attended the same university in Istanbul, though at different times. And both attended the University of Texas, again at different times.

"It really wasn't a new idea," said Kemahli. "Oil companies had been building small work roads with clam shells for years. But no one had tried to build a major highway on such an embankment. Now we've got Alabama doing it."

The final decision to try the new method was made when the department was faced with building a 4.4-mile section of U.S. 90 near Raceland in the heart of the state's marsh country. The road will be completed in two years.

The questionable stretch near Raceland is so soft a demonstration film shows a man easily pushing a 12-foot pole into the marsh with one arm.

To use the traditional embankment of sand, the department would have had to dredge up tons of marsh mud and use an enormous amount of sand fill. After all that, there would be no guarantee the sand wouldn't just disappear into the marsh.

Even if enough sand could be poured, the cost of construction of the tiny stretch of road would be about $26 million. And an elevated highway would have cost about $30 million.

No dredging is required for a shell embankment. It's just a matter of dumping the shells into the marsh. The total cost of the 4.4 miles will be roughly $10 million.

Construction crews are building a five-foot-high shell embankment, allowing for about two feet of settling.

"The shell is lighter than soil or sand and virtually floats like a raft on the muck after just a little settling," one of Kemahli's engineers noted.

The team built a demonstration road first and then doublechecked in the lab.

A ton of sand is cheaper than a ton of shell but it doesn't take as much shell to build an embankment. And since there is no sand near the marsh, transportation costs also become a factor in the final cost.

"What the shell does is give us an alternative to sand and make the contracts more competitive," Kemahli said.

The present U.S. 90 coast road was built along natural ridges in the marsh and therefore is full of curves and dangerous, engineers said.

Illinois farmer, artist found

CHICAGO (AP) — The innocent rural charm of a bygone era is seen in the first exhibition of paintings, at the Art Institute of Chicago, by a 19thcentury Illinois farmer turned artist.

The artist, Ernst Damitz, until now has been unknown. The existence of his work became known when one of his descendants sought advice from the Art Institute about preservation of some of the pictures.

Esther Sparks said in an interview that none of the work had ever been sold through a dealer and that all of the pictures were owned by descendants of the artist or of his friends.

Damitz was what is known as a "naive artist." That is, the art is realistic but presented in an innocent, childlike manner. It differs from so-called primitive art in that it is technically better.

Damitz was born near the Baltic Sea in 1805, the descendant of an ancient Prussian noble family. He was reared in a manner befitting his family's rank, although the family fortune had declined.

In 1847, he took his wife and 11 children to Greenbush Township, Warren County, near Monmouth in Western Illinois, where he bought a 100-acre farm for $574. He lived in the area until he died in 1883.

When he was 55, Damitz turned over his farm to his youngest son and began to paint. Thirty examples of his efforts are to be seen in the exhibit.

Mrs. Sparks writes in the catalogue for the exhibition, "The first pictures — some of them done in the back of lined writing paper — are small and rather crude.

"They are like thousands of other amateur watercolors of the late 19th century," she said, adding, "There are few of this type, however, for he soon became capable of imaginative, complex and often dramatic compositions of outstanding workmanship."

Some of the scenes depicted are in the area where Damitz lived in Warren County, including his farmhouse and the terraced vineyard behind.

Others depict exotic places he never saw, such as Burma, Lapland, Peru, Naples and San Francisco, which were perhaps inspired by travel books. Still others are themes from history, the Bible and folklore.

While the perspective is sometimes off, the pictures do have a naive charm, and the colors remain strong and rich, even after nearly a century.

Ban on sex papers 'legal'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A district attorney says sexually explicit publications can be legally kept off street newsracks.

Dist. Atty. John Van de Kamp gave the county Board of Supervisors his opinion Tuesday on a proposed ordinance that would ban such sales.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, the ordinance's sponsor, called a public hearing on the issue for next Tuesday.

DWINDLING RESERVE — Don Wilson, superintendent of Pardee Reservoir near Jackson, Calif., looks far below at water that in a normal year would be only a few feet below him. And there would not be the dry land showing as it is in this photo. The west's system of dams and reservoirs is already shrunk by drought, with less snow pack than usual in the Rockies the runoff from the spring melt will not be enough to carry states through the dry summer ahead.

Illinois farmer, artist found

CHICAGO (AP) — The innocent rural charm of a bygone era is seen in the first exhibition of paintings, at the Art Institute of Chicago, by a 19thcentury Illinois farmer turned artist.

The artist, Ernst Damitz, until now has been unknown. The existence of his work became known when one of his descendants sought advice from the Art Institute about preservation of some of the pictures.

Esther Sparks said in an interview that none of the work had ever been sold through a dealer and that all of the pictures were owned by descendants of the artist or of his friends.

Damitz was what is known as a "naive artist." That is, the art is realistic but presented in an innocent, childlike manner. It differs from so-called primitive art in that it is technically better.

Damitz was born near the Baltic Sea in 1805, the descendant of an ancient Prussian noble family. He was reared in a manner befitting his family's rank, although the family fortune had declined.

In 1847, he took his wife and 11 children to Greenbush Township, Warren County, near Monmouth in Western Illinois, where he bought a 100-acre farm for $574. He lived in the area until he died in 1883.

When he was 55, Damitz turned over his farm to his youngest son and began to paint. Thirty examples of his efforts are to be seen in the exhibit.

Mrs. Sparks writes in the catalogue for the exhibition, "The first pictures — some of them done in the back of lined writing paper — are small and rather crude.

"They are like thousands of other amateur watercolors of the late 19th century," she said, adding, "There are few of this type, however, for he soon became capable of imaginative, complex and often dramatic compositions of outstanding workmanship."

Some of the scenes depicted are in the area where Damitz lived in Warren County, including his farmhouse and the terraced vineyard behind.

Others depict exotic places he never saw, such as Burma, Lapland, Peru, Naples and San Francisco, which were perhaps inspired by travel books. Still others are themes from history, the Bible and folklore.

While the perspective is sometimes off, the pictures do have a naive charm, and the colors remain strong and rich, even after nearly a century.

DWINDLING RESERVE — Don Wilson, superintendent of Pardee Reservoir near Jackson, Calif., looks far below at water that in a normal year would be only a few feet below him. And there would not be the dry land showing as it is in this photo. The west's system of dams and reservoirs is already shrunk by drought, with less snow pack than usual in the Rockies the runoff from the spring melt will not be enough to carry states through the dry summer ahead.

Ban on sex papers 'legal'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A district attorney says sexually explicit publications can be legally kept off street newsracks.

Dist. Atty. John Van de Kamp gave the county Board of Supervisors his opinion Tuesday on a proposed ordinance that would ban such sales.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, the ordinance's sponsor, called a public hearing on the issue for next Tuesday.

HIGH PARK HUCKSTER — A black squirrel appears to be shaking hands with a woman visiting Toronto's High Park recently. Actually, the little rodent was looking for a handout.

Tree with shady past

GENOA, Nev. (AP) — A cottonwood tree's a cottonwood tree, right? Wrong. There are some special varieties, like this tiny town's "hanging cottonwood."

The 120-year-old tree, recently selected by the American Forestry Association for inclusion in its "Famous and Historic Trees" publication, was used by vigilantes who hung a drifter in 1897.

Those who took part in the lynching are said to have been haunted by the victim's curse. Many of them died violently in later years, according to rancher Arnold Trimmer, on whose land the tree still stands.

But the limb from which Adam Uber was hanged is now gone — sawed off after the hanging by Lawrence Frey, former owner of the Trimmer ranch, who as a 15-year-old boy saw the incident. Trimmer has lived in Genoa, just south of Carson City on the East Slope of the Sierra Nevada, since just after the turn of the century. He said the story was that Uber shot and killed a popular teamster, Hans Anderson, in a quarrel over 25 cents.

While in jail here, he was hauled out by a vigilante mob after the sheriff left the door unlocked and keys to the cell on his desk, Trimmer said.

No one admitted taking part in the lynching. The sheriff faced a court action for dereliction of duty but was absolved.

But that's only the start of the story. Trimmer said that after the lynching a team of horses passing the tree spooked, and a man fell off a wagon and broke his leg. The leg eventually had to be amputated and rumors started that Uber's ghost was present.

After another horse runaway occurred in the same area, some townsfolk wouldn't even take the road which passed the tree — still a main route in and out of the community.

Ione Fettic, another long-time resident here, said one of the lynching party members lost both his children in tragic mishaps; two other vigilantes went berserk; another committed suicide; one was trapped in a horse-drawn pump, and another lost a son in a hunting accident.

Mrs. Fettic said a girl who made masks for the lynch mob eventually committed suicide, and her cousin, who helped, died in a mental home.

Trimmer said the last incident was in 1933 when a man fell from the tree and broke his back.

"But then, some people said he was a drinking man," said Trimmer, his eyes twinkling.

Slippery theft is reported

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Big Red Ranch on the outskirts of Kansas City reported rustlers struck over the weekend and made off with a half million head of prime stock.

Lee Struble, owner of the ranch, said that judging from tracks at the scene, the thieves used a truck in the theft of $2,500 worth of earth worms.

"Whoever did it knew what they were doing," Struble said as he surveyed the three worm beds that had been all but emptied of the grubby creatures.

"My guess is that it was either someone who wanted to get into business or a smallscale grower who decided to get bigger at our expense. I don't think there's a fence in the world who'll buy worms," he said.

On final approach

Missionary pilots pray for landing

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. (AP) — The winds that burble over Holston Mountain are enough to make a pilot mutter a prayer on his final approach to the narrow airstrip nestled between the hills.

But it's not just the capricious mountain winds or the final approach with a mountain at the tip of each wing that makes prayer a regular thing at Elizabethton's airport.

This is a place where missionary pilots and mechanics are trained to give the gospel wings so it can reach some of the most treacherous flying country in the world.

The training is part of a no-nonsense 27-month course sponsored by Chicago's Moody Bible Institute.

"Unless they've got some motivation other than the joy of flying, we don't have time for them," says Robert M. Rich, Moody's pre-aviation coordinator. "This is not a glory thing. We're not interested in training people who are in it for the fun of flying..."

Although the missionary airmen and mechanics spend two years studying Bible and college-level courses at Moody's main campus in Chicago before they go to "flight camp," they will never preach.

"Everything is specialized nowadays, even in the mission fields," says one former mission pilot. "We provide the transportation so that others can spread the word of the Lord.. ."

Moody always has more applicants than it can handle and, during the first week of flight camp at the modern Moody Aviation facility, instructors weed out about half of the 40 finalists.

"We are looking for committed Christians," Rich says. "We aren't training people for the airlines... We don't make them sign a pledge or anything, but almost all of our students go to the mission fields."

The 20 or so who make the final cut earn a private pilot's license and spend a year studying and working for an aircraft and powerplant mechanic's license. The final year is devoted to earning a commercial pilot's license and working in the school's shops for additional maintenance experience.

There is no tuition, but costs of flying time, tools and supplies amount to more than $10,500. Students must foot the bill, and there is no time for part-time jobs.

One of those near the end of training is Mike Childers, 23, a member of an Elizabethton family who dreamed of an Air Force career.

"I wanted to be a pilot at an early age," Childers said recently as he checked the weather for a grueling low-level training flight through East Tennessee's mountains.

Childers was disqualified for the Air Force Academy because he failed to pass a stringent physical.

"It wasn't quite the blow I thought it would be," Childers recalls. "I felt like the Lord had something for me to do for Him."

Like other Moody students, Childers completed two years of work at Chicago, then came home to Elizabethton for aviation training.

Students study airframe repair, electronics and engines. Each must equip himself with about $1,500 worth of tools which get a thorough workout before the course is completed.

Once qualified as mechanics, they return to the air to earn a commercial pilot's license.

The advanced training includes exposure to lack of navigation equipment, narrow mountaintop runways and the lack of comfort they will face in the mission fields. Elizabethton's single paved runway is well suited to show young airmen what happens when blustery winds and mountains join forces.

When his training ends, Childers hopes to join the Missionary Aviation Fellowship in Fullerton, Calif., one of several missionary organizations that use Moody graduates.

Childers wants to go to South America, but he says he will go "wherever the Lord calls me."

On final approach

Missionary pilots pray for landing

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. (AP) — The winds that burble over Holston Mountain are enough to make a pilot mutter a prayer on his final approach to the narrow airstrip nestled between the hills.

But it's not just the capricious mountain winds or the final approach with a mountain at the tip of each wing that makes prayer a regular thing at Elizabethton's airport.

This is a place where missionary pilots and mechanics are trained to give the gospel wings so it can reach some of the most treacherous flying country in the world.

The training is part of a no-nonsense 27-month course sponsored by Chicago's Moody Bible Institute.

"Unless they've got some motivation other than the joy of flying, we don't have time for them," says Robert M. Rich, Moody's pre-aviation coordinator. "This is not a glory thing. We're not interested in training people who are in it for the fun of flying..."

Although the missionary airmen and mechanics spend two years studying Bible and college-level courses at Moody's main campus in Chicago before they go to "flight camp," they will never preach.

"Everything is specialized nowadays, even in the mission fields," says one former mission pilot. "We provide the transportation so that others can spread the word of the Lord.. ."

Moody always has more applicants than it can handle and, during the first week of flight camp at the modern Moody Aviation facility, instructors weed out about half of the 40 finalists.

"We are looking for committed Christians," Rich says. "We aren't training people for the airlines... We don't make them sign a pledge or anything, but almost all of our students go to the mission fields."

The 20 or so who make the final cut earn a private pilot's license and spend a year studying and working for an aircraft and powerplant mechanic's license. The final year is devoted to earning a commercial pilot's license and working in the school's shops for additional maintenance experience.

There is no tuition, but costs of flying time, tools and supplies amount to more than $10,500. Students must foot the bill, and there is no time for part-time jobs.

One of those near the end of training is Mike Childers, 23, a member of an Elizabethton family who dreamed of an Air Force career.

"I wanted to be a pilot at an early age," Childers said recently as he checked the weather for a grueling low-level training flight through East Tennessee's mountains.

Childers was disqualified for the Air Force Academy because he failed to pass a stringent physical.

"It wasn't quite the blow I thought it would be," Childers recalls. "I felt like the Lord had something for me to do for Him."

Like other Moody students, Childers completed two years of work at Chicago, then came home to Elizabethton for aviation training.

Students study airframe repair, electronics and engines. Each must equip himself with about $1,500 worth of tools which get a thorough workout before the course is completed.

Once qualified as mechanics, they return to the air to earn a commercial pilot's license.

The advanced training includes exposure to lack of navigation equipment, narrow mountaintop runways and the lack of comfort they will face in the mission fields. Elizabethton's single paved runway is well suited to show young airmen what happens when blustery winds and mountains join forces.

When his training ends, Childers hopes to join the Missionary Aviation Fellowship in Fullerton, Calif., one of several missionary organizations that use Moody graduates.

Childers wants to go to South America, but he says he will go "wherever the Lord calls me."

Powell triumphs

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

John Powell, a formerly fat San Jose policeman, won the discus throw at the Mt. San Antonio Relays for the fourth time in five years Saturday afternoon.

Powell's throw of 219 feet, 2 inches was enough to beat Mac Wilkins, the man who broke the world record at MSAC last year and went on to win the Olympic gold medal in Montreal. Wilkins threw 216-11.

After winning the event, Powell gave much of the credit for his throw to his recent loss of 25 pounds.

"My daughter said, 'Daddy, you're fat,' " recalled the Olympic bronze medal winner. "I didn't want to be a fat daddy, so I quit eating beef. I eat chicken and fish, but I think you lose weight if you quit eating beef."

Powell's winning throw, which came late in the afternoon, was the highlight of the 19th annual MSAC Relays, but probably the most excitement of the meet was provided by a couple of 400-meter relays.

First, in the junior college race, Houston McTear anchored Santa Monica City College to a meet record 40.55 and a one-third second win over runnerup Mesa of Arizona.

In the next event, the invitational 400 relay, Steve Riddick provided the excitement. Running anchor for the Philadelphia Pioneers, Riddick blazed past the Tobias Striders' Leon Brown for another meet record — 39.33.

Mike Boit shattered the meet mark with a 1:47.2 clocking in the 800 and Derald Harris of Los Medanos College set a meet standard of 20.6 in the 200.

But the marks were a bit disappointing for some of the world-class athletes at the meet.

Olympic champion Edwin Moses, for example, tripped over the first hurdle, nipped the last and barely held off Cal State Los Angeles sophomore Sam Turner for a 49.9-second victory in the 400 intermediates. Turner, only 19, ran a 50.0.

The heralded high hurdles failed to produce the good mark that was hoped for, but did provide an excellent finish. Dedy Cooper and Willie Davenport, who was inducted into the MSAC Relays Hall of Fame Saturday, went over the final hurdle together, but Cooper outsprinted 33-year-old Davenport to win in 13.74 seconds.

John Gregorio, a product of Ganesha High and MSAC, took second in the 5,000-meter run in 14:16.0.

Former Upland High runners Casey Cox and Steve Scott helped UC Irvine win the college two mile relay. But in the sprint medley relay, which Scott was to anchor for Irvine, the Anteaters botched a handoff and dropped out of the race before Scott's leg. Claremont-Mudd placed second in that event in 3:31.4.

Pomona school teacher Stan Whitley, a La Verne resident, was runnerup in the long jump and Reynaldo Brown took second in the high jump. He won the event from 1971 through 1976.

MSAC did quite well in hurdle events. Todd Kaberline ran 14.3 in a high hurdles heat and, along with Anthony Greene, Dave Sherman and Bill Hanson, took second in the high hurdle shuttle in 59.9 seconds. Greene, Sherman, Kris Covey and Mike Campa ran a 3:39.5 in the mile intermediate hurdle relay, bettering the national record of 3:40.7 MSAC set in 1976, but Pasadena did even better in 3:38.9.

Upland and Montclair placed third and fourth, respectively, in the invitational high school two mile relay and Pomona took fifth in the mile relay in a seasonal best 3:25.25.

Powell was named the Field Athlete of the Meet, as he was in 1975, and Boit was chosen Track Athlete of the Meet. Debbi Brill, who won the high jump at 6-3½, was named women's Athlete of the Meet.

Davenport makes H of F

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

The qualifications for an athlete to enter the Mt. San Antonio Relays Hall of Fame are fairly simple.

An athlete only needs to have made an outstanding contribution to track and field as well as the MSAC Relays.

Willie Davenport has accomplished both of these qualifications as he won the Olympic gold medal in the 1968 games at Mexico City. He has also turned in several outstanding performances in previous MSAC Relay appearances and this year he finished second to Dede Cooper in the 110 meter high hurdles.

Two other performers at the MSAC Relays are also making strong bids to go down in Relay history at MSAC.

John Powell, who dethroned Mac Wilkins with a discus throw of 219-2, was named Athlete of the Meet for the second time in three years. Powell also won the coveted honor in 1975.

And Debbie Brill from Canada with her jump of 6-3¼ in the high jump was named the Women Athlete of the Meet for the second consecutive year.

Davenport becomes the fourth member to be selected to the Relays Hall of Fame. He joins world record holders Bob Seagren, Ralph Boston and Hilmer Lodge, the man who started the MSAC Relays in 1959.

Davenport has done it all," said MSAC's head track coach John Norton. "He's a fine gentleman and he's competed here several times. He's a credit to track and field so we'd like to install him as a permanent part of our tradition in track and field at MSAC."

Davenport and Cooper were even until the final few meters of the 110 meter high hurdles. Both men were even after clearing the seventh hurdle but Cooper was able to put on a burst of speed to beat Davenport by a tenth of a second. Davenport finished with a time of 13.8 to Cooper's 13.7.

"I thought I did pretty good," noted Davenport who works on the Mayor's Council on Youth Opportunity in Baton Rouge.

WILLIE DAVENPORT

"I was where I wanted to be at the seventh hurdle to make my move, but I just could not pull it off. The entire field was top notch in the hurdles as Dede was lucky enough to win the event.

"It's a great honor being named to the MSAC Relays Hall of Fame," added Davenport. "I don't know what else to say except it's a great feeling to be inducted into MSAC's Hall of Fame."

Wilt Chamberlain, the former NBA and Laker basketball star, who is on hand for the 19th running of the Relays commented, "Davenport is a good example of a very consistent performer. He goes out and does a good job every time he runs an event." Davenport plans to run at Fresno on May 7. "I hope to get my program together as I'm pointing for the AAU at UCLA on June 9-10-11, and the World Cup at Dusseldorf, Germany on Sept. 2-3-4."

This is the last year that track and field fans will have a chance to watch Davenport in action. He will retire at the end of the '77 campaign to continue his work on the Mayor's council in Baton Rougue.

Powell won the discus title on his last throw of the afternoon as he bested Wilkins as he hurled the discus 219 feet, 2 inches. Wilkins, who set the Relays' record last year at 226-11, could do no better than 216-11 in his six tosses.

Powell's winning toss brought a chorus of astonishment from the crowd but it was no where near Wilkins' record toss of 1976. Powell also won the discus in 1975 with a heave of 216-5 as he was named Athlete of the Meet.

Miss Brill easily won the women's high jump after Joni Huntley was scratched from the event as she improved upon the mark she set in last year's Relays.

The Canadian girl broke the meet record of 5-10½ as she left the field of 11 athletes behind at 5-9.

Bernal wins 1st

Former Cal Poly hurler Vic Bernal picked up his first major league victory Saturday night as the San Diego Padres won the second game of its doubleheader with Houston.

Bernal pitched four innings of scoreless ball in relief after coming into the contest in the fifth inning.

He allowed just two hits and fanned two batters as the Padres won, 11-8.

Dodger rally downs Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Reggie Smith's single to right with one down in the ninth chased home Dave Lopes with the go-ahead run and triggered the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday night.

Lopes started the rally with a single to center and went to third when Bill Russell singled up the middle. Smith then lined his hit to right off Dick Ruthven, 3-1. Ron Cey's sacrifice fly later scored an insurance run for the Dodgers.

Charlie Hough, 3-0, was the winner in relief, working three innings.

Home runs by Cey and Rick Monday accounted for a four-run Dodger explosion in the third inning. Russell started the rally with a double to right-center and then went to third on catcher Biff Pocoroba's passed ball. Reggie Smith walked and Cey followed with a three-run homer, his fourth of the season, over the right-center field fence.

After Steve Garvey fanned, Monday hit his second homer of the year over the right field fence.

Atlanta rallied for three runs in the bottom of the third. Ruthven and Jerry Royster singled and Willie Montanez walked, loading the bases. Jeff Burroughs then beat out an infield single towards short and Gary Matthews followed with a two-run single to left.

The Braves tied it in the fourth on a single by Rod Gilbreath, a sacrifice and a runscoring single by Rowland Office.

The game was delayed in the sixth inning for an hour because of rain.

Ruthven gave up two hits and walked two in the second inning, but escaped without a Dodger run.

Cey lined a single to right, but was quickly erased when Garvey hit into a double play. Monday then drew a walk, and Dusty Baker lined a check-swing double to right, with Monday stopping at third.

Steve Yeager was intentionally walked, loading the bases, and Hooton forced Yeager at second to end the threat.

Office opened the first for Atlanta by beating out a swinging bunt in front of the plate, was sacrificed to second, but stayed there when Hooton retired the next two batters.

After Monday's third-inning solo homer, Ruthven retired nine straight batters before Baker lined a single to center with two down in the sixth, moments before heavy rain forced a delay.

Halos disappoint Bat Night crowd

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

ANAHEIM — It seems tradition says the Angels almost always lose when they draw a large crowd at Anaheim Stadium.

Tradition stayed at the Big A Saturday night as the Halos fell to the Milwaukee Brewers, 4-1, before 42,368 Bat Night fans, the largest turnout at Anaheim since May 10, 1975 when 43,112 attended the first Jacket Night contest.

The Angels could have used some of the bats from the stands as three Milwaukee pitchers held the Halos to just three hits.

All the frustrations came to the top in the seventh inning when the Angels loaded the bases on three consecutive walks with no outs yet didn't score.

Starter Bill Travers, the first lefthander to start against the Angels this season, left the game after giving up walks to Dave Chalk and Bruce Bochte.

Reliever Bob McClure came in and walked Terry Humphrey on five pitches to load the bases.

But McClure was able to pick off pinch-runner Ike Hampton, who was subbing for Humphrey, when the southpaw caught the runner leading the wrong way.

Jerry Remy, the batter, followed with a soft fly to right which couldn't advance Chalk and righthander Bill Castro came in to get Bobby Grich on a force play to end the inning.

Castro then retired the Angels in order in the eighth and ninth innings to pick up his third save of the season.

The Angels only run came in the fourth when Joe Rudi's sacrifice fly scored Bobby Bonds, who walked and advanced to third on Don Baylor's double.

ANGEL ANGLES — The weekend series concludes this afternoon at 1 p.m. with Frank Tanana facing Jim Slaton.

The new Oakland A's conclude the homestand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Milwaukee's Danny Thomas was scratched from the starting lineup when he failed to show up at the park. He stays away from Friday night and Saturday afternoon games because of his membership in the World Wide Church of God.

Marshall jumps Atlanta Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Reliever Mike Marshall was not in uniform Saturday night when the Atlanta Braves faced the Los Angeles Dodgers, apparantly having bolted the team for the second time this year.

Bill Lucas, director of player personnel for the Braves, said Marshall had told him he would not be at the game, and asked for a meeting Sunday with Lucas and owner Ted Turner to discuss his problems.

Marshall left the Braves during spring training, two days before the season opener to return to Michigan because of his legal problems with Michigan State University.

Marshall has pitched in only four games this year with a 1-0 record and a 9.00 E.R.A. The 1974 Cy Young Award winner has yet to record a save.

There was speculation that Marshall may be upset because of the Braves continued use of rookie Rick Camp as their number one reliever so far this year.

Canadiens claim opener with N.Y.

MONTREAL (AP) — Guy Lafleur and Steve Shutt scored goals 1:42 apart early in the third period Saturday night to cap a comeback and give the Montreal Canadiens a 4-3 triumph over the New York Islanders in the opening game of their National Hockey League semifinal series. The two goals helped overcome a three-goal performance by New York's Billy Harris.

Lafleur, who scored 56 regular-season goals, scored at 2:25 of the third period and Shutt— who had 60 in the regular season—tallied at 4:07 for the Canadiens, who trailed 3-1 after 49 seconds had been played in the middle period.

Murray Wilson brought Montreal within 3-2 at 9:40 of the second session, then the flurry by Lafleur and Shutt gave the defending champion Canadiens their 10th consecutive playoff victory while halting the New York winning streak at six games.

Game Two in the best-of-seven series will be played here Tuesday night.

Carlos Zarate knocks out Zamora in fourth round

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Carlos Zarate knocked out his former sparring partner Alfonso Zamora in the fourth round of a battle between two unbeaten bantamweight boxing champions Saturday.

Zarate, 119, the World Boxing Council champion, bloodied Zamora's nose in the first round, bruised him around both eyes in the second and knocked him down in the third. The end came at 1:11 of the fourth.

Zamora, 119¾, the World Boxing Association champ, was down twice from left hooks in the fourth before his father threw in the towel and then rushed across the ring to attack Zarate's manager Cuyo Hernandez.

Handlers and police seperated the two, who have been at odds since Hernandez once managed both Zarate and Zamora, both of Mexico City.

Neither fighter had his title at stake in the scrap, scheduled for 10 rounds at the Forum. Yet Zamora lost prestige after winning all 28 of his fights via knockout.

It was Zarate's 47th triumph, his 46th by knockout, without a defeat

The taller Zarate, boxing in more classical style against the onrushing Zamora, opened the second going to the body and then switched to left and right combination to the head. A left hook shook Zamora late in the round.

In the opening seconds of the fourth, a Zarate left hook put Zamora down. He was up before the full count and went to the attack, only to go down again close to his own corner from another left hook.

Before the count began, Alfonso Zamora Sr. tossed in a towel and the long-awaited fight between the two 118-pound world titlists was over.

At the end, Zamora's face was badly bruised with Zarate virtually unmarked, despite the whirlwind and roundhouse punches thrown by the 23-year-old Zamora.

Warriors to host Lakers today

OAKLAND (AP) — The Golden State Warriors will play gracious host to the Los Angeles Lakers today in their National Basketball Association playoff and hope skyscraper Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will stay home.

The Lakers' 7-foot-2 center has become the Grim Reaper of the best-of-seven quarterfinals—hanging around the basket to stuff his points in and keep the Warriors' out.

"I was the man at the right time," Jabbar said after his dazzling one-man show Friday night that left the Warriors on the short end of the 95-86 final score.

"The pressure is on Golden State now, and I don't feel that we will let down. We want to win at least one up there," Jabbar said.

The Warriors will have two chances on their home court for a win, after a pair of defeats in Los Angeles.

Golden State's coach Al Attles admits Jabbar is the man to beat and is looking for a strategy to cut the big man down to size.

In Friday's showdown, Attles tried doubling up with both centers, Robert Parish and Clifford Ray, on the floor at once— a tactic that was successful in the earlier series against the Detroit Pistons.

With it all, Jabbar managed 40 points, 19 rebounds and 9 blocked shots

"Evidently the system hasn't worked as well but we'll make adjustments," Attles said.

Even if Golden State figures out how to stop Jabbar, they still must rev up a consistent offense of their own and slow down on costly mistakes.

"It's pretty hard to win," said Attles "when the ball won't go through the hoop."

The coach was bemoaning adeep-freeze second quarter Friday when Golden State threw up 23 shots and only 3 went down. Dhey ended the half with a dismal 30 points.

"As far as I'm concerned, the game ended the way it began with turnovers," said Attles.

Golden State had 22 turnovers for the evening, five in the first few minutes and four in the last three and a half minutes when the Warriors were trailing by only two points.

WINNING FORM

John Powell unleashes the 219-2 discus throw that won him the Field Athlete of the Meet Award Saturday at the MSAC Relays. Powell defeated Olympic champion Mac Wilkins.

Powell triumphs

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

John Powell, a formerly fat San Jose policeman, won the discus throw at the Mt. San Antonio Relays for the fourth time in five years Saturday afternoon.

Powell's throw of 219 feet, 2 inches was enough to beat Mac Wilkins, the man who broke the world record at MSAC last year and went on to win the Olympic gold medal in Montreal. Wilkins threw 216-11.

After winning the event, Powell gave much of the credit for his throw to his recent loss of 25 pounds.

"My daughter said, 'Daddy, you're fat,' " recalled the Olympic bronze medal winner. "I didn't want to be a fat daddy, so I quit eating beef. I eat chicken and fish, but I think you lose weight if you quit eating beef."

Powell's winning throw, which came late in the afternoon, was the highlight of the 19th annual MSAC Relays, but probably the most excitement of the meet was provided by a couple of 400-meter relays.

First, in the junior college race, Houston McTear anchored Santa Monica City College to a meet record 40.55 and a one-third second win over runnerup Mesa of Arizona.

In the next event, the invitational 400 relay, Steve Riddick provided the excitement. Running anchor for the Philadelphia Pioneers, Riddick blazed past the Tobias Striders' Leon Brown for another meet record — 39.33.

Mike Boit shattered the meet mark with a 1:47.2 clocking in the 800 and Derald Harris of Los Medanos College set a meet standard of 20.6 in the 200.

But the marks were a bit disappointing for some of the world-class athletes at the meet.

Olympic champion Edwin Moses, for example, tripped over the first hurdle, nipped the last and barely held off Cal State Los Angeles sophomore Sam Turner for a 49.9-second victory in the 400 intermediates. Turner, only 19, ran a 50.0.

The heralded high hurdles failed to produce the good mark that was hoped for, but did provide an excellent finish. Dedy Cooper and Willie Davenport, who was inducted into the MSAC Relays Hall of Fame Saturday, went over the final hurdle together, but Cooper outsprinted 33-year-old Davenport to win in 13.74 seconds.

John Gregorio, a product of Ganesha High and MSAC, took second in the 5,000-meter run in 14:16.0.

Former Upland High runners Casey Cox and Steve Scott helped UC Irvine win the college two mile relay. But in the sprint medley relay, which Scott was to anchor for Irvine, the Anteaters botched a handoff and dropped out of the race before Scott's leg. Claremont-Mudd placed second in that event in 3:31.4.

Pomona school teacher Stan Whitley, a La Verne resident, was runnerup in the long jump and Reynaldo Brown took second in the high jump. He won the event from 1971 through 1976.

MSAC did quite well in hurdle events. Todd Kaberline ran 14.3 in a high hurdles heat and, along with Anthony Greene, Dave Sherman and Bill Hanson, took second in the high hurdle shuttle in 59.9 seconds. Greene, Sherman, Kris Covey and Mike Campa ran a 3:39.5 in the mile intermediate hurdle relay, bettering the national record of 3:40.7 MSAC set in 1976, but Pasadena did even better in 3:38.9.

Upland and Montclair placed third and fourth, respectively, in the invitational high school two mile relay and Pomona took fifth in the mile relay in a seasonal best 3:25.25.

Powell was named the Field Athlete of the Meet, as he was in 1975, and Boit was chosen Track Athlete of the Meet. Debbi Brill, who won the high jump at 6-3½, was named women's Athlete of the Meet.

Davenport makes H of F

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

The qualifications for an athlete to enter the Mt. San Antonio Relays Hall of Fame are fairly simple.

An athlete only needs to have made an outstanding contribution to track and field as well as the MSAC Relays.

Willie Davenport has accomplished both of these qualifications as he won the Olympic gold medal in the 1968 games at Mexico City. He has also turned in several outstanding performances in previous MSAC Relay appearances and this year he finished second to Dede Cooper in the 110 meter high hurdles.

Two other performers at the MSAC Relays are also making strong bids to go down in Relay history at MSAC.

John Powell, who dethroned Mac Wilkins with a discus throw of 219-2, was named Athlete of the Meet for the second time in three years. Powell also won the coveted honor in 1975.

And Debbie Brill from Canada with her jump of 6-3¼ in the high jump was named the Women Athlete of the Meet for the second consecutive year.

Davenport becomes the fourth member to be selected to the Relays Hall of Fame. He joins world record holders Bob Seagren, Ralph Boston and Hilmer Lodge, the man who started the MSAC Relays in 1959.

Davenport has done it all," said MSAC's head track coach John Norton. "He's a fine gentleman and he's competed here several times. He's a credit to track and field so we'd like to install him as a permanent part of our tradition in track and field at MSAC."

Davenport and Cooper were even until the final few meters of the 110 meter high hurdles. Both men were even after clearing the seventh hurdle but Cooper was able to put on a burst of speed to beat Davenport by a tenth of a second. Davenport finished with a time of 13.8 to Cooper's 13.7.

"I thought I did pretty good," noted Davenport who works on the Mayor's Council on Youth Opportunity in Baton Rouge.

WILLIE DAVENPORT

"I was where I wanted to be at the seventh hurdle to make my move, but I just could not pull it off. The entire field was top notch in the hurdles as Dede was lucky enough to win the event.

"It's a great honor being named to the MSAC Relays Hall of Fame," added Davenport. "I don't know what else to say except it's a great feeling to be inducted into MSAC's Hall of Fame."

Wilt Chamberlain, the former NBA and Laker basketball star, who is on hand for the 19th running of the Relays commented, "Davenport is a good example of a very consistent performer. He goes out and does a good job every time he runs an event." Davenport plans to run at Fresno on May 7. "I hope to get my program together as I'm pointing for the AAU at UCLA on June 9-10-11, and the World Cup at Dusseldorf, Germany on Sept. 2-3-4."

This is the last year that track and field fans will have a chance to watch Davenport in action. He will retire at the end of the '77 campaign to continue his work on the Mayor's council in Baton Rouge.

Powell won the discus title on his last throw of the afternoon as he bested Wilkins as he hurled the discus 219 feet, 2 inches. Wilkins, who set the Relays' record last year at 226-11, could do no better than 216-11 in his six tosses.

Powell's winning toss brought a chorus of astonishment from the crowd but it was no where near Wilkins' record toss of 1976. Powell also won the discus in 1975 with a heave of 216-5 as he was named Athlete of the Meet.

Miss Brill easily won the women's high jump after Joni Huntley was scratched from the event as she improved upon the mark she set in last year's Relays.

The Canadian girl broke the meet record of 5-10½ as she left the field of 11 athletes behind at 5-9.

•Bernal wins 1st

Former Cal Poly hurler Vic Bernal picked up his first major league victory Saturday night as the San Diego Padres won the second game of its doubleheader with Houston.

Bernal pitched four innings of scoreless ball in relief after coming into the contest in the fifth inning.

He allowed just two hits and fanned two batters as the Padres won, 11-8.

Dodger rally downs Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Reggie Smith's single to right with one down in the ninth chased home Dave Lopes with the go-ahead run and triggered the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday night.

Lopes started the rally with a single to center and went to third when Bill Russell singled up the middle. Smith then lined his hit to right off Dick Ruthven, 3-1. Ron Cey's sacrifice fly later scored an insurance run for the Dodgers.

Charlie Hough, 3-0, was the winner in relief, working three innings.

Home runs by Cey and Rick Monday accounted for a four-run Dodger explosion in the third inning. Russell started the rally with a double to right-center and then went to third on catcher Biff Pocoroba's passed ball. Reggie Smith walked and Cey followed with a three-run homer, his fourth of the season, over the right-center field fence.

After Steve Garvey fanned, Monday hit his second homer of the year over the right field fence.

Atlanta rallied for three runs in the bottom of the third. Ruthven and Jerry Royster singled and Willie Montanez walked, loading the bases. Jeff Burroughs then beat out an infield single towards short and Gary Matthews followed with a two-run single to left.

The Braves tied it in the fourth on a single by Rod Gilbreath, a sacrifice and a runscoring single by Rowland Office.

The game was delayed in the sixth inning for an hour because of rain.

Ruthven gave up two hits and walked two in the second inning, but escaped without a Dodger run.

Cey lined a single to right, but was quickly erased when Garvey hit into a double play. Monday then drew a walk, and Dusty Baker lined a check-swing double to right, with Monday stopping at third.

Steve Yeager was intentionally walked, loading the bases, and Hooton forced Yeager at second to end the threat.

Office opened the first for Atlanta by beating out a swinging bunt in front of the plate, was sacrificed to second, but stayed there when Hooton retired the next two batters.

After Monday's third-inning solo homer, Ruthven retired nine straight batters before Baker lined a single to center with two down in the sixth, moments before heavy rain forced a delay.

Halos disappoint Bat Night crowd

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

ANAHEIM — It seems tradition says the Angels almost always lose when they draw a large crowd at Anaheim Stadium.

Tradition stayed at the Big A Saturday night as the Halos fell to the Milwaukee Brewers, 4-1, before 42,368 Bat Night fans, the largest turnout at Anaheim since May 10, 1975 when 43,112 attended the first Jacket Night contest.

The Angels could have used some of the bats from the stands as three Milwaukee pitchers held the Halos to just three hits.

All the frustrations came to the top in the seventh inning when the Angels loaded the bases on three consecutive walks with no outs yet didn't score.

Starter Bill Travers, the first lefthander to start against the Angels this season, left the game after giving up walks to Dave Chalk and Bruce Bochte.

Reliever Bob McClure came in and walked Terry Humphrey on five pitches to load the bases.

But McClure was able to pick off pinch-runner Ike Hampton, who was subbing for Humphrey, when the southpaw caught the runner leading the wrong way.

Jerry Remy, the batter, followed with a soft fly to right which couldn't advance Chalk and righthander Bill Castro came in to get Bobby Grich on a force play to end the inning.

Castro then retired the Angels in order in the eighth and ninth innings to pick up his third save of the season.

The Angels only run came in the fourth when Joe Rudi's sacrifice fly scored Bobby Bonds, who walked and advanced to third on Don Baylor's double.

ANGEL ANGLES — The weekend series concludes this afternoon at 1 p.m. with Frank Tanana facing Jim Slaton.

The new Oakland A's conclude the homestand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Milwaukee's Danny Thomas was scratched from the starting lineup when he failed to show up at the park. He stays away from Friday night and Saturday afternoon games because of his membership in the World Wide Church of God.

Canadiens claim opener with N.Y.

MONTREAL (AP) — Guy Lafleur and Steve Shutt scored goals 1:42 apart early in the third period Saturday night to cap a comeback and give the Montreal Canadiens a 4-3 triumph over the New York Islanders in the opening game of their National Hockey League semifinal series. The two goals helped overcome a three-goal performance by New York's Billy Harris.

Lafleur, who scored 56 regular-season goals, scored at 2:25 of the third period and Shutt— who had 60 in the regular season—tallied at 4:07 for the Canadiens, who trailed 3-1 after 49 seconds had been played in the middle period.

Murray Wilson brought Montreal within 3-2 at 9:40 of the second session, then the flurry by Lafleur and Shutt gave the defending champion Canadiens their 10th consecutive playoff victory while halting the New York winning streak at six games.

Game Two in the best-of-seven series will be played here Tuesday night.

Marshall jumps Atlanta Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Reliever Mike Marshall was not in uniform Saturday night when the Atlanta Braves faced the Los Angeles Dodgers, apparantly having bolted the team for the second time this year.

Bill Lucas, director of player personnel for the Braves, said Marshall had told him he would not be at the game, and asked for a meeting Sunday with Lucas and owner Ted Turner to discuss his problems.

Marshall left the Braves during spring training, two days before the season opener to return to Michigan because of his legal problems with Michigan State University.

Marshall has pitched in only four games this year with a 1-0 record and a 9.00 E.R.A. The 1974 Cy Young Award winner has yet to record a save.

There was speculation that Marshall may be upset because of the Braves continued use of rookie Rick Camp as their number one reliever so far this year.

Carlos Zarate knocks out Zamora in fourth round

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Carlos Zarate knocked out his former sparring partner Alfonso Zamora in the fourth round of a battle between two unbeaten bantamweight boxing champions Saturday.

Zarate, 119, the World Boxing Council champion, bloodied Zamora's nose in the first round, bruised him around both eyes in the second and knocked him down in the third. The end came at 1:11 of the fourth.

Zamora, 119¾, the World Boxing Association champ, was down twice from left hooks in the fourth before his father threw in the towel and then rushed across the ring to attack Zarate's manager Cuyo Hernandez.

Handlers and police seperated the two, who have been at odds since Hernandez once managed both Zarate and Zamora, both of Mexico City.

Neither fighter had his title at stake in the scrap, scheduled for 10 rounds at the Forum. Yet Zamora lost prestige after winning all 28 of his fights via knockout.

It was Zarate's 47th triumph, his 46th by knockout, without a defeat

The taller Zarate, boxing in more classical style against the onrushing Zamora, opened the second going to the body and then switched to left and right combination to the head. A left hook shook Zamora late in the round.

In the opening seconds of the fourth, a Zarate left hook put Zamora down. He was up before the full count and went to the attack, only to go down again close to his own corner from another left hook.

Before the count began, Alfonso Zamora Sr. tossed in a towel and the long-awaited fight between the two 118-pound world titlists was over.

At the end, Zamora's face was badly bruised with Zarate virtually unmarked, despite the whirlwind and roundhouse punches thrown by the 23-year-old Zamora.

Warriors to host Lakers today

OAKLAND (AP) — The Golden State Warriors will play gracious host to the Los Angeles Lakers today in their National Basketball Association playoff and hope skyscraper Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will stay home.

The Lakers' 7-foot-2 center has become the Grim Reaper of the best-of-seven quarterfinals—hanging around the basket to stuff his points in and keep the Warriors' out.

"I was the man at the right time," Jabbar said after his dazzling one-man show Friday night that left the Warriors on the short end of the 95-86 final score.

"The pressure is on Golden State now, and I don't feel that we will let down. We want to win at least one up there," Jabbar said.

The Warriors will have two chances on their home court for a win, after a pair of defeats in Los Angeles.

Golden State's coach Al Attles admits Jabbar is the man to beat and is looking for a strategy to cut the big man down to size.

In Friday's showdown, Attles tried doubling up with both centers, Robert Parish and Clifford Ray, on the floor at once— a tactic that was successful in the earlier series against the Detroit Pistons.

With it all, Jabbar managed 40 points, 19 rebounds and 9 blocked shots

"Evidently the system hasn't worked as well but we'll make adjustments," Attles said.

Even if Golden State figures out how to stop Jabbar, they still must rev up a consistent offense of their own and slow down on costly mistakes.

"It's pretty hard to win," said Attles "when the ball won't go through the hoop."

The coach was bemoaning adeep-freeze second quarter Friday when Golden State threw up 23 shots and only 3 went down. Dhey ended the half with a dismal 30 points.

"As far as I'm concerned, the game ended the way it began with turnovers," said Attles.

Golden State had 22 turnovers for the evening, five in the first few minutes and four in the last three and a half minutes when the Warriors were trailing by only two points.

Scot athlete wins honors

Jim Sonner, co-captain of Upland High's water polo team the last two years, has been selected as the school's Academic Athlete of the Year.

Sonner will represent Upland High in the annual Foothill-Citrus Athletic Directors Association competition to select the best academic athlete of the year.

Sonner holds a 4.0 scholastic grade point average. He was a first-team selection on the All San Antonio League Water Polo Team and has been Upland High's outstanding water polo player for the last two years. He also is a member of the varsity swim team.

Academically he has been the school's co-salutatorian, National Merit finalist, Edison College Scholarship finalist, Bank of America mathematics-science plaque winner, and life member of the California Scholarship Federation.

Jim, the son of Larry and Teresa Sonner of Upland, hopes to attend Harvey Mudd college in the fall.

La Verne clinches title in split at Oxy

La Verne College clinched its fifth SCIAC title in six years Saturday but lost its chance at an unbeaten conference record.

Larry Beck shut out the Leopards, 2-0, in the first game of a twinbill at Occidental. But the Leos came back to outslug the Tigers, 8-6, in the nightcap and clinch the championship.

With one game left, La Verne has a 16-1 record. All other SCIAC teams have at least four losses. Overall the Leopards are now 23-9.

Actually, the Leos backed into the title because while they were losing to Oxy, Redlands was surprising second-place Claremont-Mudd, 4-0 which gave the Leos the championship.

The Stags came back to outslug the Bulldogs, 18-10, in the second game. C-M is now 11-4 in the conference and 14-17 overall.

At Pomona-Pitzer, the Sagehens recorded their first conference victories with a pair of wins over hapless Caltech, 8-5 and 17-4. The 'Hens are now 2-12 and 5-15-1.

At Oxy, La Verne got eight hits, one in every inning but the first, but couldn't score on Beck.

"Beck had good stuff and threw an exceptionally good game," said Leo coach Ben Hines. "I don't have any complaints about our play except that we didn't pick up our runners.

"We hit the ball hard but always right at somebody. We got guys as far as second base several times, but Beck just made good pitches."

The game was scoreless until the last of the sixth inning when Oxy scored both its runs. Pitcher Steve Goggans (3-2) gave up a leadoff hit to Steve Marmaduke and walked Steve Mancini.

Jim Vallone replaced Goggans and a sacrifice moved the runners to second and third from where they scored on Mike Roberts' single.

In the second game, Bob Waldusky's three-run homer, his 10th, a solo blast by Mike Wolters, a triple by Ralph Valadez and Waldusky's sacrifice fly were the keys.

Randy Pitts blanked C-M on four hits at Redlands. Two of the Bulldogs' runs were unearned. In the second game, the Stags were aided by 14 walks. John Pignotti hit a grandslam home run and a two-run double and Gary Birkenbeuel picked up his first win with 7 and two-thirds innings of relief allowing only one run.

Jim Busterud slammed home runs in each game, went 5-for-8 and drove in seven runs as Pomona-Pitzer won two. The Sagehens had two seven-run innings in the second game which Caltech conceded after seven innings.

At the University of San Diego, Cal Poly split two games with USD. The Toreros won the opener, 4-3 but the Broncos came back to take the nightcap, 6-0.

Poly scored all its runs in the last two innings in the first game after USD had built up a 4-0 lead. In the second game, Chuck Belk (6-8) allowed only five singles and faced just 32 batters. He struck out five and didn't walk a man.

Rufus Thompson sparked the Broncos with three hits including a two run double and batted in three runs. Poly, now 11-23, travels to Loyola Monday.

Scot athlete wins honors

Jim Sonner, co-captain of Upland High's water polo team the last two years, has been selected as the school's Academic Athlete of the Year.

Sonner will represent Upland High in the annual Foothill-Citrus Athletic Directors Association competition to select the best academic athlete of the year.

Sonner holds a 4.0 scholastic grade point average. He was a first-team selection on the All San Antonio League Water Polo Team and has been Upland High's outstanding water polo player for the last two years. He also is a member of the varsity swim team.

Academically he has been the school's co-salutatorian, National Merit finalist, Edison College Scholarship finalist, Bank of America mathematics-science plaque winner, and life member of the California Scholarship Federation.

Jim, the son of Larry and Teresa Sonner of Upland, hopes to attend Harvey Mudd college in the fall.

La Verne clinches title in split at Oxy

La Verne College clinched its fifth SCIAC title in six years Saturday but lost its chance at an unbeaten conference record.

Larry Beck shut out the Leopards, 2-0, in the first game of a twinbill at Occidental. But the Leos came back to outslug the Tigers, 8-6, in the nightcap and clinch the championship.

With one game left, La Verne has a 16-1 record. All other SCIAC teams have at least four losses. Overall the Leopards are now 23-9.

Actually, the Leos backed into the title because while they were losing to Oxy, Redlands was surprising second-place Claremont-Mudd, 4-0 which gave the Leos the championship.

The Stags came back to outslug the Bulldogs, 18-10, in the second game. C-M is now 11-4 in the conference and 14-17 overall.

At Pomona-Pitzer, the Sagehens recorded their first conference victories with a pair of wins over hapless Caltech, 8-5 and 17-4. The 'Hens are now 2-12 and 5-15-1.

At Oxy, La Verne got eight hits, one in every inning but the first, but couldn't score on Beck.

"Beck had good stuff and threw an exceptionally good game," said Leo coach Ben Hines. "I don't have any complaints about our play except that we didn't pick up our runners.

"We hit the ball hard but always right at somebody. We got guys as far as second base several times, but Beck just made good pitches."

The game was scoreless until the last of the sixth inning when Oxy scored both its runs. Pitcher Steve Goggans (3-2) gave up a leadoff hit to Steve Marmaduke and walked Steve Mancini.

Jim Vallone replaced Goggans and a sacrifice moved the runners to second and third from where they scored on Mike Roberts' single.

In the second game, Bob Waldusky's three-run homer, his 10th, a solo blast by Mike Wolters, a triple by Ralph Valadez and Waldusky's sacrifice fly were the keys.

Randy Pitts blanked C-M on four hits at Redlands. Two of the Bulldogs' runs were unearned. In the second game, the Stags were aided by 14 walks. John Pignotti hit a grandslam home run and a two-run double and Gary Birkenbeuel picked up his first win with 7 and two-thirds innings of relief allowing only one run.

Jim Busterud slammed home runs in each game, went 5-for-8 and drove in seven runs as Pomona-Pitzer won two. The Sagehens had two seven-run innings in the second game which Caltech conceded after seven innings.

At the University of San Diego, Cal Poly split two games with USD. The Toreros won the opener, 4-3 but the Broncos came back to take the nightcap, 6-0.

Poly scored all its runs in the last two innings in the first game after USD had built up a 4-0 lead. In the second game, Chuck Belk (6-8) allowed only five singles and faced just 32 batters. He struck out five and didn't walk a man.

Rufus Thompson sparked the Broncos with three hits including a two run double and batted in three runs. Poly, now 11-23, travels to Loyola Monday.

WATCHING WATSON — All eyes are on Tom Watson as he chips up from the rough on the 7th hole of the New Orleans Open Saturday. Watson, the Masters' champ, finished with an 8-under par 136 to take the lead in the $175,000 tournament.

Seattle Slew still perfect

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer Billy Turner was happy Saturday but even more important, Seattle Slew was happy and now the pair will try to spread some more joy for owners Karen and Mickey Taylor at the Kentucky Derby May 7.

"I told Jean (jockey Jean Cruguet) not to worry," said Turner after the $110,300 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct. "Let the horse run easy and move him when it is time, near the three-eighths or the quarter."

Time came at the three-eights pole, when Seattle Slew shot from a 1½-length lead to a six-length lead in the stretch. At the end of the 1⅛ miles the margin was a comfortable 3¼ lengths, and the unbeaten colt had his sixth straight victory. His previous victory was in the Flamingto March 26.

Seattle Slew appeared relaxed throughout, perhaps as a result of his growing number of fans.

"You know," said Cruguet, "he comes out and the people clap for him. He's happy."

Mickey Taylor—Seattle Slew runs in the name of his wife Karen—said the colt will head for Churchill Downs and the Derby on Wednesday.

"But we'll have to wait and see how the colt is in the morning. He looks fine now," said Taylor.

Seattle Slew's winning time was a modest 1:49 3-5.

But once he made his winning move, he was never under any serious pressure.

Sanhedrin finished second, 4¼ lengths ahead of Catalan, whose jockey, apprentice Steve Cauthen, said, "I tried to save something for the end, but the winner was too much horse today. I had no excuse."

Seattle Slew earned $66,180 to move his lifetime winnings to $255,340.

Each starter carried Derby weight of 126 pounds.

A crowd of 36,170 watched the race, which was nationally televised.

Should Seattle Slew's sixth victory follow the pattern of the past two years, he will be the winner in the May 7 Derby. In 1975, Foolish Pleasure won the Wood before winning the Derby and Bold Forbes duplicated the feat last year.

Cauthen rides four winners

NEW YORK (AP) — Whizkid Steve Cauthen rode four more winners Saturday at Aqueduct, including both ends of a $39.20 daily double. It boosted Cauthen's victory total for the year to 233.

The 16-year-old Kentucky-born jockey also had three seconds and finished third aboard Catalan in the $100,000-added Wood Memorial.

Beat Inflation wins L.A. 'Cap

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Darrel McHargue drove Beat Inflation to win the $53,000 Los Angeles Handicap Saturday, leaving in the dust Full Out piloted by Bill Shoemaker and Mark's Place with Sandy Hawley aboard.

Beat Inflation ran the course in 1.20 and 1/5, just off the track mark and world record time, set in 1972 by Triple Bend, of 1.19 and 4/5.

The winner paid $7.40, $3.80 and $2.20. Full Out returned $6.20 and $2.60, while Mark's Place showed at $2.20.

Beat Inflation carried 120, versus 117 for Shoemaker's mount and 126 for Mark's Place.

The eighth race big purse left McHargue, and Hawley each with three wins of the day.

Watson rallies for N.O. lead

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Masters champion Tom Watson, apparently in trouble two holes earlier, bailed himself out with an eagle, fired a second-round 68 and took a one-stroke lead Saturday going into the final 36 holes of the $175,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

Watson wound up the day at 136, one stroke ahead of Stan Lee, who equalled Watson's round of 68.

Watson went into Saturday's qualifying round in second place, four strokes under par. He duplicated that feat Saturday, although it appeared for a moment that he would slip back in the pack.

After two shots at No. 4, Watson found himself in a bunker and had to blast out. He wound up three feet from the pin and made the putt for a bogey.

Two holes later, he got the eagle. Watson boomed a good drive, got a fortunate bounce on his approach shot and wound up three feet from the pin. This time the three-foot putt gave him the eagle.

Lee, a hometown favorite who was an All-American at Louisiana State, was one stroke ahead of five golfers bunched at 138—Ben Crenshaw, Keith Fergus, former Florida All-American Phil Hancock and old pro Don January.

First-round leaders Craig Stadler and Miller Barber fell of the pace Saturday.

Stadler carded a one-over 73 for 143, and Barber had a 74-144.

The 65 golfers with scores of 145 and better qualified for today's final 36 holes.

Hancock is playing in his last tournament of the season, no matter how he finishes Sunday. He missed qualifying for the PGA tour by one stroke and is in the New Orleans Open by virtue of a sponsor's exemption.

Since he has has already played in two other tournaments that way, this event completes his three-tournament eligibility.

Hancock was three-time All-American at the University of Florida and twice Southeasern Conference champ. He is teamed Sunday with Lee and Fergus who were also collegiate golfers at the same time Hancock was playing in the schoolboy ranks.

Small field for Trenton

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — What happened to the other 71?

Entries were sent in for 87 cars, just short of an all-time record, for the May 29 Indianapolis 500. Practice begins for it in two weeks.

But Saturday, when practice opened for today's $100,000 Trentonian 200 for Indianapolist-type cars, only 16 cars were present.

Among the missing were such notables as Al and Bobby Unser, and A.J. Foyt.

What happened to them all?

"Everybody has some excuse or other ... too far to tow, not ready, car still being prepared for Indy, not enough money. But no one here is too happy about it," said one official. "If there are 87 cars around capable of running Indy, there ought to be enough to fill the field (22) here."

Chaffey's Walters sharp

The pitching effort of Mike Walters enabled Chaffey College to edge Citrus 1-0 Saturday afternoon at Citrus.

Chaffey coach Howard Lowder said, "I thought Walters pitched an outstanding game." Nobody could argue with that.

Walters had a no-hitter going for six innings. Then in the seventh Owl first baseman Brad Ducich came through with a line drive single to break up the no-hitter.

Andy Varela followed Ducich in the seventh inning and he posted the only other Citrus hit off Walters.

Chaffey recorded the only run of the game in the third frame as the result of two Citrus errors.

Joe Bruno led off the third with a long fly ball to rightfield. Citrus rightfielder John Bowman got his glove on the ball but couldn't hold it and Bruno skated to third on the three-base error.

Rick Fellhauer followed with a tapper to shortstop Doug Goodman and Goodman decided to go for the sure out at first. So, Bruno strolled home with the only run of the contest. Actually, Citrus didn't get the sure out either on the play as Goodman overthrew first and Fellhauer jogged safely to second on the miscue.

Besides scoring the only Chaffey run, Bruno also added two hits. Panther shortstop Howard Garcia also stroked two hits in the contest.

Rick Munoz, Jim Padula and Fellhauer cashed in a hit apiece for Chaffey.

Defensive plays helped keep Walters on top in the game. Two key double plays were recorded, one in the seventh and one in the eighth.

"We're definitely in a playoff position unless we fall apart," Lowder said after the game.

The victory keeps the Panther neck-and-neck with San Bernardino in the Mission Conference standings. Chaffey is now 12-5 in conference. Citrus drops to a 5-12 conference mark.

In another junior college game, Santa Ana rallied for three runs in the seventh to nip Mt. San Antonio 7-6 Saturday.

A two-run homer by Santa Ana's Marty Castillo was the difference. Castillo also had a two-run triple in the contest.

Kevin Chapman led the Mountie attack with two hits and three RBIs, while Vince Teresi and Bob Costello had three hits apiece for MSAC.

The Mounties are now 6-7 in the South Coast Conference and 18-11 overall.

Bowling's T of C claimed by Berlin

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Mike Berlin opened with four straight strikes and went on to defeat Mike Durbin 221-205 Saturday to capture professional bowling's most coveted prize, the Tournament of Champions trophy.

The championship was only the second for Berlin in his two years on the Professional Bowlers Association tour and was worth $25,000.

"This is the greatest day in my life," said the spunky competitor from Muscatine, Iowa. "Every pro bowler dreams of winning this tournament."

Saturday's victory enabled Berlin to atone for a 232-203 loss to Durbin, of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, in a rolloff Friday night to determine the top seed for the championship round.

Berlin never trailed in the nationally televised finals. After building up a 29-pin lead, he held on until clinching the victory by sparing in the 10th frame.

Durbin, the T of C titlist in 1972, was trying to become only the third two-time winner of this tournament. Jim Godman and Dave Davis both have won twice.

The four-match championship round began with Larry Laub of San Francisco defeating Sam Flanagan of Parkersburg, W.Va., 179-172 despite throwing a gutter ball in the seventh frame, and next beat Wayne Zahn of Tempe, Ariz., 215-203.

Durbin pocketed $14,000 for second, Laub $8,000 for third, Zahn $6,000 for fourth and Flanagan $4,000 for fifth.

The tournament, sponsored by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. for 13 seasons, had a total prize fund of $125,000. The company announced Saturday that it will be raised to $150,000 next year, with the winner receiving $30,000.

WATCHING WATSON — All eyes are on Tom Watson as he chips up from the rough on the 7th hole of the New Orleans Open Saturday. Watson, the Masters' champ, finished with an 8-under par 136 to take the lead in the $175,000 tournament.

Seattle Slew still perfect

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer Billy Turner was happy Saturday but even more important, Seattle Slew was happy and now the pair will try to spread some more joy for owners Karen and Mickey Taylor at the Kentucky Derby May 7.

"I told Jean (jockey Jean Cruguet) not to worry," said Turner after the $110,300 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct. "Let the horse run easy and move him when it is time, near the three-eighths or the quarter."

Time came at the three-eights pole, when Seattle Slew shot from a 1½-length lead to a six-length lead in the stretch. At the end of the 1⅛ miles the margin was a comfortable 3¼ lengths, and the unbeaten colt had his sixth straight victory. His previous victory was in the Flamingto March 26.

Seattle Slew appeared relaxed throughout, perhaps as a result of his growing number of fans.

"You know," said Cruguet, "he comes out and the people clap for him. He's happy."

Mickey Taylor—Seattle Slew runs in the name of his wife Karen—said the colt will head for Churchill Downs and the Derby on Wednesday.

"But we'll have to wait and see how the colt is in the morning. He looks fine now," said Taylor.

Seattle Slew's winning time was a modest 1:49 3-5.

But once he made his winning move, he was never under any serious pressure.

Sanhedrin finished second, 4¼ lengths ahead of Catalan, whose jockey, apprentice Steve Cauthen, said, "I tried to save something for the end, but the winner was too much horse today. I had no excuse."

Seattle Slew earned $66,180 to move his lifetime winnings to $255,340.

Each starter carried Derby weight of 126 pounds.

A crowd of 36,170 watched the race, which was nationally televised.

Should Seattle Slew's sixth victory follow the pattern of the past two years, he will be the winner in the May 7 Derby. In 1975, Foolish Pleasure won the Wood before winning the Derby and Bold Forbes duplicated the feat last year.

Cauthen rides four winners

NEW YORK (AP) — Whizkid Steve Cauthen rode four more winners Saturday at Aqueduct, including both ends of a $39.20 daily double. It boosted Cauthen's victory total for the year to 233.

The 16-year-old Kentucky-born jockey also had three seconds and finished third aboard Catalan in the $100,000-added Wood Memorial.

Beat Inflation wins L.A. 'Cap

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Darrel McHargue drove Beat Inflation to win the $53,000 Los Angeles Handicap Saturday, leaving in the dust Full Out piloted by Bill Shoemaker and Mark's Place with Sandy Hawley aboard.

Beat Inflation ran the course in 1.20 and 1/5, just off the track mark and world record time, set in 1972 by Triple Bend, of 1.19 and 4/5.

The winner paid $7.40, $3.80 and $2.20. Full Out returned $6.20 and $2.60, while Mark's Place showed at $2.20.

Beat Inflation carried 120, versus 117 for Shoemaker's mount and 126 for Mark's Place.

The eighth race big purse left McHargue, and Hawley each with three wins of the day.

Bowling's T of C claimed by Berlin

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Mike Berlin opened with four straight strikes and went on to defeat Mike Durbin 221-205 Saturday to capture professional bowling's most coveted prize, the Tournament of Champions trophy.

The championship was only the second for Berlin in his two years on the Professional Bowlers Association tour and was worth $25,000.

"This is the greatest day in my life," said the spunky competitor from Muscatine, Iowa. "Every pro bowler dreams of winning this tournament."

Saturday's victory enabled Berlin to atone for a 232-203 loss to Durbin, of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, in a rolloff Friday night to determine the top seed for the championship round.

Berlin never trailed in the nationally televised finals. After building up a 29-pin lead, he held on until clinching the victory by sparing in the 10th frame.

Durbin, the T of C titlist in 1972, was trying to become only the third two-time winner of this tournament. Jim Godman and Dave Davis both have won twice.

The four-match championship round began with Larry Laub of San Francisco defeating Sam Flanagan of Parkersburg, W.Va., 179-172 despite throwing a gutter ball in the seventh frame, and next beat Wayne Zahn of Tempe, Ariz., 215-203.

Durbin pocketed $14,000 for second, Laub $8,000 for third, Zahn $6,000 for fourth and Flanagan $4,000 for fifth.

The tournament, sponsored by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. for 13 seasons, had a total prize fund of $125,000. The company announced Saturday that it will be raised to $150,000 next year, with the winner receiving $30,000.

Mets' Seaver looking for long career

NEW YORK (AP) — "Ideally speaking," says 32-year-old Tom Seaver, "there's no reason I shouldn't be able to throw as hard at 40 as I do now."

That, of course, brings to mind Lefty Gomez' famous crack late in his career that he was throwing as hard as ever but the ball wasn't getting to the plate as fast.

And just in case Seaver's fast ball goes the way of Gomez', the hard-throwing ace of the New York Mets' pitching staff is investing for his future by constantly developing new deliveries.

"When I first came up," says Seaver, in 11th major league campaign, "I threw a sinking fast ball and a real hard slider."

Ted Simmons, the hard-hitting catcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, smiled when he heard that. Simmons has seen enough of what he calls Seaver's "hard rider," a fast ball that rises instead of sinking.

"He's becoming a different pitcher," Simmons says. "He's not just a power pitcher any more. When I first came up he threw straight power as far as he could go. Now, if you go up there and guess wrong he can knock the bat out of your hands."

Adds Cardinal veteran Lou Brock:

"Everything he's throwing is moving now and he throws breaking stuff on the first pitch a lot."

Talking to Seaver, one gets the impression he fully expects to be pitching at 40 ... and who knows how long after that.

"They say that 35 in baseball is old," he snorts, "but that's a lot of garbage. I've had X rays taken of my elbow and shoulder and the doctors say it's like a 12-year-old's. If I feel the way I do now, I'll still be pitching at 40 and I'll still be an effective pitcher. That is, if I never let myself get out of shape and exercise all year 'round, even during the winter."

When Seaver shut out the Cardinals two weeks ago, he didn't have his best stuff or his best control. He couldn't get his curve over, so he threw more change-ups than usual. And he was shocked when the Cardinals were amazed at his repertoire.

"I've been working very hard over the last five years to develop a curve and it's gotten better and better," he says. "And I've come up with a decent change-up by working at it the last two years. You never stop learning about this game. One of the great things about pitching is that you can always continue to improve yourself, you can always get better. But you have to work at it."

It upsets the articulate Seaver that people think he just was a rear-back thrower and not a pitcher when he first arrived in the majors.

"That's totally inaccurate," he says. "Look at my second year (1968) when I pitched 278 innings and walked only 48 batters. That's a pitcher, not a thrower. I was learning to be a pitcher when I first came up. A lot of young phenoms lose the opportunity for a good future because they don't understand the philosophy of pitching. They think pitching is just throwing.

"Pitching is breaking the hitter's timing and there are two ways to do it. One way is with velocity so the batter isn't quick enough to get to the ball. The other way is changing speeds."

If you think Seaver is just fast, faster and fastest, forget it.

"He's started to turn the ball over in double play situations," says Simmons, "and he has a real good change off his fast ball. That gives you something else to think about.

"When he's in trouble, though, he can still go to the fast ball and come right at you. And he's always located his fast ball whereas a Nolan Ryan just threw the SOB. He can pitch now the same way he did five years ago, but he'd be less of a pitcher if he did. He's prepared very well, not only for now but for the future."

TIME CHECK — Janet Guthrie checks her lap times after a practice run at Ontario Motor Speedway last week. After lean years with marginal equipment the 39-year-old driver appears to have put her problems behind her.

Janet Guthrie much happier

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Janet Guthrie says she's feeling very cheerful about auto racing all of a sudden.

After struggling through some lean financial years with marginal equipment, the 39-year-old driver seems to have put her problems behind her.

She's got a new sponsor and a new car. Her Kelly Girl Chevrolet is doing well on the Grand National stock-car circuit, and her Lindsey Hopkins Lightning is expected to be competitive in the Indianapolis 500 next month.

"Although I'd been driving for a number of years, I really just got completely involved in 1972," Miss Guthrie said here recently while making some test runs in her Indy car.

"I put my life savings—what there was of it—into building a car for a new pro circuit, but it folded before I ever ran the car.

"The period between 1972 and 1975 was a really bad one for me. By the end of '75, I was so deep in debt I thought I'd never get out.

"I think I realized at the time that I might never make it, that the possibility of my having a racing future was getting dimmer and dimmer."

Her perserverance paid off, though.

"Things have really changed for me and now I feel, well, cheerful about the whole thing," she said.

Mariners to raise fence

SEATTLE (AP) — Because it's a home run haven, the Seattle Kingdome's right field fence may have to be raised, say officials of the Mariners baseball team.

Putting some height on the fence "would take away some of the cheap home runs," says Lou Gorman, baseball director for the American League expansion club.

"Of course, there's nothing that can be done in left field. The seats there are permanent."

As of Friday, 24 homers have been clouted in 12 Kingdome games.

Most of the four-baggers have been hit into the left field bleachers or against the concrete facade of the first level in right field.

MSAC, Gonta are title-bound

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

Well, they tell me the Mt. San Antonio College golf team this spring is extraordinary. With Coach Stan Gonta leading the way, the Mounties are undefeated in South Coast Conference matches, 15-0 across a two-year span.

Gonta, a former USC defensive halfback, has six fellows who shoot in the 70s with Mike Stephens, a sophomore from Covina High, leading the league with a nifty 73.9 average. Ray Duffy of Rowland Heights and Jim Mikuta are averaging right at 76.

In a release from MSAC, Gonta says the next weeks are critical for his squad. They'd like to win the league then move on to state competition.

The Mounties are at Torrey Pines this week, and they'll be heading for Rancho California for the league event on May 2.

In the recent Moorpark tournament (just to show you how good they are) the Mounties in 12 rounds of competition had only one round of 80.

"We play best on tough courses," smiles Gonta.

Why does Arnie Palmer keep playing tournament golf? This year, for instance, he'll be forced to qualify for the U.S. Open. Palmer recently explained his love for golf.

"Playing golf is all I want to do. It's all there is for me," Palmer said. "It is my life."

Dave Hill, struggline through one of his poorest starts ever, says he has gone through 18 sets of irons in the last six months in a search for "something that feels confortable."

I'm in complete agreement with Frank Beard, however, when it comes to changing clubs. Beard said the average player (and sometimes the very good player) is far better off spending his money on lessons from a pro than going out and buying a new set of clubs.

In other words, proper technique is more important than equipment.

The Pomona Valley is blessed with scads of fine teaching pros. I'd like to hear from readers who have been especially effective. Just jot the name of the pro down and tell us what you were able to accomplish.

Clell Hoffman and Paul Layman are heading the committee planning the La Verne Little League golf tournament scheduled for Sunday, May 15. The event will be held at San Dimas Canyon with entry fees set at about $15.

"We're going to put on a tournament where everyone will have some fun," says Hoffman, who has been in charge of several golf tournaments in recent years.

Interested golfers can contact Little League officials, or Hoffman or Layman.

Deadline for applications to the 1977 Spring Qualifying School for the PGA Tour is 5 p.m., May 13 at 5101 River Road, Washington, D.C., according to Deane Beaman, commissioner.

Weekly tournament winners at Glendora C.C. are Isabel Alba, Margie Kemby, Betty Pyott and Betty Ann Flint, who were on the team which won low gross. Connie Fisher, Millie Weaver, Shirley Godber and Pat Odell were low net winners in the mixer tournament.

Corky Booth is publicity director.

La Mancha's Bonny Woodrow won low gross and Shirly Reedy won low net in the Best Nine event. Jessie Ochoa and Beverly Greenwood won low gross in the Blind Partners event with Debbie Scott and Evelyn Logg teaming to win low net.

Mae Wellborn is publicity director for the club.

I had a chance to watch the group lessons for junior players being conducted at El Prado last week, and I saw some fine players of all ages, 8-16.

I was especially impressed with the work of Jim Kremer, assistant pro, who teaches the classes. Patient, thorough, and personable, Kremer has an excellent teaching technique. The kids with him really learn the fundamentals, but they have an enjoyable time too. If your youngster's interested in golf, take him to El Prado on Saturdays at 1 p.m. Lessons and range balls are free, believe it or not.

Bob Bickford is the head pro at El Prado; his other assistants are Doug Hines and Wendy Rees.

The seventh annual Tramway Tournament will be played Monday, June 6 at Canyon C.C. in Palm Springs. The $20 entry includes golf, greens fee, cart, dinner and entertainment. Shotgun start at 7:30 a.m.

There's always a robust golfer willing to play in a tournament, especially one with a worthy cause. It's hard to beat the Red Cross benefit event scheduled Friday, May 6 at San Dimas Canyon.

The player donates $40 to the cause and gets a round of golf with all the trimmings. In addition, he's certain his contribution will go to a good cause. This time it's the Pomona Chapter of the Red Cross. Vital services are extended to several valley communities through the Pomona chapter.

Entries can be mailed to Pomona Chapter, American Red Cross, 420 N. Reservoir, Pomona.

Classic moves to Santa Clara

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — The Cable Car Classic, a 10year-old college basketball tournament, is moving to Santa Clara University's Toso Pavilion next season.

The teams in the Dec. 16-17 tourney will be South Carolina, San Jose State, Portland and host Santa Clara, it was announced Wednesday. South Carolina won the tournament in 1971 and Santa Clara has won three Cable Car titles.

The first 10 Cable Car Classics were played in San Francisco and Oakland.

Young A's realistic about pennant chances

OAKLAND (AP) — Rob Picciolo, like many of the youngsters on the Oakland A's starshorn roster, is quick to point out "The pitchers in the league are seeing us for the first time."

The rookie shortstop adds, "We may not do so well the second time around."

But, oh, how the young A's are enjoying the first time around—winning eight of their first 12 games while many of the teams which signed former Oakland stars to huge contracts last winter are struggling under the .500 mark.

"I guess the biggest change from the minor leagues is just the way you're treated," said Picciolo, the 23-year-old shortstop whose first big league hit was a single off California's Nolan Ryan last week.

"I've never had so many people ask for my autograph. If you want something here, like a batting glove, you just ask for it. You don't have to go out to a sporting goods store and buy it yourself," the rookie added about the good life of the big leagues.

"We have food in the clubhouse afer every game. In the minors, we went to McDonald's."

In the past, A's regulars such as the now-departed Reggie Jackson, Sal Bando, Gene Tenace and Joe Rudi complained often about owner Charles O. Finley's policy of using regularly-scheduled airline flights instead of charters for most road trips. A's players get some early wake-up calls and sit around airports a lot.

"They'll be no complaints from me. That's better than 12-hour bus trips," said Mitchell Page, the left-fielder batting .391 with 15 RBI through his first 12 big league games.

Page faced the prospect of more International League bus trips this year until Finley acquired him and five other players—all on the current A's roster—in the nine-player March trade involving unsigned A's infielder Phil Garner.

Nine rookies started the season wih the A's. Only one, infielder Jerry Tabb, has been sent back to the minors so far. Picciolo, Page and third baseman Wayne Gross have started in every game.

"We felt in spring training that all these kids were outstanding prospects, and the best thing about them is that they're going to improve," says Manager Jack McKeon.

In the Oakland Coliseum parking lot, where Reggie Jackson's Porsche with the "MVP 73" license plates once sat, the autograph-seeking kids now wait near cars like Picciolo's 1968 Pontiac with the "R Peach" plates.

"I've driven that car since high school. It's got 88,000 miles on it. My mom got me the plates for a birthday present one year," says Picciolo, who signed with the A's after his junior year at Pepperdine University.

Page and Gross, both from the Los Angeles area, played college baseball together at Cal Poly-Pomona before signing pro contracts. Last week, Finley raised both their salaries from $20,000 to $30,000 to reward them for their hot starts.

After Page hit two homers to help beat the California Angels last week, he said, "Dedicate that one to Charlie Finley," words the owner never heard when his team was winning three straight World Series.

Gross played last year with Picciolo for the A's Tucson farm team in the Pacific Coast League, batting .324 while Picciolo hit .298. Page hit .294 and slammed 22 homers for Charleston and his teammates for that Triple A team included outfielder Tony Armas and pitchers Rick Langford and Doug Bair, other new A's.

Armas may have one of the best throwing arms in the majors but hasn't shown much hitting yet. Langford won his first start and Bair has picked up a victory in relief.

Sheldon Mallory, an outfielder from the New York Mets organization, has played well in his few games so far. He once stole 72 bases in 83 games in a minor league season.

Infielder Rodney Scott, another player with great speed, opened the season at second base but McKeon has switched to the more experienced Larry Lintz in recent games.

As Gross puts it, "We're up here and we're just happy to get a chance. We're all busting our butts to make the most of it."

Prep hurler keeps string

MATHEWS, Va. (AP) — Keith Atherton, working with just two days' rest, pitched his fourth consecutive no-hitter Friday for Mathews High School in an 11-0 romp over Charles City High.

The junior right-hander, who has won six of his unbeaten team's seven victories, ran his string of no-hit innings to 34. He struck out 20 batters in the seven-inning game.

Maury Wills' son has super teacher

NEW YORK (AP) — A top thief is proud that he has taught his sons the tricks of the trade.

"He knows how to steal," Maury Wills said of his son, Bump. "I taught him."

Maury Wills, now a sportscaster with NBC, was on hand when the Texas Rangers' rookie second baseman showed he learned his lesson well, scoring on the front end of a double steal in a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles last weekend.

"I'm just so happy for him," said Maury, who swiped 104 bases in 1962 while starring at shortstop for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Bump Wills was drafted by the San Diego Padres in 1974, but was never offered a contract after he broke his ankle during his senior year at Arizona State University. In January 1975, he was the Rangers' No. 1 draft choice.

"His first year was at Pittsfield, Mass.," his father said. "Last year he played at Sacramento, Calif., in the Pacific Coast League" where he batted .324, including 26 home runs, and stole 12 bases.

"He's such a gutsy kid," Maury said. His father's major league feats "doesn't affect him."

But the senior Wills is a little worried.

"I hope he doesn't shy away from stealing bases because he might be compared to me," Maury said. "The name of the game in baseball today is speed. And he knows how to read pitchers, how to get a good jump."

Maury's success in the majors did affect his oldest son, Barry.

"He (Barry) turned down several baseball scholarships," Maury said. "His coaches ruined him because he was constantly being compared with his father.

"He went to the University of Idaho, not on a scholarship. I paid his way. One day he wrote me a letter saying the coach wanted him to go out for the baseball team. I didn't answer the letter.

"Then he wrote me a second letter, saying the coach was still after him to go out for the baseball team. I refused to answer that one, too. Then he wrote a third letter. I finally wrote to him and told him he should do what he wanted to do, but whatever he decided he should try to do his best. And I told him that whatever his decision was, I would always back him.

"He wrote back and said: 'I'm going out for the baseball team.'"

Bump doesn't let the "Maury Wills legacy" interfere with his play. In fact, the father is jealous of his sons.

"When they were around 10 and 12 years old and I was playing for the Dodgers, they were better batters than I was. They had beautiful swings," Maury said.

As a youngster, Bump would work out with the Dodgers. But Maury, considered at the time one of the best infielders in the major leagues, refused to coach him.

"Danny Ozark, now the manager of the Philadelphia Phillies but then a coach with the Dodgers, and Jim Gilliam worked with him," Maury said. "I didn't even work with him until he was in college."

Aztecs try for 3rd win

LOS ANGELES — The Aztecs will be trying for their third straight shutout when they face the North American Soccer League's Western Division leader Portland Timbers today at the Coliseum.

The game will be broadcast live on radio station KGIL (1260) and KFOX (1280) with Gil Straton calling the play-by-play. Game time is 2 p.m.

With the 6-0 win over Hawaii, the Aztecs continue to lead the NASL in virtually every category, both team and individual.

Steve David's two goals against Hawaii give him four on the season and a three-point lead in the league scoring race.

Goalkeeper Bill Mishalow recorded his second straight shutout, making him the league's leading goalie after the season's second week of play.

Coach Terry Fisher is more than satisfied with his team's performance so far, and especially with the latest result.

"It's nice to have games like this because it gives me a chance to get playing time for some of the younger players, he said. "Ken Whitehead, John McGrane, and Ane Mihailovich came on in the second half and turned in good efforts. We're just working so well all over the field. What can you say about a team that scores nine goals and doesn't give up any in two games?"

Los Angeles continues to lead the Southern Division by a point over Dallas, and Las Vegas is just one point farther back in third place.

The first 2,000 youngsters (under 18 years) entering the Coliseum today with a paid admission will receive an Aztecs souvenir soccer ball, courtesy of Burger King.

Valley has new pro football team

Mike Haluchak would have good reason to be slightly pessimistic about his new job as head coach of the San Gabriel Valley Saints of the California Football League.

After all, he's taking over a new team in a new league in a valley which has never had a professional team in any sport.

But for these same reasons, Haluchak says, he's excited about the Saints first season which begins July 8.

"There is no professional sport within easy distance during the summer months," he says, "and there is not much to do on Saturday nights.

"I'm excited about the team because of the community involvement aspect. The San Gabriel Valley has never had a professional team of its own to identify with."

Haluchak, currently a defensive coach for the USC Trojan varsity football team, is a resident of Baldwin Park. He was a stand-out linebacker at USC during the 1971 season and played temporarily with the British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League in 1973 and the Los Angeles Rams during the 1974 NFL exhibition season.

"The people associated with the team are enthusiastic," says Haluchak. "They want to make it work and are anxious to get going.

"I think that people in the San Gabriel Valley will really support the Saints. There are a lot of local people involved and it could turn into a great thing for this area."

Haluchak, who will handle the defensive units, says the Saints will utilize multiple defenses and will display a wide-open, pro-style offensive attack.

Another part of the Saints program Haluchak feels will attract local support will be the quality of play in the CFL.

"There are a lot of people with professional aspirations. We have good talent and will provide good competition.

"The CFL would eventually like to become an official farm system of the NFL and I think the pro teams would like it. The high cost of the college draft, I feel, is going to force the NFL to adopt a farm system similar to the one in baseball.

"I think the Saints will win. I'm confident, in fact, that we can compete in the league."

The Saints will play a nine-game regular season with all home games played at the Citrus College Stadium in Azusa. Pasadena City College radio station KPCS (89.3 F.M.) will broadcast the games live.

The Saints will play in the Southern Division of the CFL which includes the Long Beach Mustangs, Los Angeles Norsemen, and Southern California Rhinos

The Northern Division teams are the Sacramento Buffalos, San Jose Tigers, Twin City Muskrats, and Fairfield (Oakland) Flyers.

Haluchak, who was instrumental in making the San Gabriel Valley coaches game last summer a success, says all the right ingredients for a pro team are present in the Valley.

"We've got tremendous community involvement potential," he says, "good football players, good competition, a hard-working group of people associated with the team, and good facilities."

It would appear Mike Haluchak has good reason to be slightly optimistic.

Olympics film is available

The official United States Olympic Committee film of the 1976 Winter Games at Innsbruck, Austria, is now available for free public showing, it has been announced by Montgomery Ward, which produced the motion picture as a public service.

The 27-minute color film features the exciting pageantry of the traditional opening and closing ceremonies as well as such highlights as the incandescent performance of 19-year-old Dorothy Hamill, who climaxed a six-year drive to the top with a dramatic free skating performance to win the gold medal in the ladies' ice skating singles.

It also chronicles Sheila Young's spirited performance at the speed skating rink, where she became the first U.S. athlete to win gold, silver and bronze medals in the speed skating events.

Also featured are Peter Mueller's 1,000-meter speed skating performance, Cindy Nelson's bronze medal finish in the dangerous women's downhill skiing event, Jimmy Millns's and Colleen O'Connor's third place showing in a new Olympic event called ice dancing and Nordic skier Bill Koch's surprising silver medal victory in the men's 30-kilometer cross country.

The film includes action-packed scenes from every event at the Winter Olympics, from bobsledding, ice hockey, the biathlon and luge, to breathtaking slow motion shots of 90-meter ski jumping.

The film is available, at no cost, to individuals, church, civic, youth and school groups through Modern Talking Picture Service, which has offices in most principal cities, or through any Montgomery Ward Store.

Jr. Rose Bowl rescheduled

LOS ANGELES — The Jr. Rose Bowl Game, renewed in 1976 after a ten year absence, will again be played—in Pasadena's famed Rose Bowl, Dec. 10, under the sponsorship of the Los Angeles Times.

Last year's renewal featured a hard fought contest between Ellsworth, Iowa and Bakersfield, California, with the Renegades from California capturing a 29-14 victory. The JRB features a top team from California against a number one ranked rival from out of state. The game was first started in 1946 when Compton played Kilgore, Tex., and continued until 1966 when the format was changed to four-year schools.

"We are delighted to bring back the Jr. Rose Bowl Game to Southern California football fans," said Glenn Davis, director of Special Events for the Times. "The two-year schools play exciting football, as was proved in last year's game and, with the help of the community college football coaches who have pledged their support, we feel certain that the game will once again attain the prominence it once had."

"The Jr. Rose Bowl Game is excellent for all community college athletics," said Dr. Robert Lombardi, chairman of the committee of Athletics for the California State two-year schools. "It definitely promotes interest and calls attention to the community college programs."

Cecil Perkins, head coach at Potomac State in Keyser, W.Va. who is president on the NJCAA Football Coaches Assn., was equally pleased with the continuance of the game. "It's the best thing that can happen to junior college football. If every team in the country thinks they have a shot at the Jr. Rose Bowl, it's terrific for all of us."

Baseball holds skills contest

Boys and girls ages 9 through 12 who are interested in competing in Major League Baseball's official youth program "Pitch, Hit & Run", can obtain entry forms from any Thom McAn shoe store.

The forms, which will be available through May 22, can be obtained locally at the Thom McAn store at the Montclair Plaza or at the Thom McAn store on Village Lane in Pomona.

The PH&R program is being sponsored nationally by Thom McAn Shoe Co. and Major Leage Baseball in cooperation with the National Recrea-tion and Park Assoc.

Youngsters who want to participate in local competitive events must fill out and return the registration form to their local Thom McAn store. Each child must be accompanied by a parent or guardian who must also sign the completed form.

Along with the entry forms, each youngster will receive a free PH&R Tips Booklet which contains helpful hints concerning the program including tips on pitching, hitting and running from baseball stars Jim Palmer, Rod Carew and Joe Morgan.

The local competitive events will take place in over 800 communities throughout the country between May 28 and June 10.

Details as to the dates, times and places of the competitive events in the local area can be obtained from the two local Thom McAn dealers.

Among Mrs. Pike's previous one-man shows in California have been the Pasadena Art Museum and the San Francisco Legion of Honor Museum. Her works are in the collections of Wright Ludington, Mrs. Lucille Simon, Norton Simon, Justin Dart, Otis Chandler, Hope, the Los Angeles Music Center, USC, the Legion of Honor Museum and the Santa Barbara Museum.

ART IN FABRIC — Claire Strona Dewey looks over two of her pieces in the annual Fabric and Fibre Show at the Pomona Valley Art Association. The work on the wall won first prize in crewel.

Gallery sets Pike exhibit

A one-man show by artist Marion Pike of Los Angeles and Paris will open next Sunday at Gallery 8, Harvard and Bonita avenues, Claremont. It continues through the month.

Mrs. Pike has done portraits of Coco Chanel, Bob Hope, Ronald Reagan (Time magazine cover, October, 1966), Rosalind Russell, Zubin Mehta and Arturo Rubenstein. Following the exhibition she will go to England to paint Lord Kenneth Clark.

Thirty of her works will be shown, among which will be landscapes from France, the Barbados, and the California desert, as well as floral still-lifes. Two paintings will be loaned from the collection of Mrs. Lucille Simon.

Among Mrs. Pike's previous one-man shows in California have been the Pasadena Art Museum and the San Francisco Legion of Honor Museum. Her works are in the collections of Wright Ludington, Mrs. Lucille Simon, Norton Simon, Justin Dart, Otis Chandler, Hope, the Los Angeles Music Center, USC, the Legion of Honor Museum and the Santa Barbara Museum.

Mrs. Pike will donate a portion of the proceeds from her exhibit toward the restoration of the Ramos Martinez murals at Scripps College.

Big budget, big story, big cast

'Testimony' may make big TV news

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — They're calling it Operation Prime Time, but what it is is yet another attempt to create some sort of fourth television network.

This time, a group of local stations have gotten together to make their own big-budget, big-cast, big-story novel-for-TV. They're spending $4 million on it, making it far and away the most expensive movie-for-TV yet, measured in terms of cost per minute.

The film is a version of Taylor Caldwell's best seller, "Testimony of Two Men.. It will run for six hours, and chances are good you'll be able to see it, because nearly 100 TV stations have signed up to show it sometime during the week of May 2. In some cities, it will be shown an hour a night for six nights; in others, it will be on two hours a night for three nights.

Technically, this method of making and selling TV programs falls under the umbrella of syndication. But this varies from the ordinary syndication approach in that here the stations, or many of them, were in on the planning and financing before the film was made.

With all that savvy, they've carefully stocked the cast with familiar TV names. Almost all of the principals are veterans of previous TV series, from the leads (David Birney and Barbara Parkins) down through the rest of the cast (Steve Forrest, Tom Bosley, J.D. Cannon, William Shatner, Randolph Mantooth, Linda Purl).

TV veterans are behind the camera, too. The executive producer is Jack Laird, a long-time TV producer (Kojak, The Bold Ones, Doctors Hospital). And the two directors, Larry Yust and Leo Penn, have done many TV episodes and films.

In one way, this will be different from the run-of-the-screen TV movies — there is a nude scene, although it won't be total nudity.

That scene involves Barbara Parkins and Steve Forrest.

"I was as nervous as a bull at fly time at that scene," Forrest admits. "But Barbara was very cool about it. I gather our subscribers are happy about it — nothing tasteless has been done."

Forrest says that if it isn't one thing (sex) on TV, it's another (violence).

"On my old show, SWAT," he says, "violence was the problem. On this one, it's sexuality. It's funny — liberals don't mind sex, but they abhor shooting. And conservatives don't mind seeing people gunned down, but they want no sex. You can never please everybody."

For the two directors, the problem is to create one film in one style. Yust is directing the first two hours and the last two, with Penn handling the two middle hours.

"There's no problem of meshing styles," Penn says, "because there's no time to worry about it in the first place. I did try to see Larry Yust's dailies for a while, to get an idea of how he was doing things. And there is a mutuality in the technical areas — lighting and so on — but there is bound to be a different approach and a different manner. It can't be helped."

The project was carefully planned to be filmed during what is TV's off-season — all the series are shut down, waiting for word as to whether or not they'll be picked up for next year. That made it simple to get the cast and crew they wanted, at reasonable prices, because they were all at liberty.

As a further effort to cut costs, most of the scenes are being filmed with two cameras. So the entire shooting schedule for the six hours is only six weeks.

"What we're doing," Forrest says, "is built-in cheap, but there sure is a lot of production for the money."

For the cast, the film is a golden opportunity to show what they can do, because many of them age 35 years or so. Forrest and Barbara Parkins are two who get to play their own ages and later older versions of themselves.

For Miss Parkins, this film marks a return after spending some five years living abroad. She's back looking a bit more mature and speaking with a whisper of a British accent.

She was based in London for those five years, but travelled extensively, all over Europe and as far afield as Peru and Africa.

"I'd work just enough to support my travels," she says. "Now I'd like to go to the Orient — China and Japan — and I'm about to take some courses in Chinese and Japanese philosophies at U.C.L.A. to prepare myself. But, knowing me, I may be off before I do the studying."

She says she's changed a great deal since her early days in Hollywood, her days on Peyton Place and as one of the brightest of the young leading women.

"At that time in my life," Barbara says, "I was terribly ambitious. I really wanted to be a big star. I liked to go to parties on the arm of some very important producer, a rich and famous man.

"All that is over. It wasn't that I woke up one morning and the lightning had hit, it was just a gradual awareness that all my values had changed. None of that is important to me any more."

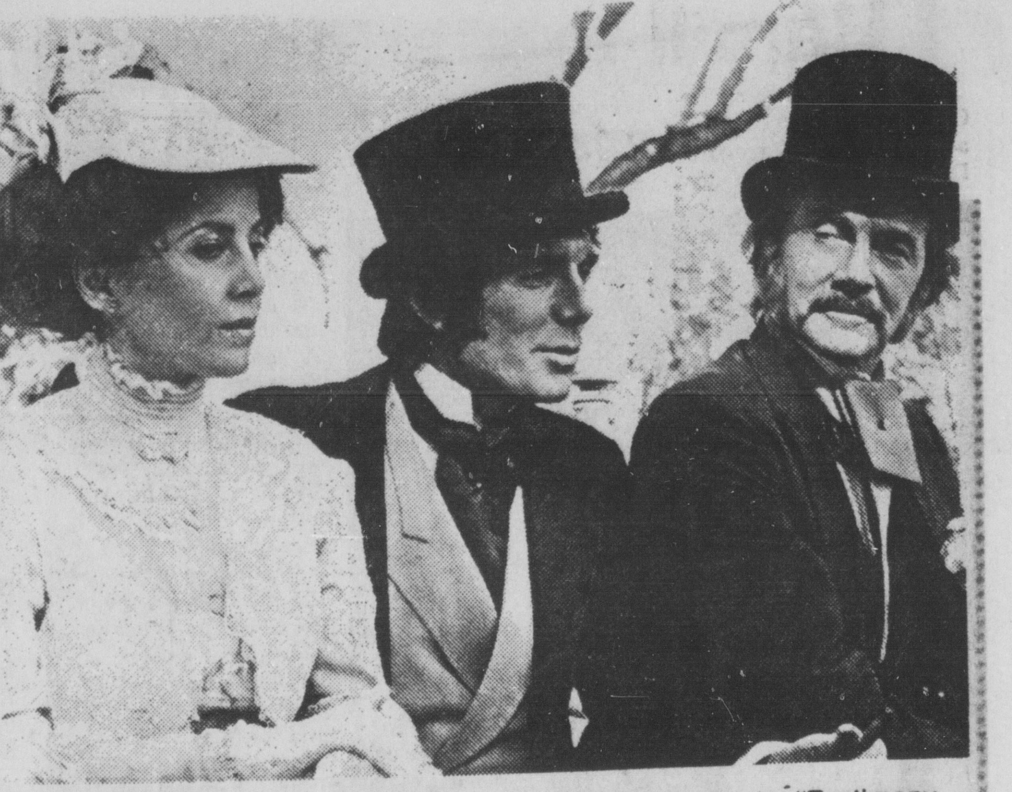
She says that what attracted her to "Testimony of Two Men" was that her part was a good one. And, she adds, it's very rare these days to find a good woman's part in a TV drama — or in any kind of drama, for that matter.

She doubts that she'll ever do another series. There have been offers, many of them, but she's turned them all down. She wants to maintain her independence, be free to travel.

Whether or not there will be more features from Operation Prime Time remains to be seen. Much will depend on the success of "Testimony Of Two Men."

Will it be able to hold its own against regular network fare? They think so. In many cities which have already scheduled it, it will be shown on a network station, preempting network programming. In other cities, it will be on independent outlets.

There will be a huge publicity push on the show, as the week of airing draws close.



'TESTIMONY' STARS — Barbara Parkins, David Birney, center, and Steve Forrest are starring in the big-budget TV movie, "Testimony of Two Men," adapted from Taylor Caldwell's novel.

For the cast, the film is a golden opportunity to show what they can do, because many of them age 35 years or so. Forrest and Barbara Parkins are two who get to play their own ages and later older versions of themselves.

For Miss Parkins, this film marks a return after spending some five years living abroad. She's back looking a bit more mature and speaking with a whisper of a British accent.

She was based in London for those five years, but travelled extensively, all over Europe and as far afield as Peru and Africa.

"I'd work just enough to support my travels," she says. "Now I'd like to go to the Orient — China and Japan — and I'm about to take some courses in Chinese and Japanese philosophies at U.C.L.A. to prepare myself. But, knowing me, I may be off before I do the studying."

She says she's changed a great deal since her early days in Hollywood, her days on Peyton Place and as one of the brightest of the young leading women.

"At that time in my life," Barbara says, "I was terribly ambitious. I really wanted to be a big star. I liked to go to parties on the arm of some very important producer, a rich and famous man.

"All that is over. It wasn't that I woke up one morning and the lightning had hit, it was just a gradual awareness that all my values had changed. None of that is important to me any more."

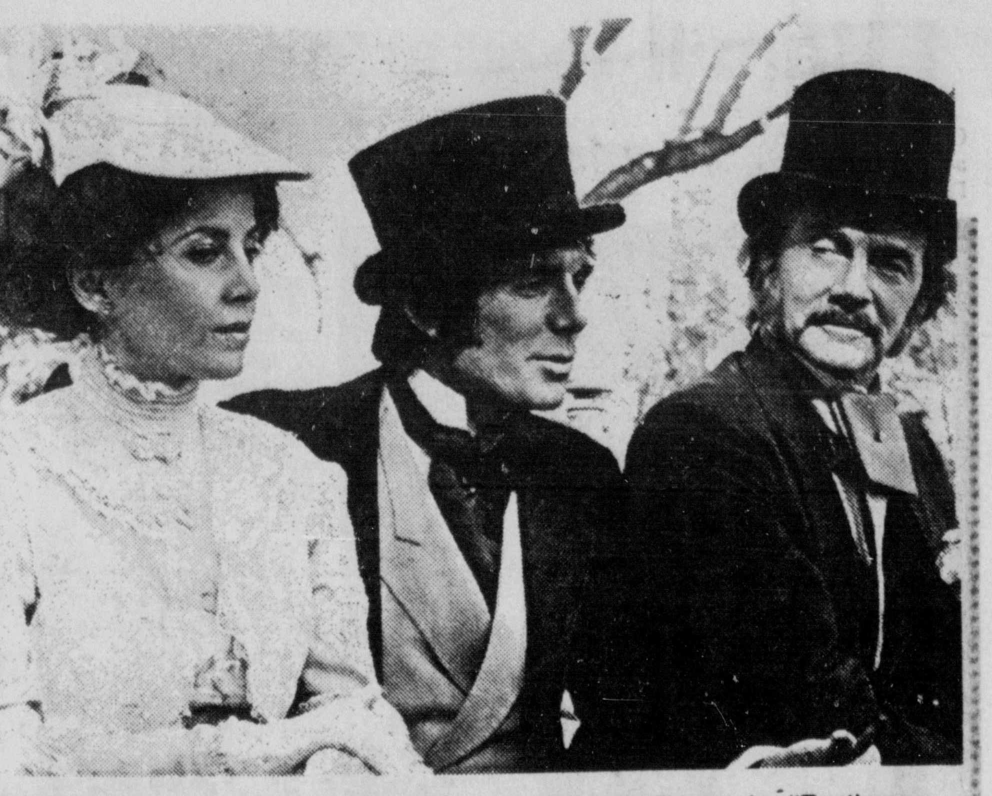
She says that what attracted her to "Testimony of Two Men" was that her part was a good one. And, she adds, it's very rare these days to find a good woman's part in a TV drama — or in any kind of drama, for that matter.

She doubts that she'll ever do another series. There have been offers, many of them, but she's turned them all down. She wants to maintain her independence, be free to travel.

Whether or not there will be more features from Operation Prime Time remains to be seen. Much will depend on the success of "Testimony Of Two Men."

Will it be able to hold its own against regular network fare? They think so. In many cities which have already scheduled it, it will be shown on a network station, preempting network programming. In other cities, it will be on independent outlets.

There will be a huge publicity push on the show, as the week of airing draws close.



'TESTIMONY' STARS — Barbara Parkins, David Birney, center, and Steve Forrest are starring in the big-budget TV movie, "Testimony of Two Men," adapted from Taylor Caldwell's novel.

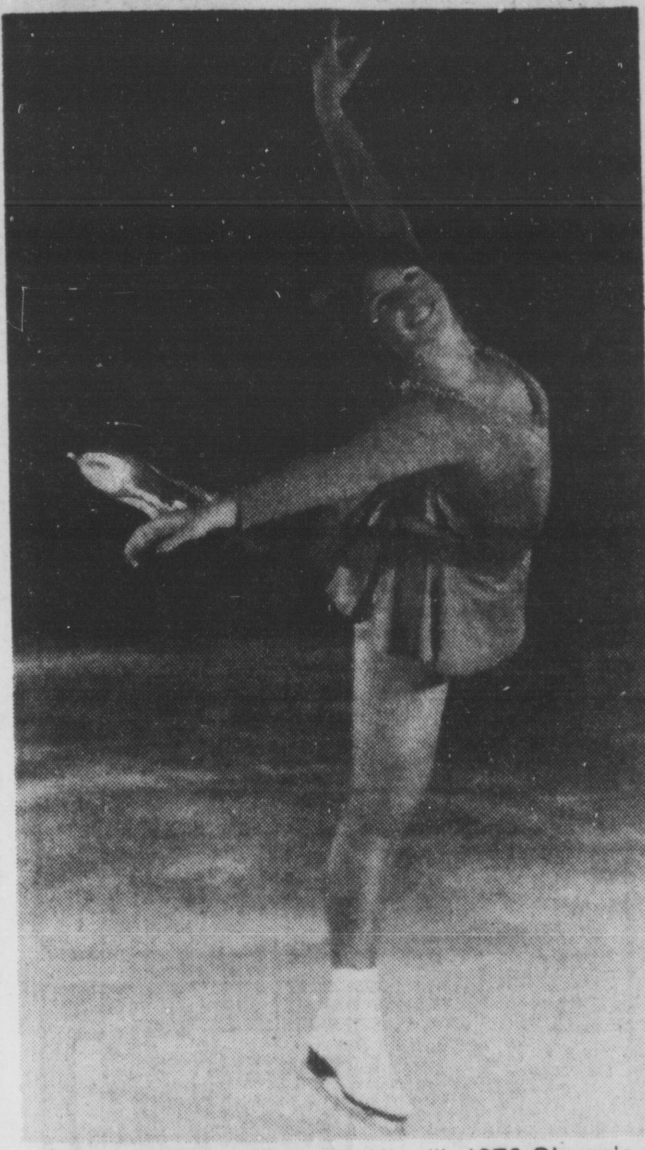
Hamill to star on ice

The 1977 edition of Ice Capades, starring Olympic and World Champion Dorothy Hamill in her professional debut, will open at the Los Angeles Sports Arena Tuesday night.



NICE ON ICE — Dorothy Hamill, 1976 Olympic gold medal winner, stars in the Ice Capades, opening at the Los Angeles Sports Arena Tuesday.

The show will play through May 8 and move to the Long Beach arena May 10-15.

The 20-year-old figure skater became an international heroine by capturing an Olympic gold medal and the hearts of the world in Innsbruck, Austria, in February of 1976. She now provides magical moments for arena audiences and will be making her first Southern California appearance in the extravaganza.

Headliners in the cast of the Ice Capades are comedian Freddie Trenkler, the Clown Prince of Ice, now in his 21st season with the show; Melissa Militano and Johnny Johns, two-time winners of the U.S. Pair Championship (1974 and 1975), a dynamic duo who glide, jump and spin with precision; Terry Kubicka, 1976 U.S. National Senior Men's Championship winner, whose freestyle routines incorporate the triple lutz, triple salchow, triple loop and backward somersault, and Johnny LaBrecque and Bob Mac, who leave audiences shaking with laughter with their zany cavorting. Also performing is Richard Ewell, the first black to hold two national figure skating titles, the 1970 U.S. Junior Men's and the 1972 U.S. Junior Pair Championships.

WATERY DRAMA — Jack Lemmon plays the pilot of a jet liner which sinks in the Bermuda Triangle in "Airport '77." Lemmon, shown rescuing actress Brenda Vaccaro, says it's the first time he has ever performed all his own stunts in a movie.

Degree in music therapy offered

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — The theory that music can be therapeutic is being put to the test in an unusual degree program offered at Indiana-Purdue at Fort Wayne, the only state-supported institution in Indiana to offer the music therapy degree.

Training for music therapists is relatively recent. Music therapists have worked primarily in large mental hospitals until recent years when mental retardation began to receive more attention, said Carol Collins, director of music therapy at the university here.

The program is basically for training musicians to adapt music methods and activities to help accomplish a treatment goal such as better physical coordination, improved speech, or appropriate channeling of emotions.

In addition, Ms. Collins said, it is also used as a research tool, for testing and observing children, to develop techniques for using music and games to help the urban child, particularly the disadvantaged.

The program is being carried on in conjunction with the Mental Health Center in Fort Wayne, area nursing homes and agencies serving handicapped children. Music appropriate to early childhood is applied to training programs for the mentally retarded functioning at that level. Students spend an average of 45 hours during their undergraduate studies participating in the treatment programs in community agencies.

Activities include singing, dancing, and exploring instruments with groups of handicapped children, and adults or individuals.

In addition to their practical experience and observation, students take courses such as Influence of Music on Behavior, Psychology of Music, Music in Therapy and related courses. Since the students are music majors, they also study musical performance, history and theory. A six-month internship under the supervision of a qualified Registered Music Therapist comes after completion of all academic work.

This four-year curriculum is in its second year at IPFW. There are currently 30 Music Therapy majors who will receive a Bachelor of Science in Music Therapy degree.

"The main advantage of music is that it motivates people subtly and can change behavior patterns," Ms. Collins said. "When I worked in a mental hospital we had music activities much like those in schools or communities, but the therapeutic part came in understanding a person's problem and how music could be used to work through that problem.

"Often the psychiatric patient has lost all self-confidence," she explained. "He's defeated and has to be hospitalized, so he has a very poor self-image. If he's interested in music, the therapist is careful to give him a successful experience with it, which helps him regain confidence in himself.

"Then, of course, we try to get more and more of his confidence so he can be rehabilitated and returned home."

Discovering Herbert Hoover

There is a quiet stirring near Wapsinonoc Creek

By JULES LOH
AP Special
Correspondent

WEST BRANCH, Iowa (AP) — There is a quiet stirring on the banks of Wapsinonoc Creek. The people here are cheered by it.

According to Thomas Thalken, who ought to know, Americans are showing a steadily increasing interest in the life and accomplishments of the nation's 31st president, the first from west of the Mississippi and the one everybody here feels got a bum rap from history: Herbert Hoover.

"He's been the most maligned man in public life," Thalken said. "It's still called the Hoover depression, but that's nothing. Even the drought of the thirties is called the Hoover drought as if he had something to do with the rain."

Thalken is the director of the Herbert Hoover Presidential Library, a facility he feels is responsible for a slow but sure reassessment of Hoover's place in history.

"We're servicing a new generation of researchers," he said. "They are asking new questions, questions that wouldn't have been asked 25 or 30 years ago when the events were still too fresh.

"As a result, they are discovering the truly solid accomplishments of the man. In the last 10 years or so, nine books have come out thoroughly documenting these accomplishments.

"We've averaged about 140 reseachers a year visiting the library since it opened in 1966 and the number is growing every year.

"Besides the scholarly books, our resources have resulted in 177 published volumes, 85 articles for historical journals, 52 master degree theses and more than 187 doctoral dissertations. We receive hundreds of research requests through the mail and they are growing more frequent too. The truth about Herbert Hooover is emerging."

There is little doubt that in his later years, before his death in 1964 at the age of 90, Herbert Hoover had recaptured the affection of his countrymen, if not their esteem. Thalken feels he is now winning the latter, and high time.

Thalken says new scholarship at the library backs up his contention that Hoover could do nothing to prevent the Great Depression and sought every conceivable way to stem it, but it was like trying to fold a road map in the wind.

Whatever the final judgment of historians, here in West Branch, where he was born, the aura of Herbert Hoover is almost that of a saint.

West Branch is a town of 1,300, just east of Iowa City, in a pastoral setting that is itself Hooveresque; stern farm houses with fences like starched collars sprinkled among carefully squared fields on the rolling prairie, a Grant Wood canvas from horizon to horizon.

School children tip-toe through the two-room whitewashed cabin where Hoover was born as though it were a church. At the nearby museum, adjoining the library, they gape at glass-encased Hoover relics.

Adults roaming the exhibits seem to linger longer over items of Hoover's private life than documents of his public career — the oil lamps of his childhood, his fishing rod, his wife's collection of Ming porcelain, his pipes, all alike, and his supply of kitchen matches next to the rock he used to strike them on.

Perhaps the most popular exhibit is the display of correspondence between the 31st president and the 33rd, two men whose friendship remained deep until the end. And perhaps, like that of his friend, Herbert Hoover's career will indeed be revalued favorably.

In West Branch, though, there is no need for it. One visitor, an elderly Iowan, studied the exchange of letters and after a while said thoughtfully to his wife:

"Well, I've always admired Hoover. I guess if he saw something in that other fellow, I ought to like Harry Truman too."

Sign of the times

NEW HARMONY, Ind. (AP) — While restoring an 1876 building in this historic town, artisans have recently uncovered a sign for the "Centennial Saloon" of New Harmony. The advertisement for the saloon, painted directly on the side of the building, is now being treated with preservatives, so that the building — one of the prominent restorations in New Harmony's historic district — may again wear its original sign. Instead of a saloon, however, the building itself will now house 19th century antiques on view and for sale to visitors.

Degree in music therapy offered

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — The theory that music can be therapeutic is being put to the test in an unusual degree program offered at Indiana-Purdue at Fort Wayne, the only state-supported institution in Indiana to offer the music therapy degree.

Training for music therapists is relatively recent. Music therapists have worked primarily in large mental hospitals until recent years when mental retardation began to receive more attention, said Carol Collins, director of music therapy at the university here.

The program is basically for training musicians to adapt music methods and activities to help accomplish a treatment goal such as better physical coordination, improved speech, or appropriate channeling of emotions.

In addition, Ms. Collins said, it is also used as a research tool, for testing and observing children, to develop techniques for using music and games to help the urban child, particularly the disadvantaged.

The program is being carried on in conjunction with the Mental Health Center in Fort Wayne, area nursing homes and agencies serving handicapped children. Music appropriate to early childhood is applied to training programs for the mentally retarded functioning at that level. Students spend an average of 45 hours during their undergraduate studies participating in the treatment programs in community agencies.

LEWIS HOMES—ETIWANDA

By home builders' association

Collective bargaining 'reforms' favored

While firmly opposing the common situs picketing bill, the National Association of Home Builders recently endorsed several proposals that would begin to reform chaotic collective bargaining procedures in the construction industry.

NAHB President Robert Arquilla, of suburban Chicago, told a Senate subcommittee hearing that even though builders support some of the amendments in the controversial labor bill under no circumstances would NAHB support situs picketing.

The situs picketing bill would allow a union to shut down an entire construction jobsite, even when their dispute was only with one subcontractor. Since it was introduced earlier this year, several amendments have been added, including one that would form a joint labor-management collective bargaining committee to oversee contract negotiations throughout the country. NAHB supports this proposal.

"While NAHB has long supported legislation to assure that problems of collective bargaining, structure, productivity and manpower development are constructively approached by labor and management in the construction industry, we do not believe that situs picketing should be the price paid for this needed legislation," he said.

Furthermore, Arquilla said, the proposed Construction Industry Collective Bargaining Committee should be strenghtened, giving the panel authority to approve or reject local settlements. Without this power, the panel "could be totally ineffective," he said.

Another amendment endorsed by the NAHB would certify a multi-employer bargaining group as the "sole negotiator" for all employers in a given area who employ tradesmen belonging to a particular union. Presently, the National Labor Relations Board grants exclusive bargaining rights to unions but not to bargaining groups set up by employers.

Consequently, employers who do not join bargaining groups may reach interim agreements with a union, Arquilla said. "If the union goes on strike against the multi-employer bargaining group, the non-member employer will be able to continue working. Such splintering of management during collective bargaining negotiations hinders the ability of the multi-employer bargaining group to reach a reasonable settlement with a union."

Arquilla warned that if the situs picketing bill is passed unions would use the increased strike power to expand their membership rolls. This would result in higher housing prices for consumers as the imbalance that already exists at the bargaining table is tipped even more in favor or labor, he said.

Arquilla noted that construction wages have increased 68 per cent since 1970, bringing the average hourly wage, including fringe benefits, to $11.46, more than double the average wage rate of employes in manufacturing industries.

Builders, he said, have been able to compensate for this sharp increase in labor costs because of advances in construction technology and by using more components (kitchen cabinets, window frames, etc.) that are produced in shops or factories where wages are lower.

Real estate

'The Highlands'

Large homes prove popular

Spacious floor plans can be costly for today's home buyer, building industry analysts are quick to point out. The buyer whose appetite calls for the biggest house in the neighborhood often has to settle instead for one of smaller footage.

"Not so at The Highlands," counters Randall Lewis, marketing vice-president for Lewis Homes. "Here our largest home starts at $43,350, well within the range of most family budgets today."

The Highlands community of single-family residences centers at Rochester Avenue and Church Street in Etiwanda, and the model to which Lewis refers is the development's 502 plan.

"Judging from the popularity of this plan, there must be a lot of people seeking the distinction of living in the largest home in the neighborhood," he said. "We're putting the finishing touches on a few more of this model series in our new Phase II Highlands unit."

Plan 502 features four bedrooms, one of them being designated for optional use as a den. A wardrobe closet extends across an entire wall of the master bedroom suite which also has a walk-in clothes closet.

All Highlands homes have dining areas and pantries. Kitchens are equipped with a continuous-cleaning oven, range, dishwasher and food waste disposal. Living rooms, hallways and master bedrooms are fully carpeted. Draperies are also included in the purchase price.

All the homes have two-car garages and are set on lots measuring 7,200 square feet. Full purchase price is from $39,800 to $46,700. VA, FHA, Cal-Vet and conventional financing is available.

In San Dimas area

Development has few homes left

Only five homes remain in the 31-home Phase III of Butler Housing Corp.'s Glenwood Townhomes in San Dimas, according to Wes Weissinger, Walker & Lee, Inc. regional sales director for the Irvine-based developer.

"One big reason for this popularity is that the natural environment surrounding Glenwood Townhomes has been preserved," he continued. "The units themselves have been specially designed to blend in with the semi-rural atmosphere and to complement the natural land contours and enhance the beauty of the wooded site."

Two- and three-bedroom, one- and two-story plans are available. Two of the models have wall-removing options that can result in double-size bedrooms or large game rooms.

Each home has an oversized, two-car garage with raised concrete storage area and laundry facilities. Spacious patios separate each home from its garage. Some buildings have only two units, while others have three.

Rustic exteriors of rough sawn, vertical paneling complement the environment. Shake shingle roofs are accented by natural finish shingle accents.

The development is less than 30 miles from Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and Orange County, which makes working in any of these areas feasible.

Prices for Glenwood Townhomes range from $38,150 to $47,700. Weissinger said that excellent financing with low down payments is available. The sales office is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

To reach Glenwood Townhomes, take the Orange (57) Freeway north from the Pomona Freeway, to the 210 Freeway and east on the 210 Freeway to the San Dimas offramp. Proceed north on San Dimas to Foothill Boulevard and turn left to the models.

Realtor seminar is slated

Although the subjects of property management, shopping centers and small claims court may seem disparate, they are part of a cohesive program to be presented by the Property Management Division and of the 100,000-member California Association of Realtors on May 9, 11 and 13.

The three topics will be discussed at the Holiday Inn in South San Francisco on May 9, the Marriott Hotel in Los Angeles on May 11 and the Town and Country Hotel in San Diego on May 13. Each seminar wll be held from 1:30 - 4:30 p.m. The fee is $15 for PMD members and $25 for non-members.

Speakers for the topics will include Edward T. Clare Sr., Certified Property Manager (CPM), who will discuss, "The 3 M's — Making Money in Managing;" Posey Carpentier, CPM, who will speak on the topic of "The Dairy of a Shopping Center Manager;" and Hans J. Prufer, CPM, who will discuss, "How to Win in Small Claims Court."

Collective bargaining 'reforms' favored

While firmly opposing the common situs picketing bill, the National Association of Home Builders recently endorsed several proposals that would begin to reform chaotic collective bargaining procedures in the construction industry.

NAHB President Robert Arquilla, of suburban Chicago, told a Senate subcommittee hearing that even though builders support some of the amendments in the controversial labor bill under no circumstances would NAHB support situs picketing.

The situs picketing bill would allow a union to shut down an entire construction jobsite, even when their dispute was only with one subcontractor. Since it was introduced earlier this year, several amendments have been added, including one that would form a joint labor-management collective bargaining committee to oversee contract negotiations throughout the country. NAHB supports this proposal.

"While NAHB has long supported legislation to assure that problems of collective bargaining, structure, productivity and manpower development are constructively approached by labor and management in the construction industry, we do not believe that situs picketing should be the price paid for this needed legislation," he said.

Furthermore, Arquilla said, the proposed Construction Industry Collective Bargaining Committee should be strenghtened, giving the panel authority to approve or reject local settlements. Without this power, the panel "could be totally ineffective," he said.

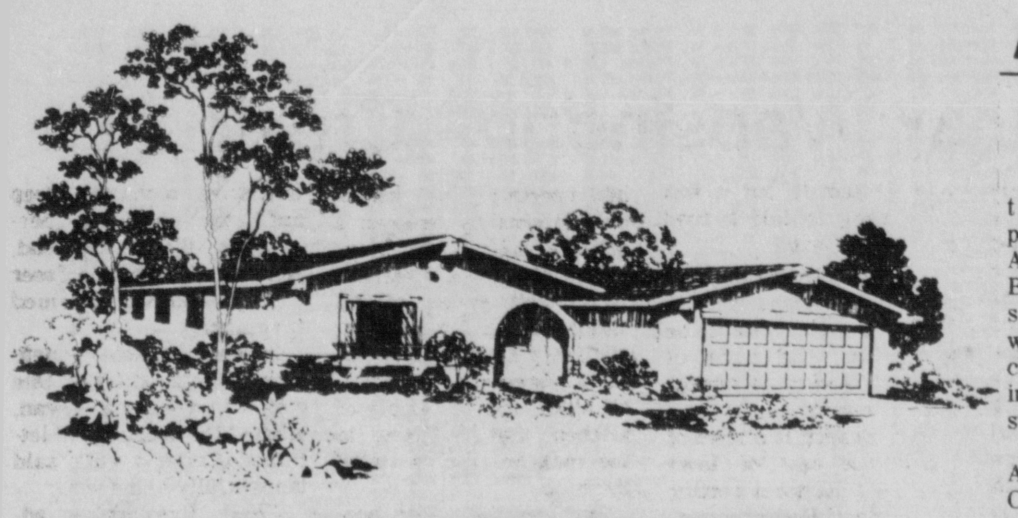
Another amendment endorsed by the NAHB would certify a multi-employer bargaining group as the "sole negotiator" for all employers in a given area who employ tradesmen belonging to a particular union. Presently, the National Labor Relations Board grants exclusive bargaining rights to unions but not to bargaining groups set up by employers.

Consequently, employers who do not join bargaining groups may reach interim agreements with a union, Arquilla said. "If the union goes on strike against the multi-employer bargaining group, the non-member employer will be able to continue working. Such splintering of management during collective bargaining negotiations hinders the ability of the multi-employer bargaining group to reach a reasonable settlement with a union."

Arquilla warned that if the situs picketing bill is passed unions would use the increased strike power to expand their membership rolls. This would result in higher housing prices for consumers as the imbalance that already exists at the bargaining table is tipped even more in favor or labor, he said.

Arquilla noted that construction wages have increased 68 per cent since 1970, bringing the average hourly wage, including fringe benefits, to $11.46, more than double the average wage rate of employes in manufacturing industries.

Builders, he said, have been able to compensate for this sharp increase in labor costs because of advances in construction technology and by using more components (kitchen cabinets, window frames, etc.) that are produced in shops or factories where wages are lower.



LEWIS HOMES—ETIWANDA

'The Highlands'

Large homes prove popular

Spacious floor plans can be costly for today's home buyer, building industry analysts are quick to point out. The buyer whose appetite calls for the biggest house in the neighborhood often has to settle instead for one of smaller footage.

"Not so at The Highlands," counters Randall Lewis, marketing vice-president for Lewis Homes. "Here our largest home starts at $43,350, well within the range of most family budgets today."

The Highlands community of single-family residences centers at Rochester Avenue and Church Street in Etiwanda, and the model to which Lewis refers is the development's 502 plan.

"Judging from the popularity of this plan, there must be a lot of people seeking the distinction of living in the largest home in the neighborhood," he said "We're putting the finishing touches on a few more of this model series in our new Phase II Highlands unit."

Plan 502 features four bedrooms, one of them being designated for optional use as a den. A wardrobe closet extends across an entire wall of the master bedroom suite which also has a walk-in clothes closet.

All Highlands homes have dining areas and pantries. Kitchens are equipped with a continuous-cleaning oven, range, dishwasher and food waste disposal. Living rooms, hallways and master bedrooms are fully carpeted. Draperies are also included in the purchase price.

All the homes have two-car garages and are set on lots measuring 7,200 square feet. Full purchase price is from $39,800 to $46,700. VA, FHA, Cal-Vet and conventional financing is available.

The Highlands is reached from the San Bernardino Freeway by exiting at Haven Avenue at the Ontario Motor Speedway. The route proceeds north on Haven to Foothill Boulevard, east (right) 1¾ miles to Rochester Avenue, then north (left) to Church Street.

Real estate

In San Dimas area

Development has few homes left

Only five homes remain in the 31-home Phase III of Butler Housing Corp.'s Glenwood Townhomes in San Dimas, according to Wes Weissinger, Walker & Lee, Inc. regional sales director for the Irvine-based developer.

"One big reason for this popularity is that the natural environment surrounding Glenwood Townhomes has been preserved," he continued. "The units themselves have been specially designed to blend in with the semi-rural atmosphere and to complement the natural land contours and enhance the beauty of the wooded site."

Two- and three-bedroom, one- and two-story plans are available. Two of the models have wall-removing options that can result in double-size bedrooms or large game rooms.

Each home has an oversized, two-car garage with raised concrete storage area and laundry facilities. Spacious patios separate each home from its garage. Some buildings have only two units, while others have three.

Rustic exteriors of rough sawn, vertical paneling complement the environment. Shake shingle roofs are accented by natural finish shingle accents.

The development is less than 30 miles from Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and Orange County, which makes working in any of these areas feasible.

Prices for Glenwood Townhomes range from $38,150 to $47,700. Weissinger said that excellent financing with low down payments is available. The sales office is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

To reach Glenwood Townhomes, take the Orange (57) Freeway north from the Pomona Freeway, to the 210 Freeway and east on the 210 Freeway to the San Dimas offramp. Proceed north on San Dimas to Foothill Boulevard and turn left to the models.

Nader's 'Raider' warning:

Little help for the consumer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Consumers can't count on either government or business to protect them, says Richard Spohn, 34-year-old director of the state Department of Consumer Affairs and a former "Nader's Raider."

"Our goal is to foster the development of the private sector consumer movement," says Spohn, a mustachioed fifth-generation Californian who spent five years working with consumer advocate Ralph Nader. "Administrations come and administrations go and what's terribly important is that the nongoverment consumer self-representation voice be out there, be vigorous, be strong and be courageous."

Spohn says his view reflects "a realistic assessment that the business of business is business" and that, "in the final analysis, government can't protect consumers."

Private consumer advocates are realizing that "really, the protection is to be had in joining together, in pooling forces and resources, getting expert people, getting involved in public policy and remedying abuses that are seen," Spohn said in an exclusive interview.

"Business is not a charitable undertaking," he said. "And while business is evidencing a greater social concern in some areas, it's only by vigilance on the part of private consumers."

Spohn said investigations by Nader and others also have convinced consumer advocates that many federal agencies are not always on the side of the public.

"The great regulatory agencies that were supposed to protect the public interest have, rather pathetically in many instances, been demonstrated to have become captured by the very interests they were supposed to have been regulating," he said.

Spohn, noting the "revolving door syndrome" in which federal regulatory officials often have taken jobs with companies they have been overseeing, said his agency is trying to put a stop to any such activity in California.

"We have a piece of legislation coming up this year to prohibit people who have been involved in the regulatory process from going out and then selling their talents and skills to hustle the government," he said, explaining that the bill would require former regulatory officials to wait at least one year after leaving state service before joining companies which had been under their supervision.

California already has the most progressive consumer affairs programs in the nation, in Spohn's view.

"Legislatively, we've got unquestionably the broadest and the deepest legislative mandate for consumer representation and consumer protection," he said. "And at the risk of sounding self-serving, in terms of programs in place, I think we've got the most aggressive and effective consumer agency."

Have the activities of his agency increased the costs of doing business in California, as some executives have charged?

"I don't think so at all," says Spohn. "One of our very true commitments is that when you're protecting the consumer, you're also protecting the competitor of a business concern that may be a little afoul of decency and righteousness. If we go after, for example, a large savings and loan that is engaging in deceptive advertising, we're not only protecting the consumer who may be deceived by that advertising, we're also protecting the competitors of that savings and loan who may get business taken away from them because of that deceptive advertising."

Spohn says one of his chief aims is to strengthen the department's Division of Consumer Services, which he headed before becoming director.

"The department is schizophrenic," he said. "On the one hand, we license a million people — everything from doctors to people who train guide dogs. That's done through 38 virtually independent boards and bureaus over which we're sort of an umbrella agency with all of the accountability and very little of the authority.

Market uneasy; widespread losses told amid decline

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recorded some widespread losses this past week in an uneasy initial reaction to President Carter's energy proposals.

In the decline, big-name issues ranging from International Business Machines and Eastman Kodak to Sears Roebuck and General Motors touched new lows for the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 20.69 to 927.07, wiping out much of the previous week's 28.88-point gain.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index slumped 2.60 to 98.44, and the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 1.35 at 53.69.

Volume on the NYSE averaged 21.17 million shares a day, down from 24.78 million the week before.

Although investors had been given considerable advance notice that the energy proposals would contain some unpleasant news, the presentation of the detailed package by Carter on Wednesday sent something of a chill through the market.

The Dow fell 6.79 points on Thursday and another 8.73 Friday.

Analysts said investors seemed to be looking ahead uncomfortably to an expected lengthy struggle in Congress over the plan.

At the same time, brokers noted fears that it would eventually be enacted in a form that might restrict economic growth and add to inflation.

The chief complaint registered by a number of Wall Streeters was that Carter's plan, from their vantage point, heavily stressed energy conservation without giving similar emphasis to encouraging more production of fuels.

Said Albert H. Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics: "The upshot of it all is that severe conservation must be recommended because political considerations, mainly relating to environmentalism, make it virtually impossible to recommend actions that would expand energy supplies."

Not all stocks, of course, suffered as a result of the Carter package.

Nader's 'Raider' warning:

Little help for the consumer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Consumers can't count on either government or business to protect them, says Richard Spohn, 34-year-old director of the state Department of Consumer Affairs and a former "Nader's Raider."

"Our goal is to foster the development of the private sector consumer movement," says Spohn, a mustachioed fifth-generation Californian who spent five years working with consumer advocate Ralph Nader. "Administrations come and administrations go and what's terribly important is that the nongoverment consumer self-representation voice be out there, be vigorous, be strong and be courageous."

Spohn says his view reflects "a realistic assessment that the business of business is business" and that, "in the final analysis, government can't protect consumers."

Private consumer advocates are realizing that "really, the protection is to be had in joining together, in pooling forces and resources, getting expert people, getting involved in public policy and remedying abuses that are seen," Spohn said in an exclusive interview.

"Business is not a charitable undertaking," he said. "And while business is evidencing a greater social concern in some areas, it's only by vigilance on the part of private consumers."

Spohn said investigations by Nader and others also have convinced consumer advocates that many federal agencies are not always on the side of the public.

"The great regulatory agencies that were supposed to protect the public interest have, rather pathetically in many instances, been demonstrated to have become captured by the very interests they were supposed to have been regulating," he said.

Spohn, noting the "revolving door syndrome" in which federal regulatory officials often have taken jobs with companies they have been overseeing, said his agency is trying to put a stop to any such activity in California.

"We have a piece of legislation coming up this year to prohibit people who have been involved in the regulatory process from going out and then selling their talents and skills to hustle the government," he said, explaining that the bill would require former regulatory officials to wait at least one year after leaving state service before joining companies which had been under their supervision.

California already has the most progressive consumer affairs programs in the nation, in Spohn's view.

"Legislatively, we've got unquestionably the broadest and the deepest legislative mandate for consumer representation and consumer protection," he said. "And at the risk of sounding self-serving, in terms of programs in place, I think we've got the most aggressive and effective consumer agency."

Have the activities of his agency increased the costs of doing business in California, as some executives have charged?

"I don't think so at all," says Spohn. "One of our very true commitments is that when you're protecting the consumer, you're also protecting the competitor of a business concern that may be a little afoul of decency and righteousness. If we go after, for example, a large savings and loan that is engaging in deceptive advertising, we're not only protecting the consumer who may be deceived by that advertising, we're also protecting the competitors of that savings and loan who may get business taken away from them because of that deceptive advertising."

Spohn says one of his chief aims is to strengthen the department's Division of Consumer Services, which he headed before becoming director.

"The department is schizophrenic," he said. "On the one hand, we license a million people — everything from doctors to people who train guide dogs. That's done through 38 virtually independent boards and bureaus over which we're sort of an umbrella agency with all of the accountability and very little of the authority.

Market uneasy; widespread losses told amid decline

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recorded some widespread losses this past week in an uneasy initial reaction to President Carter's energy proposals.

In the decline, big-name issues ranging from International Business Machines and Eastman Kodak to Sears Roebuck and General Motors touched new lows for the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 20.69 to 927.07, wiping out much of the previous week's 28.88-point gain.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index slumped 2.60 to 98.44, and the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 1.35 at 53.69.

Volume on the NYSE averaged 21.17 million shares a day, down from 24.78 million the week before.

Although investors had been given considerable advance notice that the energy proposals would contain some unpleasant news, the presentation of the detailed package by Carter on Wednesday sent something of a chill through the market.

The Dow fell 6.79 points on Thursday and another 8.73 Friday.

Analysts said investors seemed to be looking ahead uncomfortably to an expected lengthy struggle in Congress over the plan.

At the same time, brokers noted fears that it would eventually be enacted in a form that might restrict economic growth and add to inflation.

The chief complaint registered by a number of Wall Streeters was that Carter's plan, from their vantage point, heavily stressed energy conservation without giving similar emphasis to encouraging more production of fuels.

Said Albert H. Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics: "The upshot of it all is that severe conservation must be recommended because political considerations, mainly relating to environmentalism, make it virtually impossible to recommend actions that would expand energy supplies."

Not all stocks, of course, suffered as a result of the Carter package.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:
JOY SEELY OF SULPHUR SPRINGS, TX, ASKS:
"WHY IS IT COOLER IN THE MOUNTAINS?"
4/24

THE HIGHER UP WE GO, ON A MOUNTAIN OR UP IN A PLANE, THE LESS AIR THERE IS ABOVE US. THE THINNER THE AIR BECOMES THE COOLER IT GETS, BECAUSE THE AIR CANNOT ABSORB AS MUCH HEAT FROM THE SUN'S RAYS AS IT IS ABLE TO HOLD AT LOWER ELEVATIONS. WE OFTEN SEE SNOW ON HIGH MOUNTAIN TOPS DURING THE SUMMER BECAUSE THE TEMPERATURE IS TOO COLD FOR ALL THE SNOW TO MELT.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:
JOY SEELY OF SULPHUR SPRINGS, TX, ASKS:
"WHY IS IT COOLER IN THE MOUNTAINS?"
THE HIGHER UP WE GO, ON A MOUNTAIN OR UP IN A PLANE, THE LESS AIR THERE IS ABOVE US. THE THINNER THE AIR BECOMES THE COOLER IT GETS, BECAUSE THE AIR CANNOT ABSORB AS MUCH HEAT FROM THE SUN'S RAYS AS IT IS ABLE TO HOLD AT LOWER ELEVATIONS. WE OFTEN SEE SNOW ON HIGH MOUNTAIN TOPS DURING THE SUMMER BECAUSE THE TEMPERATURE IS TOO COLD FOR ALL THE SNOW TO MELT.

DEAR POLLY — Keep an extra lid off a shortening can and have it to go on the bottom of the new can. This keeps the cupboard or counter from getting greasy and from being scratched. — HILDA.

DEAR POLLY — I use a liquid fabric softener in the final rise for diapers and then hang them outside to dry, so they are kept soft without having to go through the dryer. Two are pinned together on the line to save space and then they are folded together to have a double diaper ready for use. — SUE.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

The following Pointers are some that readers have shared with us in years past and that still linger with us:

●

A dustpan makes the best sort of shovel to use when cleaning snow off of steps or outside stairways. Begin with the bottom step and scoop as you climb. Try this. It is quick, easy and efficient.

●

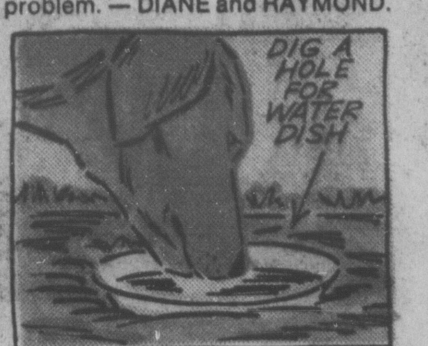
Remove salt rings from boots and galoshes by brushing them with vinegar and salt water."

●

When painting furniture or woodwork indoors slip a pair of old socks over your shoes. If paint drops on the floor you just "skate" it off. Saves your shoes and your back, too.

●

DEAR POLLY — If you keep a dog outside on a chain and he seems to be always knocking his water over, dig a hole the size of the bowl, place the dish in the hole and solve the problem. — DIANE and RAYMOND.



DIG A HOLE FOR WATER DISH

DEAR POLLY — A little square dauber that came with white shoe polish works beautifully for painting small areas. I used it for painting an iron railing in the living room, for window trim, for painting picture frames and so on. This is much faster and better than a small brush and there are no drips. — KAREN.

●

DEAR POLLY — My practically new station wagon has wood-grainlike side paneling that became white and faded-looking. A car-wash operator said, "If it were my car, I'd try using furniture polish till the original color is restored, and then car wax." This worked for me. — MRS. J.V.P.

Polly's note: Test a small space first, as car finishes could differ.

●

DEAR POLLY — To peel boiled potatoes faster and easier, score the skins around the centers with a paring knife before cooking. Hold the cooked potato with a fork and peel back the skin, starting at the scored lines. — EMILY.

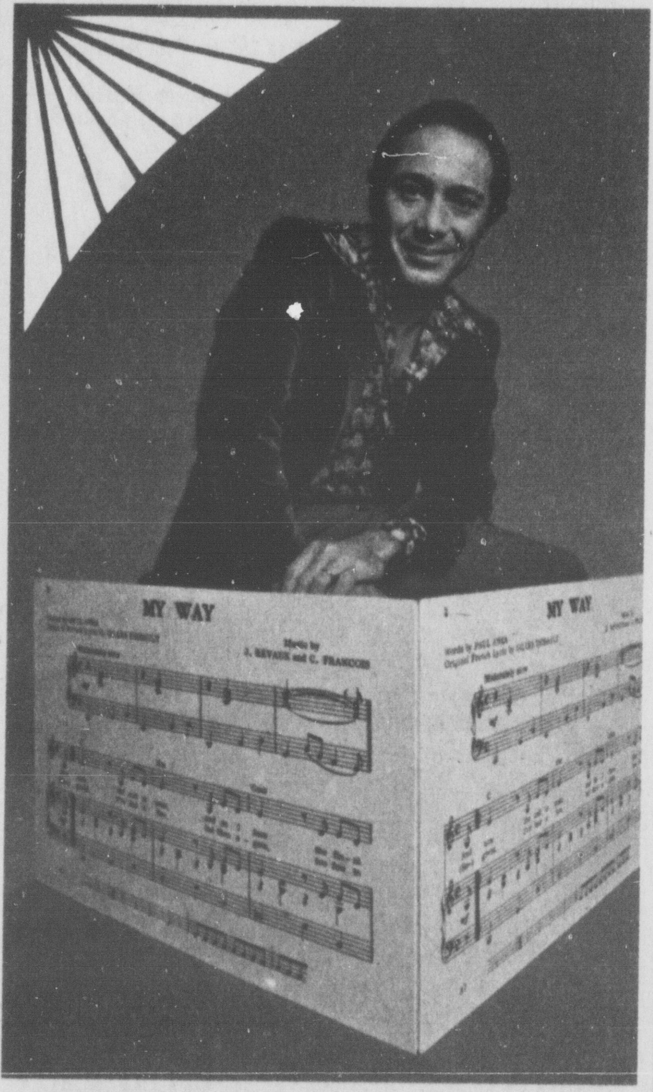
SHOWTIME!



Paul Anka, superstar and singer-composer, stars in his first network television Special, "Paul Anka—Music My Way," on ABC, Monday at 10PM. It was taped at the famed Hollywood Palladium which is, in itself, a "first" for Anka...the last time he "performed" there was as a parking lot attendant in 1956. This is the first time he's gone inside to entertain. Special guest is Natalie Cole, and making cameo appearances are a number of show business personalities who were important to Anka during his show business years that began 20 years ago with the song "Diana." Also guesting are his wife, Anne, and his four daughters—Amanda, Alicia, Anthea and Alexandra.

Lovely Ann-Margret pays tribute to the world of country & western music in its own locale—Opryland's Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, in her new special "Ann-Margret—Rhinestone Cowgirl," on NBC, Tuesday at 9PM. Special guests for the musical hour are Perry Como, Minnie Pearl, guitarist Chet Atkins and Bob Hope. Highlights of the show include a comedy sketch with Minnie Pearl (as the Passion Sisters) who are shortly joined by Como and Hope (as the Heavenly Brothers) for the musical number "Settin' the Woods on Fire." The major production number is a salute to Aaron Copland in which Ann-Margret and her dancers perform some of Copland's great ballet music, including sections from "Rodeo," "Billy the Kid," and "Appalachian Spring."

Water shortage: another phoney crisis?

Is there a water shortage? No. Well, yes. Well, maybe, depending. Well, not for five years.

Meanwhile, the waters in Southern California flow lavishly, while the water experts drown us in rhetoric.

Tonight, Channel 7 launches its most devastating documentary series yet. "The Big Drought," an Eyewitness Closeup, separates the drought news from the gossip and California's lurid water past from our painful water present.

Turn off the bath water, and turn on Eyewitness News at 6 o'clock every night this week. We'll pull the plug on your drought doubts.

NEW FAMILY

Congratulations, Detective Phil Fish—you've become a father! It's true. The sad-faced Abe Vigoda, who sometimes makes Job look as if he didn't have a care in the world when he portrays Fish on ABC's Barney Miller series, has a new family.

He and wife Bernice (Florence Stanley) have taken on five problem youngsters and a resident psychologist as foster parents of a New York City Group Home, and their ups and downs are on view each Saturday night (8:30 - 9PM) on the new ABC series, Fish.

Fish, the grouch with a warm heart, is in the twilight of his career as a New York City cop (although he'll still appear from time to time on Barney Miller) when Bernice talks him into heading a new household to augment their income.

The premise is realistic, as Group Homes do exist in New York, and the foster parents are paid for their efforts. The residents usually include a social worker or other trained consultant and as many as twelve young PINS (Persons in need of supervision).

Phil Fish is fortunate. He only has to contend with five of them, but even for a hardened detective, that's a handful. To his way of thinking, Fish would vastly prefer to spend all his time at the 12th Precinct stationhouse with the "muggers, robbers and rapists—people you can talk to." But, he grudgingly accepts the Group Home task, and, as each weekly episode unfolds, it's obvious that there's more than a glimmer of compassion beneath his crusty attitude.

Bernice, a natural mother if ever there was one, helps Fish cope. And, he occasionally even gets some sound advice from the otherwise dingy psychologist Charlie Harrison, played by seasoned veteran actor Barry Gordon. Then there are the kids themselves, a mixed bag of street urchins circa the '70's.

There's Mike (Lenny Bari) the eldest of the group, charmer, ladies man and con artist supreme; Diane (Sarah Natoli) a well-meaning girl whose devotion to watching television is so great she even has her own favorite test patterns; Victor (John Cassisi) the blustering tough-guy wo has an answer for everything, even if no one has asked a question; Jilly (Denise Miller), cute, coy, sometimes even demure, but a real hustler; and Loomis (Todd Bridges) the youngest of the gang—butter wouldn't melt in his mouth even while he's picking your pocket.

Sheer chance has brought them all together in a dilapidated old house in Brooklyn. Yet, they're determined to make a go of it. Fish's answer—"Keep them away from normal people."

But that's half the success of Fish. If not "normal" in every respect (who is?) they remain very real and believable. They don't differ all that much from young people everywhere, except that bad breaks and broken families have left them rudderless on life's sea. Through their association with Fish, Bernice and Charlie, they're on their way to straightening out their lives.

CLOSE-UP

NEW FAMILY

Congratulations, Detective Phil Fish—you've become a father! It's true. The sad-faced Abe Vigoda, who sometimes makes Job look as if he didn't have a care in the world when he portrays Fish on ABC's Barney Miller series, has a new family.

He and wife Bernice (Florence Stanley) have taken on five problem youngsters and a resident psychologist as foster parents of a New York City Group Home, and their ups and downs are on view each Saturday night (8:30 - 9PM) on the new ABC series, Fish.

Fish, the grouch with a warm heart, is in the twilight of his career as a New York City cop (although he'll still appear from time to time on Barney Miller) when Bernice talks him into heading a new household to augment their income.

The premise is realistic, as Group Homes do exist in New York, and the foster parents are paid for their efforts. The residents usually include a social worker or other trained consultant and as many as twelve young PINS (Persons in need of supervision).

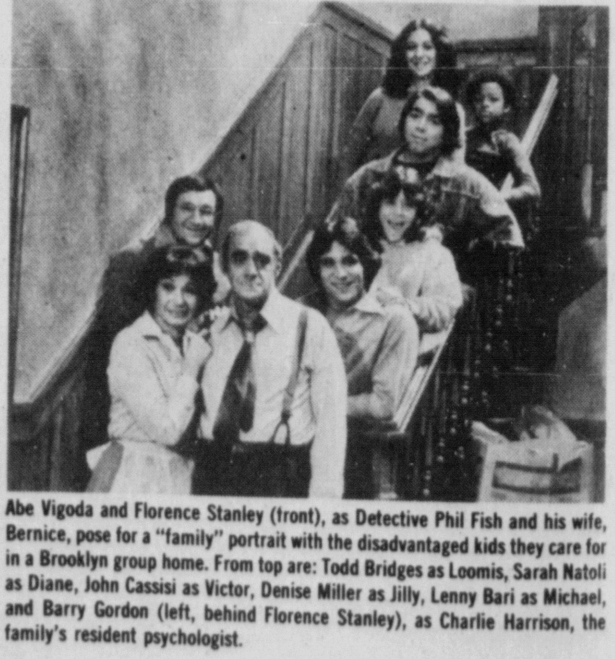
Phil Fish is fortunate. He only has to contend with five of them, but even for a hardened detective, that's a handful. To his way of thinking, Fish would vastly prefer to spend all his time at the 12th Precinct stationhouse with the "muggers, robbers and rapists—people you can talk to." But, he grudgingly accepts the Group Home task, and, as each weekly episode unfolds, it's obvious that there's more than a glimmer of compassion beneath his crusty attitude.

Bernice, a natural mother if ever there was one, helps Fish cope. And, he occasionally even gets some sound advice from the otherwise dingy psychologist Charlie Harrison, played by seasoned veteran actor Barry Gordon. Then there are the kids themselves, a mixed bag of street urchins circa the '70's.

There's Mike (Lenny Bari) the eldest of the group, charmer, ladies man and con artist supreme; Diane (Sarah Natoli) a well-meaning girl whose devotion to watching television is so great she even has her own favorite test patterns; Victor (John Cassisi) the blustering tough-guy wo has an answer for everything, even if no one has asked a question; Jilly (Denise Miller), cute, coy, sometimes even demure, but a real hustler; and Loomis (Todd Bridges) the youngest of the gang—butter wouldn't melt in his mouth even while he's picking your pocket.

Sheer chance has brought them all together in a dilapidated old house in Brooklyn. Yet, they're determined to make a go of it. Fish's answer—"Keep them away from normal people."

But that's half the success of Fish. If not "normal" in every respect (who is?) they remain very real and believable. They don't differ all that much from young people everywhere, except that bad breaks and broken families have left them rudderless on life's sea. Through their association with Fish, Bernice and Charlie, they're on their way to straightening out their lives.



Abe Vigoda and Florence Stanley (front), as Detective Phil Fish and his wife, Bernice, pose for a "family" portrait with the disadvantaged kids they care for in a Brooklyn group home. From top are: Todd Bridges as Loomis, Sarah Natoli as Diane, John Cassisi as Victor, Denise Miller as Jilly, Lenny Bari as Michael, and Barry Gordon (left, behind Florence Stanley), as Charlie Harrison, the family's resident psychologist.

Jo Ann Harris, who plays a member of a special task force of the Los Angeles Police Department in the Most Wanted teleseries, actually got her crime-fighting start as "Michael O'Hara the Fourth," a dainty detective who's a private eyeful on The Wonderful World of Disney. "Michael O'Hara the Fourth" comes to television in two parts on Sunday evenings (April 24 and May 1) at 7PM on NBC. The lovely Ms. Harris portrays the title character, who enthusiastically attempts to live up to the family name and tradition of being a policeman named O'Hara, much to the dismay of her police captain father, Dan Dailey.

In the first show, "To Trap A Thief," Mike's meddling in a counterfeit caper results in her setting a snare for her prime crime suspect, only it's not Mike's man who takes the bait.

As "The Deceptive Detective" in the second episode, the pretty private eye attempts to smoke out a murder suspect by blackmail, but manages only to "finger" her father instead.

With all of this special training behind her, it's no wonder that Jo Ann Harris is the perceptive, personable and pretty Kate Manners of the Most Wanted series. Having graduated from Grant High School in Los Angeles, she is filming the Los Angeles based show practically in her own backyard. Miss Harris excelled in acting, as well as art, while in school and continues to be a dedicated student of her profession, studying in acting groups and observing film techniques.

Besides The Wonderful World of Disney she has guest starred in such teleseries as Run for Your Life, Marcus Welby, M.D., Hawaii Five-O, The F.B.I., Mannix, The Streets of San Francisco and Rich Man, Poor Man. Her film credits include "Beguiled," "The Parallax View" and "Gay Deceivers."

Sandy Hill, news reporter for KABC-TV, Los Angeles, has joined ABC's Good Morning America, starring host David Hartman. Prior to joining KABC-TV, Ms. Hill was a news reporter and co-anchor person at KNXT-TV in Los Angeles. She began her broadcasting career at KIRO-TV in Seattle in 1969. While working in Los Angeles, where she also appeared occasionally on "A.M. Los Angeles," Ms. Hill was host of the Emmy award-winning program, "Follow-Up," a mini-documentary series dealing with current events in Southern California.

Ms. Hill, born and raised in Centralia, Washington, is a graduate of the University of Washington where she majored in Spanish. She is married to Craig Everett Hill, a banker for Manufacturer's Hanover Trust in Los Angeles.

Production has started in Canada on "A Matter of Inconvenience," a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie starring Lee Majors.

Majors portrays a Vietnam veteran trying to rehabilitate his best friend, who has become bitter and withdrawn after being maimed in war action he feels his friend could have prevented. Barbara Hershey co-stars.

"A Matter of Inconvenience" was written by Theodore J. Flicker and Allan Balter. Flicker is directing; Balter is producing. Majors is the executive producer.

For those of you who think that Dick Van Patten looks familiar, it's because you've seen him so often on television, over many years. Dick has been in show business since he was seven years old. He has appeared in 27 Broadway plays, countless feature films (a regular in Walt Disney films) and hundreds of TV commercials. He has guest starred in numerous TV shows and has been a regular on several TV series. Here's a brief rundown of his TV career: he played Nels, the son in "I Remember Mama," the series which starred Peggy Wood; he co-starred with Don Adams in The Partner; co-starred with Herschel Bernardi in Arnie, and co-starred in The Dick Van Dyke Show. Van Patten played Friar Tuck in ABC's When Things Were Rotten, and he is now starring as Tom Bradford, the patient, loving father of eight in ABC's Eight Is Enough, which airs Tuesdays at 9PM.

TELE-TALK

Jo Ann Harris, who plays a member of a special task force of the Los Angeles Police Department in the Most Wanted teleseries, actually got her crime-fighting start as "Michael O'Hara the Fourth," a dainty detective who's a private eyeful on The Wonderful World of Disney. "Michael O'Hara the Fourth" comes to television in two parts on Sunday evenings (April 24 and May 1) at 7PM on NBC. The lovely Ms. Harris portrays the title character, who enthusiastically attempts to live up to the family name and tradition of being a policeman named O'Hara, much to the dismay of her police captain father, Dan Dailey.

In the first show, "To Trap A Thief," Mike's meddling in a counterfeit caper results in her setting a snare for her prime crime suspect, only it's not Mike's man who takes the bait.

As "The Deceptive Detective" in the second episode, the pretty private eye attempts to smoke out a murder suspect by blackmail, but manages only to "finger" her father instead.

With all of this special training behind her, it's no wonder that Jo Ann Harris is the perceptive, personable and pretty Kate Manners of the Most Wanted series. Having graduated from Grant High School in Los Angeles, she is filming the Los Angeles based show practically in her own backyard. Miss Harris excelled in acting, as well as art, while in school and continues to be a dedicated student of her profession, studying in acting groups and observing film techniques.

Besides The Wonderful World of Disney she has guest starred in such teleseries as Run for Your Life, Marcus Welby, M.D., Hawaii Five-O, The F.B.I., Mannix, The Streets of San Francisco and Rich Man, Poor Man. Her film credits include "Beguiled," "The Parallax View" and "Gay Deceivers."

Sandy Hill, news reporter for KABC-TV, Los Angeles, has joined ABC's Good Morning America, starring host David Hartman. Prior to joining KABC-TV, Ms. Hill was a news reporter and co-anchor person at KNXT-TV in Los Angeles. She began her broadcasting career at KIRO-TV in Seattle in 1969. While working in Los Angeles, where she also appeared occasionally on "A.M. Los Angeles," Ms. Hill was host of the Emmy award-winning program, "Follow-Up," a mini-documentary series dealing with current events in Southern California.

Ms. Hill, born and raised in Centralia, Washington, is a graduate of the University of Washington where she majored in Spanish. She is married to Craig Everett Hill, a banker for Manufacturer's Hanover Trust in Los Angeles.

Production has started in Canada on "A Matter of Inconvenience," a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie starring Lee Majors.

Majors portrays a Vietnam veteran trying to rehabilitate his best friend, who has become bitter and withdrawn after being maimed in war action he feels his friend could have prevented. Barbara Hershey co-stars.

"A Matter of Inconvenience" was written by Theodore J. Flicker and Allan Balter. Flicker is directing; Balter is producing. Majors is the executive producer.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR CINDY WILLIAMS, star of Laverne and Shirley

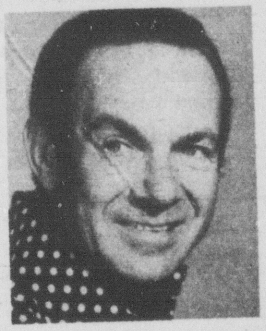
How about those rumors that you and Penny Marshall don't get along offstage? — Chris Lunz, Little Silver, N.J.

● Not true. We're the best of friends. Seems that from the days of Adam and Eve, every time a new team is formed a story starts up that they're feuding. While that might apply to some, it doesn't to us. To be honest, we don't spend all our off-stage hours together because we both have our own lives to lead, but we do go as far as putting in extra time for the show — such as doing publicity for the studio on our days off.



FOR JACK CARTER, comedian

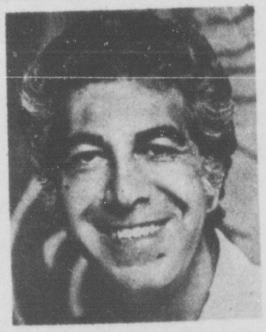
Do you enjoy listening to other comedians? — T.J., Miami, Fla.

● Yes, because I love all kinds of humor — corn, dry stuff . . . even just someone who tries. I love to laugh. But the one thing I have against today's crop of comics is that they all have the same routine — they go for filth. They do four minutes of something, then end it with a four-letter word. David Brenner is my pet hate. I hate anyone who laughs at himself.

FOR ANNE MEARA, actress

I read you fixed up your apartment all by yourself. What part of decorating gave you the most trouble? — J.M., Green Bay, Wis.

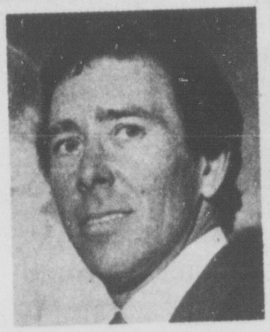
● Hanging stacks of pictures. I didn't know where to put them or what kind of an arrangement to make. For a week I was stretching and bending, experimenting with models, cut to scale. Then I got so disgusted, I just stuck the whole lot on the wall — anywhere. Would you believe the effect of this "instant" design is terrific? Looks like the work of a professional, not the result of a fed-up amateur.



FOR MR. BLACKWELL, fashion designer

Explain the point of your annual "Worst Dressed" list and your insulting, insensitive remarks about the women on them. — Joann Kujawa, Winona, Minn.

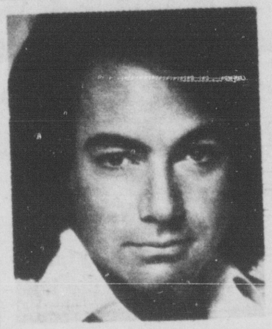
● The point, in my opinion, is to illustrate wrong from right. Furthermore, I don't consider my remarks insensitive. And if these ladies are insulted by being reviewed, they should keep out of the public eye.



FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I've heard talk that Lord Snowdon invented a powered mobile wheelchair. Is this so? — Helen Burstein, San Francisco, Calif.

● Yes. Before he married Princess Margaret, Anthony Armstrong Jones (right) was a commercial photographer, and he still is. But he has other interests (commercial and philanthropic), one of which is the mobile chair, which can be driven by a person with the use of only one arm (finger mobility is not necessary). It can go forward, backward and pivot around its own length. Right now, it's available only in Britain.



FOR NEIL DIAMOND, composer-singer

Who inspired your new album, Beautiful Noise? — Karen L. Keown, Swayzee, Ind.

● Not "who," but "what." And the "what" was the seven years I spent in Tin Pan Alley, unsuccessfully trying to become a songwriter. By the way, those were the years (the early-to-mid-'60's) that saw the revolution in pop music and the rise of the composer-performer.

FOR NATALIE COLE, singer and daughter of Nat "King" Cole

Why did you decide to follow in your father's footsteps? — E.R., Great Falls, Mont.

● It happened by accident. I was a psychology major at the University of Massachusetts and, for fun, joined with some musician friends working their way through college by playing at local clubs. I had never given singing a serious thought until those jam sessions. What I really wanted to do was to open a child-rehabilitation center in Los Angeles. I still might — when I've saved enough money from singing.

FOR BEN CRENSHAW, pro golfer

Ever have an embarrassing moment on the course? — D.M., Washington, D.C.

● Yes, at the Masters Tournament, 1976, when I had to take off one shoe and one sock and try a shot on the 15th hole out of the water, with my right pants leg rolled up — looking like a halfway Tom Sawyer. But it was the only way to make the shot. I felt sort of silly, dressing and undressing in front of a large crowd at Augusta and millions more on TV.

FOR KANDY STROUD, author of How Jimmy Won

I'd like to know your first impression of the President. — L.P., Troy, N.Y.

● When I arrived at the million-dollar, red-brick Governor's mansion in Atlanta and met Jimmy Carter for the first time, I expected him to be the epitome of Southern sophistication. Instead, I found him in farming clothes. When I left, I came away with an indelible impression of Carter as a politician completely different from all the rest. He's down-to-earth and sophisticated; accessible, though guarded; friendly, yet reserved; casual, but disciplined. But, above all, he's human.

FOR SEN. THOMAS EAGLETON (D.-Mo.)

What do you have against pension benefits to workers offered by cities and states? — Mrs. L. M., Hobart, Ind.

● I'm not as concerned about the benefits as about how we pay for them. Private pension systems are backed by employee and employer contributions to trust funds; many public pension systems are "unfunded." Governments have made generous promises to employees but have not put aside money to back up the promises. Pension obligations are growing at a fantastic rate. Unless we change our pension-financing system, governments may not have enough money for anything but pensions.

PRO AND CON

Should Lawyers Have The Right To Advertise?

PRO Joel M. Gora, Acting Legal Director, American Civil Liberties Union

Yes. The ACLU believes that, under our First Amendment's provision for freedom of speech, lawyers should be permitted to advertise their services, and prohibitions on such advertising cannot pass constitutional muster. Such commercial speech is protected by the First Amendment because of its importance to individual economic decision-making. By advertising fees, attorneys provide the type of economic information most useful for consumer decision-making. Millions of Americans do not know how to find a lawyer and are afraid they cannot afford one. Such information will facilitate the constitutional right to obtain legal services.

CON Justin A. Stanley, President, American Bar Association

No. I believe the public is entitled to have more information about lawyers than it has traditionally received, but I do not think that lawyers have an unrestricted, constitutionally protected, right to advertise commercially or that it is in the public interest to have such advertising. We can best learn what information is useful through state-by-state experimentation. Generally, the supreme courts of our states admit lawyers to practice and control their conduct. Accordingly, what lawyers can say to the public, as well as the time, place and manner in which they can present information, should also be subject to the courts' control.

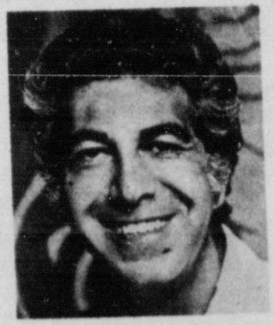
FOR ANNE MEARA, actress

I read you fixed up your apartment all by yourself. What part of decorating gave you the most trouble? — J.M., Green Bay, Wis.

● Hanging stacks of pictures. I didn't know where to put them or what kind of an arrangement to make. For a week I was stretching and bending, experimenting with models, cut to scale. Then I got so disgusted, I just stuck the whole lot on the wall — anywhere. Would you believe the effect of this "instant" design is terrific? Looks like the work of a professional, not the result of a fed-up amateur.



FOR MR. BLACKWELL, fashion designer

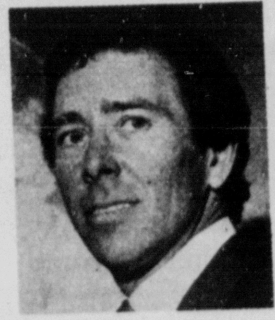
Explain the point of your annual "Worst Dressed" list and your insulting, insensitive remarks about the women on them. — Joann Kujawa, Winona, Minn.

● The point, in my opinion, is to illustrate wrong from right. Furthermore, I don't consider my remarks insensitive. And if these ladies are insulted by being reviewed, they should keep out of the public eye.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I've heard talk that Lord Snowdon invented a powered mobile wheelchair. Is this so? — Helen Burstein, San Francisco, Calif.

● Yes. Before he married Princess Margaret, Anthony Armstrong Jones (right) was a commercial photographer, and he still is. But he has other interests (commercial and philanthropic), one of which is the mobile chair, which can be driven by a person with the use of only one arm (finger mobility is not necessary). It can go forward, backward and pivot around its own length. Right now, it's available only in Britain.



FOR NEIL DIAMOND, composer-singer

Who inspired your new album, Beautiful Noise? — Karen L. Keown, Swayzee, Ind.

● Not "who," but "what." And the "what" was the seven years I spent in Tin Pan Alley, unsuccessfully trying to become a songwriter. By the way, those were the years (the early-to-mid-'60's) that saw the revolution in pop music and the rise of the composer-performer.

FOR NATALIE COLE, singer and daughter of Nat "King" Cole

Why did you decide to follow in your father's footsteps? — E.R., Great Falls, Mont.

● It happened by accident. I was a psychology major at the University of Massachusetts and, for fun, joined with some musician friends working their way through college by playing at local clubs. I had never given singing a serious thought until those jam sessions. What I really wanted to do was to open a child-rehabilitation center in Los Angeles. I still might — when I've saved enough money from singing.

FOR BEN CRENSHAW, pro golfer

Ever have an embarrassing moment on the course? — D.M., Washington, D.C.

● Yes, at the Masters Tournament, 1976, when I had to take off one shoe and one sock and try a shot on the 15th hole out of the water, with my right pants leg rolled up — looking like a halfway Tom Sawyer. But it was the only way to make the shot. I felt sort of silly, dressing and undressing in front of a large crowd at Augusta and millions more on TV.

FOR KANDY STROUD, author of How Jimmy Won

I'd like to know your first impression of the President. — L.P., Troy, N.Y.

● When I arrived at the million-dollar, red-brick Governor's mansion in Atlanta and met Jimmy Carter for the first time, I expected him to be the epitome of Southern sophistication. Instead, I found him in farming clothes. When I left, I came away with an indelible impression of Carter as a politician completely different from all the rest. He's down-to-earth and sophisticated; accessible, though guarded; friendly, yet reserved; casual, but disciplined. But, above all, he's human.

FOR SEN. THOMAS EAGLETON (D.-Mo.)

What do you have against pension benefits to workers offered by cities and states? — Mrs. L. M., Hobart, Ind.

● I'm not as concerned about the benefits as about how we pay for them. Private pension systems are backed by employee and employer contributions to trust funds; many public pension systems are "unfunded." Governments have made generous promises to employees but have not put aside money to back up the promises. Pension obligations are growing at a fantastic rate. Unless we change our pension-financing system, governments may not have enough money for anything but pensions.

PRO AND CON

Should Lawyers Have The Right To Advertise?

PRO Joel M. Gora, Acting Legal Director, American Civil Liberties Union

Yes. The ACLU believes that, under our First Amendment's provision for freedom of speech, lawyers should be permitted to advertise their services, and prohibitions on such advertising cannot pass constitutional muster. Such commercial speech is protected by the First Amendment because of its importance to individual economic decision-making. By advertising fees, attorneys provide the type of economic information most useful for consumer decision-making. Millions of Americans do not know how to find a lawyer and are afraid they cannot afford one. Such information will facilitate the constitutional right to obtain legal services.

CON Justin A. Stanley, President, American Bar Association

No. I believe the public is entitled to have more information about lawyers than it has traditionally received, but I do not think that lawyers have an unrestricted, constitutionally protected, right to advertise commercially or that it is in the public interest to have such advertising. We can best learn what information is useful through state-by-state experimentation. Generally, the supreme courts of our states admit lawyers to practice and control their conduct. Accordingly, what lawyers can say to the public, as well as the time, place and manner in which they can present information, should also be subject to the courts' control.

A FREE PRESS IS UP TO YOU

Think about it: If our news were controlled, and if the press could publish only approved material, how long would we last as the world's oldest democracy?

By Joe D. Smith Jr.

Author's Note: It is unusual for a newspaper publisher to have the opportunity to address millions of readers of many newspapers via FAMILY WEEKLY. The ideas expressed here are my own. No one can or should presume to speak for all newspapers in a free society.

Some believe that the press of the United States is too free; that reporters are contemptuous of people, institutions and traditions in their quest for news; that the communication media are reckless with the truth as they make the news instead of just reporting it.

Recently the heaviest criticism has been directed at the "national press" — another name for the big-city newspapers. Lumped with them are television newsmen or commentators and news magazines whose content or style may be abrasive to some. But I detect some animosity to all journalists — including the small-city newspaper with which I work.

Elected officials at all levels of government are most vocal critics — the press is a favorite whipping boy. But elected officials are not alone. Leaders in business, labor, education, medicine and law also have strongly criticized the press's alleged mistakes. So commonplace have the charges become that many people believe them — regardless of their merit.

The time has come for straight talk and frank discussion to insure that Americans do not lose a precious heritage – freedom of the press. Without public understanding and support, that freedom cannot long endure; and without it there is serious doubt that our free society could long endure.

The First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that, "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press. . . ." That is the beginning of our Bill of Rights, which was adopted as a result of criticism voiced during the drafting and ratification of the Constitution.

First Amendment rights are essential to preservation of a society of individuals. If people are to govern themselves, they must freely know who and what they have to choose between. They must be able to talk, write and debate about candidates and issues.

We must remember that our Constitution is a restriction on government power and a brake on impetuous action. In the absence of a Constitution various temporary majorities in a democracy can speedily do anything they wish. It's you and I as individuals, and sometimes as holders of a minority view, who need constitutional safeguards against being victimized by a majority or a government that disagrees with us.

The Constitution carefully provides time for thoughtful deliberation and for the full discussion so essential in a democracy; and during that time, freedom of speech and of the press are vital to an understanding by all our people of the issues and consequences of various possible decisions.

But the Constitution can be changed. It can be reinterpreted by the courts, amended by the Congress and the states, and even made ineffective by Executive Order and action. In the final analysis, the Constitution's safeguards can only be sustained by public support and understanding.

Freedom of speech is easily understood and appreciated. Nearly all of us can and do exercise it.

Freedom of the press is different. Not everyone has a press. Owners, editors and writers for publications — including newspapers — have presses and systems for disseminating the account of their ideas and opinions. Press freedom for the reader is the right — even responsibility — to read critically, to consider objectively and to accept or reject what may be offered. Freedom to reject press views may be exercised by a letter to the editor or a subscription cancellation. But the reader's real press freedom is the confidence that what he reads is not dictated or censored by the government or any powerful special interest.

Even press freedom is not absolute, however. In addition to the economic consequences of reader rejection and subscription cancellation, a publisher is restrained in other ways. The Constitution and the law guarantee other rights to individuals. A publisher is accountable for the content of his publication. Lies, and characterizations which deliberately injure innocent parties, are grounds for libel and damage charges. Among the other individual freedoms which must be respected in the free press are the desire for privacy and the right to a fair and open trial. The resolution of such concomitant freedoms is sometimes difficult and often results in lengthy litigation.

Does our system work? It has for two hundred years. But recently there have been developments which indicate discontent with and sharper criticism of the press and its electronic associates, television and radio news. There are sharp differences between the two, of course, but we will consider them together in this discussion.

What are some of the developments that bring us to our present situation?

The increased number of information outlets — newspapers, radio and television stations, magazines, books and access to them through new technology and affluence — inundate people daily in a tidal wave of news developments from all over the world. Too often we lack any real opportunity for understanding complex events; we become frustrated with our inability to cope with so many developments, so we get mad at the bearer of the bad news.

New York and Washington are power bases of business, labor, government, finance and other prime forces affecting our lives. Newspapers based in those cities carry a heavy responsibility as they try to report and explain what is happening there to all of us. But this is a diverse country encompassing major differences of perspective and opinion. Citizens of a small, homogeneous town like mine do not all see things exactly the same as residents of New York and Washington. Is it any wonder that as individuals we assess national events from different viewpoints?

None likes to have a judgment proven wrong. While we usually know who is at fault, it is tempting to blame wrongs on the source of the disappointing news.

I've heard such questions as: "What are the media trying to do to our President? Or our country? Why do they slant the news?

America is full of newspapers. One authority lists 11,089 newspapers of all kinds in the country. Another source lists 1,762 daily papers, with a circulation of 60,977,011, and 650 Sunday papers, with a circulation of 51,565,334. Besides daily papers, the weekly, biweekly, triweekly, semiweekly and four-times-a-week papers, according to various sources, number from 7,579 to 9,186, with top circulation estimated at 38,006,868. The black press, counted separately by the publishing-trade authorities, boasts 200 weekly newspapers, with a circulation of about 4,000,000. Add to this the nation's foreign-language and ethnic newspapers, plus approximately 5,000 free papers and trade and special-interest papers. The scene is one of enormous diversity.

Why do they persecute one fellow and cover up similar conduct by another?" When my friends talk about such matters, they almost always mention some other newspaper. But I know they really include ours.

So I want to speak on behalf of newspapers, and newspaper people. I believe sincerely they deserve your support. I know they need it — not just for their sake but for the country's sake. And for the sake of our First Amendment freedoms.

Newspaper people are the most dedicated people I know in their support of our free governmental system. It is that dedication which drives them in the honest pursuit of truth. Contrary to common portrayals, they are seldom real cynics. Though they deal daily with greed, corruption, misconduct and crime, they know that ours is the best form of government yet devised. And they want us to keep it.

The need to be truthful and to be able to prove it prevents a newspaper from publishing everything it hears, or everything you may have heard. The difficulty of spotlighting the conduct of wrongdoers while protecting the innocent causes agonizing decisions that we often would just as soon not have to make.

News people know they have a responsibility to carefully exercise the power of publication. People can be injured; the public can be misled; injustice can be done. Mistakes are made, for we are human. But no one can regret such a mistake more and be so quick to correct it.

It is commonplace in this business to offend and alienate your best friends in honest adherence to a news policy that treats everyone alike.

Let me simply tell you that nearly all newspaper people are talented, hard-working, sincere, sympathetic, and compassionate. Their newspapers are operated to make a profit, and most of those profits are reinvested in better staffs and facilities. Please remember that only financially sound newspapers can remain free and independent. At the same time, those I know do not hesitate to incur the wrath of the largest advertisers or of anyone else when professional principles of journalism and liberty are at stake.

We newspapermen and women believe in this country, its people and our common future. We are committed to excellence in honest journalism. We appreciate and are humbled by the privilege and power of a Free Press. We are convinced that press freedom is essential for the perpetuation of our democratic government and our free society.

It's your First Amendment, too. Please help preserve it.

LOW TAR-'ENRICHED FLAVOR'

Full tobacco flavor in a low tar cigarette.

That's the remarkable MERIT breakthrough.

A breakthrough made possible by over twelve years of intensive research into the components of cigarette smoke that contribute most to flavor.

The result: 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

MERIT and MERIT 100's are packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco fortified with extra flavor. Tobacco that for the first time delivers flavor you just wouldn't expect in a low tar cigarette.

Tests among thousands of smokers like yourself proved it.

If you're looking to become a low tar smoker or don't particularly enjoy the taste of the low tar brand you're now smoking, you'll be interested.

Taste-Test Proof

MERIT and MERIT 100's were tested against a number of higher tar brands. The results proved conclusively that 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco does boost taste without the usual increase in tar.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar than MERIT.

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And you can taste it.

A tip of the hat to Charles Slayman, a senior attorney in the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection. As part of his agency's quiet and heroic war against government verbiage, he devotes his days to recommending elimination of inactive and repetitious guidelines from two volumes of the Code of Federal Regulations.

Of the 152 rules on the books, the FTC, with Slayman's help, has weeded out more than 80 so far. Eliminated were guidelines for the manufacturing and distributing of such wares as corsets, steel bobby pins, and milk-bottle caps. The size of the rule books is being reduced by hundreds of pages, saving the taxpayer money. How much? "It's got to be a lot," says Slayman. "When you look around the government, those books are all over the place."

Here's help if you're planning to buy a 1977-model car or truck. The Federal Energy Administration's 1977 Gas Mileage Guide lists the estimated miles per gallon, average annual fuel cost, and other key data on 594 new models. There's a separate pamphlet for California covering 408 models, because that state has the most stringent auto exhaust standards in the nation. For your free copy of either pamphlet, write to Fuel Economy, Pueblo, Colorado 81009, or pick one up at your auto showroom.

The wealth of the nation. The Conference Board, an independent business research organization, has determined the national wealth of the U.S.—everyone's cash, gold, land, goods, structures, and equipment—totals an estimated $5.7 trillion. That's an average $26,511 for every man, woman, and child in the U.S. Even allowing for inflation, it's 17 times the typical American's wealth when the U.S. became a nation. The upshot is that America, for all its economic problems, is at least making progress through a rising standard of living.

THE CELEBRITY POLL RESULTS FOR 1977

The response to our Celebrity Poll was overwhelming. (For photos of winners see cover.) Now the votes have been tallied, and here are the winners.

Movie Stars

For the third time, Robert Redford has won. Clint Eastwood was a close second and Sylvester Stallone, the new male star of Rocky, came in third. As a three-time winner, Redford joins the mighty Duke Wayne on our honorary "retirement" list of movie royalty.

If Bob did well, Barbra did better. Streisand was an almost two-to-one winner over second-place finisher Faye Dunaway. Lucille Ball was your third choice. Like Wayne, Barbra is a three-time winner and goes into the FAMILY WEEKLY Celebrity Hall of Fame.

Television

Last-year's TV winner, Paul Michael Glaser, had no great competition this year as he stayed well ahead of both his Starsky and Hutch partner, David Soul, and of Happy Days' Henry Winkler. Farrah Fawcett-Majors (Charlie's Angels) won over Lindsay Wagner (The Bionic Woman) and Kate Jackson (Charlie's Angels).

The race for television's top supporting actor and actress was a nip-and-tuck battle. The final results showed Richard Hatch (Streets of San Francisco) to be the male winner, with Harvey Korman (The Carol Burnett Show) and Anson Williams (Happy Days) coming in second and third. In the female division, Family's Kristy McNichol edged out All in the Family's Sally Struthers, who in turn finished just ahead of Vicki Lawrence (The Carol Burnett Show).

After six years of polling your celebrity preferences, let's look back at the past winners and see just how durable the popularity of our television and movie stars has been.

1972 Our first Celebrity Poll turned up two TV celebrities who have done much to change the face of the medium: Mary Tyler Moore as the new-type career girl and Carroll O'Connor, as the inimitable Archie Bunker. The movie winners were John Wayne and Doris Day.

1973 Columbo's Peter Falk swept in on a tidal wave of votes, and Susan St. James barely edged out Cher Bono. The movie winners were Wayne, again, with Julie Andrews finishing just ahead of Doris Day.

1974 Jeanette Nolan of Dirty Sally and Alan Alda, the wildly funny surgeon in *M*A*S*H*, were victors. Duke Wayne ambled in for the third time, and Barbra Streisand sang her way to her first win.

1975 Alda for the second time in the TV lead, and Streisand, again, for the movie mantle. Valerie Harper was your selection as top TV actress. Now came Robert Redford to challenge, win and hold the turf.

1976 Does it seem like only yesterday? Paul Michael Glaser and Lindsay Wagner were your TV winners. Redford easily won the movie title, and Julie Andrews edged Barbra. fw

CLOSE-UP ON BEAUTIFUL HAIR

The way your hair looks can make a big difference in the way you feel. Here are some great new easy-care hair styles for spring that can make you look and feel terrific all year-round.

Before

Debbie Has Added Subtle Interest To Her Hair With Gentle Highlighting.

She really wasn't happy with her natural hair color. It didn't need an all-over change, but she knew it needed some new life. So she chose finger painting, lightening selected strands of hair to add a little play of auburn light and interest to her plain brown hair. It was easy, and the results were just what she had hoped for — warm reddish highlights to add the subtle interest she wanted. She loves the look, and she knew she would because finger painting was made especially for adding warm golden highlights to brunet hair. And she only has to finger paint two or three times a year because the highlights grow out gracefully.

Debbie's hair was trimmed and shaped to give it more control. She shampoos two or three times a week, using a deep-penetrating conditioner once a week to give her limp hair body and shine.

To play up her big eyes, she uses several coats of mascara with gray eye shadow smudged over the lids for emphasis. A cinnamon-colored lip gloss complements the new auburn tone of her hair.

After

Take a good look at your hair. Could it be shinier, prettier, more manageable? Does it need a perkier style? How about a new haircut to give you a lift? Maybe it needs a little color to make your own color richer or cover that beginning gray. Or would you really like a whole new look? It's easy to make any change you want by just following the 4 C's — Condition, Cut, Color and Control — to beautiful hair.

C IS FOR CONDITION

Beautiful hair has to be in beautiful condition. Take a look at yours. Is it a bit dull? Hard to manage? Are you noticing more split ends? If so, it's time to give yourself a deep-penetrating conditioning treatment. Be sure to make it part of your regular beauty routine at least twice a month — more often if your hair needs extra help. For noticeable improvement, leave the deep-penetrating conditioner in your hair for about 30 minutes after shampooing. Your hair will look healthier and have lots more bounce and shine. It's just about the nicest thing you can do for hair.

C IS FOR CUT

A professional salon haircut is the basis for any great-looking hair style. Your hair should work for you — frame your face to enhance your features and be shaped to go with the natural tendencies of your hair. With the right cut, natural waves and cowlicks can actually turn into assets. And that makes taking care of your hair so much easier. Even if you want to let your hair grow forever, make regular visits to your hairdresser for a trim to keep your style in shape and to prevent split ends.

C IS FOR COLOR

How about a few highlights to brighten your hair? Color changes can be very subtle. If your hair is light brown or lighter, consider painting in subtle sunny highlights. If your hair is medium-brown or darker, you might like the look of warm, reddish highlights to give your hair a little more interest. If you'd like something a touch more dramatic, try frosting. It won't change the overall color of your hair, just give it the beautiful blond accents you've always wanted. If you'd like to do something more, like going from dark hair to light, you can do that, too. You can do whatever you like. And the change can make you look and feel terrific.

C IS FOR CONTROL

And, finally, C is for control. Once your hair is well cut, beautifully colored and in super condition, a quick spritz with nonaerosol hair mist will add the control you need to keep your hair softly and naturally in place all day long.

Even a little change can give you a tremendous lift. Take a look at the changes these five women made. Maybe you'll get some good ideas for your hair.

C IS FOR CONDITION

Beautiful hair has to be in beautiful condition. Take a look at yours. Is it a bit dull? Hard to manage? Are you noticing more split ends? If so, it's time to give yourself a deep-penetrating conditioning treatment. Be sure to make it part of your regular beauty routine at least twice a month — more often if your hair needs extra help. For noticeable improvement, leave the deep-penetrating conditioner in your hair for about 30 minutes after shampooing. Your hair will look healthier and have lots more bounce and shine. It's just about the nicest thing you can do for hair.

C IS FOR CUT

A professional salon haircut is the basis for any great-looking hair style. Your hair should work for you — frame your face to enhance your features and be shaped to go with the natural tendencies of your hair. With the right cut, natural waves and cowlicks can actually turn into assets. And that makes taking care of your hair so much easier. Even if you want to let your hair grow forever, make regular visits to your hairdresser for a trim to keep your style in shape and to prevent split ends.

C IS FOR COLOR

How about a few highlights to brighten your hair? Color changes can be very subtle. If your hair is light brown or lighter, consider painting in subtle sunny highlights. If your hair is medium-brown or darker, you might like the look of warm, reddish highlights to give your hair a little more interest. If you'd like something a touch more dramatic, try frosting. It won't change the overall color of your hair, just give it the beautiful blond accents you've always wanted. If you'd like to do something more, like going from dark hair to light, you can do that, too. You can do whatever you like. And the change can make you look and feel terrific.

C IS FOR CONTROL

And, finally, C is for control. Once your hair is well cut, beautifully colored and in super condition, a quick spritz with nonaerosol hair mist will add the control you need to keep your hair softly and naturally in place all day long.

Even a little change can give you a tremendous lift. Take a look at the changes these five women made. Maybe you'll get some good ideas for your hair.

Going gray just isn't me. But using peroxide isn't either. Help!

Recently, while shopping with a friend, I caught a glimpse of "me" in a mirror. EEEK! I realized those few straggly strands of gray were making me look a little bedraggled. And a lot older than I am!

Oh No! "None of my friends are gray! Why me?"

I'm too young to be gray. But what's the solution? How can I use a hair coloring? I'm a scaredy-cat when it comes to putting some other color on my chestnut brown hair. And the whole idea of peroxide makes me nervous.

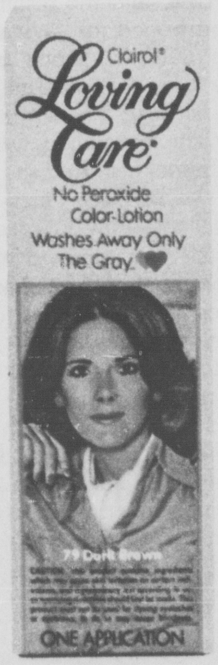
That was the day my friend told me she used Clairol's Loving Care® Color-Lotion. And I couldn't believe it. Not only was her hair absolutely beautiful and natural looking, she told me Loving Care has no peroxide. It actually covers gray without changing your natural hair color.

In seconds, we picked out my shade from the 15 available. I went straight home. Followed the easy directions. And when I washed in my Loving Care, I couldn't believe my hair.

I've got my own natural color. All over. Not one ugly hint of gray.

What's more, my hair's in terrific shape. More body. Softer and shinier. Loving Care is actually good for my hair.

I love it. And now when I catch a glimpse of myself in a mirror, I like that person who's looking back at me.



It's good for your hair.

Ronnie Wanted To Add Sunny Blond Excitement To "Mousey" Hair.

Her hair was dull, a little "mousey" and neither blond nor brown. She wanted to give it some excitement — a little extra dimension with blond contrasts. So she chose frosting. The result: a soft, pretty look with hair that radiates the healthy look of sunshine. Ronnie loves the look and likes frosting because it grows out gracefully. She only has to refrost three or four times a year.

Her hair was trimmed to give it more body and bounce. To keep her fine hair looking full and healthy, Ronnie washes it every other day with an herbal shampoo made for delicate hair. She also spritzes her hair with a nonaerosol hair mist after styling to keep her naturally dry, flyaway hair under control. Ronnie has naturally pretty skin and features so she wears little make-up. But to give her lips a shiny look she dabs on lip gloss and applies a light coating of mascara on her eyes.

Kippy Got A New And Richer Color For Long Straight Hair.

Her pretty brown hair turned dull as beginning gray crept in. She didn't want to change the color, just make it prettier. So she chose a foam-in, nonperoxide hair coloring close to her own natural color to blend in the grays and to make her color richer and shinier. It was easy to apply and quick — about 15 minutes. And if she wants, she can change shades because the color will wash out in five or six weeks.

Kippy didn't want to cut her hair, but a good trim was needed to give it more shape and to get rid of the splits and ragged ends. To give more fullness to the baby-fine hair, she curled ends with a steam styling wand. She also parted her hair in the center and pulled it back with combs.

To keep her fine hair shiny and manageable, and to keep split ends under control, she washes it every four days and once a week uses a deep-penetrating conditioner and creme rinse after shampooing to keep tangles under control.

Dolores Found How To Brighten Gray Hair.

She has a pretty, young-looking face, yet beginning gray hair made her look older than her age. It was the first time she had ever tried hair coloring, so she decided to try a nonperoxide, semi-permanent hair coloring. It was easy. She just shampooed it in. She selected a shade slightly lighter than her natural hair color in order to highlight the gray and make it work to her advantage. Now, where the gray used to be, Dolores has soft flattering highlights that light up her whole face.

A shorter cut, shaped to go along with the natural wave in her hair, makes her hair easier to control. And the new hair color adds body. She always had set her hair in rollers, but she wasn't happy with the results. Now she can blow her hair dry and finish the style with an all-over spritz of a nonaerosol hair mist for the look she wants — easier, softer and more manageable hair. A bit of creme blush on her cheeks, and some mascara and eye shadow to bring out her eyes, complete the pretty picture.

Beverly Wanted To Lighten Her Natural Hair Color.

She wanted to make her natural hair color a little lighter and warmer, and she wanted a completely new hair style. To get the lift she wanted, she chose an easy one-step shampoo-formula hair color in dark auburn — a few shades lighter than her natural hair color. Now her color is warm and rich, a perfect blend for her golden skin tone. To keep her normally dry hair in good condition, Beverly shampoos it once or twice a week with a color-fast shampoo made especially for brunets. She then uses a deep-penetrating conditioner to keep it manageable.

A shorter hair style, brushed and blow-dried away from her face, gives Beverly a more sophisticated look. (It's also more flattering to her pretty features.) And to complete the change, she found that a touch of wine blush on her cheeks, some shiny lip gloss on the lips and a bit of mascara and a smudge of eye shadow on the eyes really play up her features and complement the new hair color.

Her hair was more than half-gray. She thought she wanted a natural look but decided her natural gray hair wasn't pretty. So she chose a one-step shampoo-formula hair coloring that was close to her naturally pretty golden brown hair. All it took was 20 minutes; she just shampooed it in, then rinsed it out.

A shorter hair style — classic to complement her classically good looks — took years off her face. To soften the look further, she thinned her eyebrows and applied a moisturizing makeup base to help erase some of the lines from her face. A touch of blush and a bit of lipstick keep Ann's appearance totally natural.

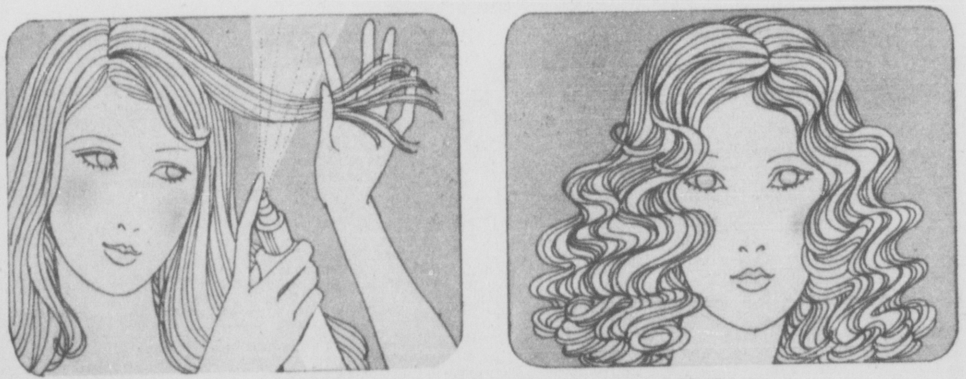
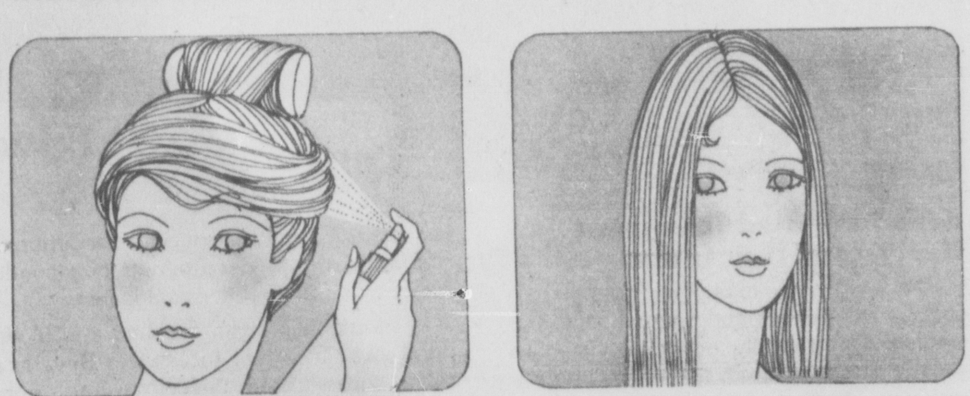
QUICK AND EASY HAIR-STYLING SECRETS

Long or short, curly or straight, fine or thick — all hair needs help when it comes to keeping curls curled, sides swept back and crowns from falling. A good professional haircut is the first step. But to give fine hair extra body or to keep frizzy hair under control, you need something more. Here are some styling secrets to keep your hair looking its best.



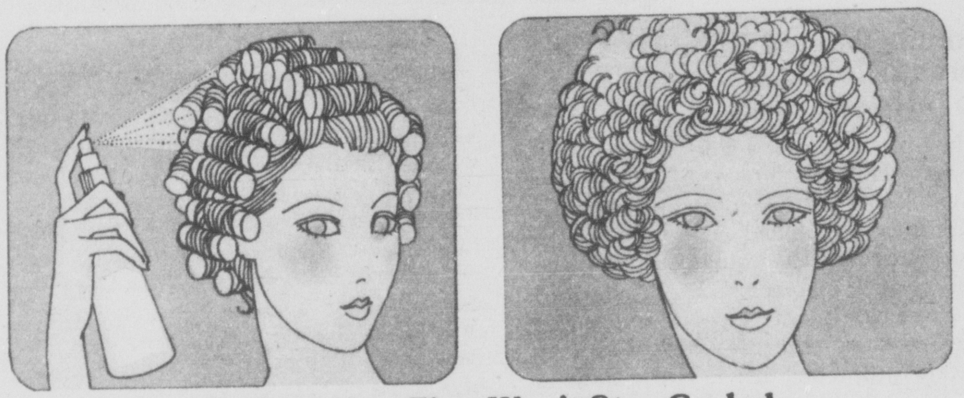
Fine, Limp Hair Needs Body All Over

Shampoo and towel dry hair. While still damp, give it a spray of nonaerosol hair mist. Comb. Set hair on small-to-medium-size rollers. Spray again. Let dry, brush into style, respray.



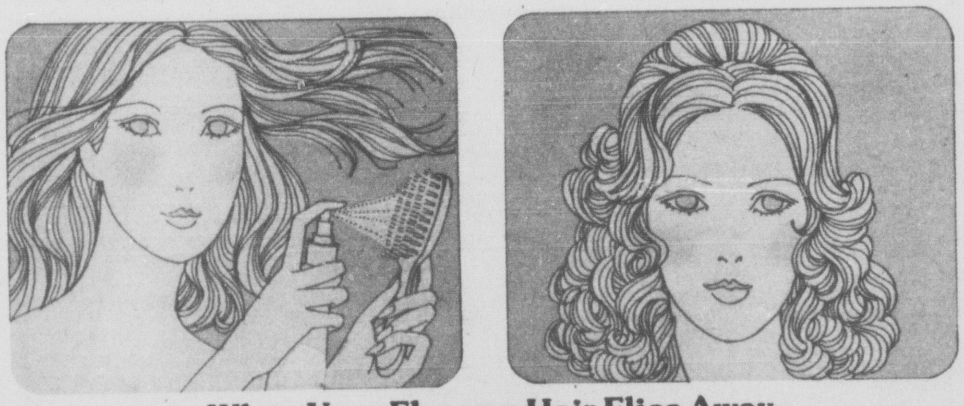
Curly Or Wavy Hair That Won't Stay Straight

Shampoo and towel dry. While damp, spray on nonaerosol hair mist. Comb through so hair hangs straight. Using your head as a large "roller," wrap sections of hair around your head. Be sure hair is taut. Respray each section as it is wrapped. Dry. Brush into place.



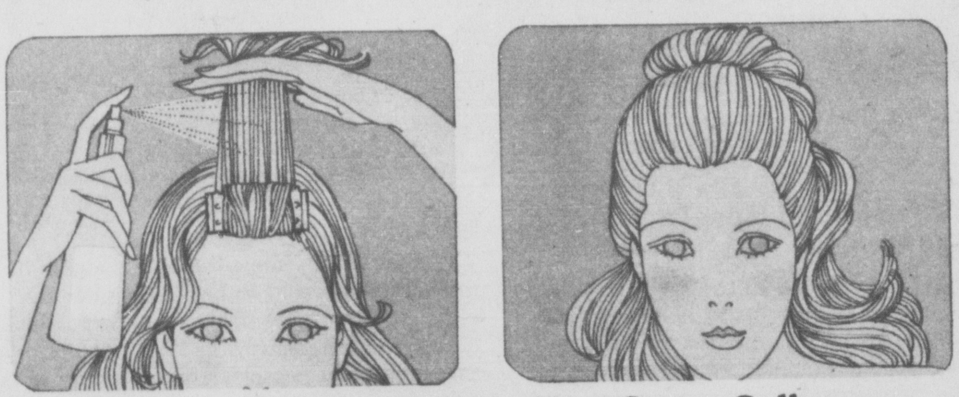
Straight Hair That Won't Stay Curled

Shampoo hair and towel dry. Give it a spray of nonaerosol hair mist, then comb through. Respray each section of hair before setting on small rollers. Set hair as usual, then respray.



When Your Flyaway Hair Flies Away

Spray hair mist directly onto your hairbrush. Brush gently over hair. Or spray mist lightly onto your hand. Gently glide dampened hand over flyaway wisps to tame them.



Your Face Needs Height But Your Crown Collapses

Set crown on supersize rollers, first separating hair into sections. Before rolling-up each roller, spray hair section with a nonaerosol hair mist. Then set and respray lightly. It's that easy, and your hair style will hold up beautifully all day long.

So we resisted the trend. Until we could perfect a 100 with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Well, we've done it. In new Vantage 100's. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

CHARLIE'S ANGELS' IDEAS ON BEAUTY

From left: Jaclyn Smith, Kate Jackson, Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

Three of TV's most glamorous women tell you how they stay so pretty.

By Rosemary Lord

These three Southern belles have taken America by storm. The stunning looks of Charlie's Angels stars Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Jaclyn Smith and Kate Jackson have women clamoring to know more about them and wanting, in particular, to glean a few of their beauty secrets. I talked to the three stars between their hectic taping sessions about their ideas on beauty and personal care.

Farrah Fawcett-Majors

She keeps her trim figure by eating heartily but carefully (little meat and lots of vegetables) and by playing tennis every weekend with her husband Lee Majors, star of the Six Million Dollar Man. Farrah's beauty routine is carefully organized to the last minute: "I get up at 5:30 A.M.," she says, "stumble into the shower and wash and condition my hair, stumble out of the shower and get everything ready for the studio while my hair is drying. The night before I've done my nails, which I now have to do every day. I pluck my eyebrows, then I cream my face and, perhaps, give myself a slight facial while I'm doing something else." Farrah's hair is the envy of women everywhere, and she explained how she looks after it. Allen Edward of Beverly Hills, partner of Barbra Streisand's Jon Peters, is responsible for cutting and shaping the mane. "I wash my hair every day," she says. "Then I towel it, blow it dry and roll it in enormous rollers that I leave in until I get to the studio — about 25 minutes. Finally, I take it down (I don't tease it at all) and brush it before every shot. I like it to look natural. My hair is easy to manage and very thick, so I know I'm fortunate."

Jaclyn Smith

Green-eyed Jaclyn feels that the greatest help for her looks is her love of ballet and that her regular ballet classes keep her healthy and slim. "I'm able to eat anything without gaining an ounce," she says happily. In addition, Jaclyn works out three times a week at a Beverly Hills health club on special machines. Along with being great for toning muscles and. improving circulation, she feels these workouts "can correct shortcomings in your figure and can break down fatty tissues." Jaclyn prefers subtle colors and natural earth-tones in her makeup but likes to leave her skin free of anything on weekends. She looks after her naturally brown hair herself, wears large rollers "a lot" and simply brushes her hair out to its soft, natural look.

Kate Jackson

Cast as Sabrina, the most intellectual of the Angels, 27-year-old Kate believes that beauty is a state of mind and thus makes sure she has time to be by herself to relax quietly. Kate lets the studio makeup and hair artists do what they have to do, but when she's not working, she doesn't bother with makeup. She washes her carefully cut hair herself and brushes it into shape. Like the other Angels, Kate does not have a problem with weight and eats pretty much what she likes, making sure, however, that she gets plenty of protein. A natural athlete who considered trying a career in professional tennis, she still works with a coach on weekends. fw

Fitness is my business

I RECOMMEND BULLWORKER® BECAUSE IT'S FAST, IT'S EASY AND IT REALLY WORKS!

Bob Breton says "I earn my living by keeping top executives in peak physical shape. My clients insist on maximum results with minimum time and effort. I recommend Bullworker because it's fast, it's easy and it really works."

Most men know they're not getting enough exercise to keep their bodies in shape.

Ten years as a fitness coach has taught me one important fact: most men will not stick with a training program long enough for it to do them any good, unless the training is fast, easy and shows results right away.

Bullworker gets a top score on all three counts:

—it's fast: each exercise takes only 7 seconds and the complete workout can be done in about five minutes

—it's easy: any man between 15 and 65 in good general health can perform the full program without getting tired

—you see your results right from the very first day on the built-in Powermeter gauge. After two to three weeks of regular training, most men can expect to measure an extra inch or two of muscle on their shoulders, chest and biceps—and an inch or two less flab around the middle.

And that's just the start: there are specialized exercises for building-up or trimming-down any part of your body you want to. What's more since Bullworker training is progressive, you perform better each time. Yet the training always seems easy since with every workout your strength increases by about 1%—that's an increase of up to 50% in just three months, and I've seen many men go on to double and even triple their strength. For my money, Bullworker is the most advanced home trainer on the market. I use it and recommend it to any man who wants to get back in top shape fast.

Patching Things Up

We patch up quarrels in our home,
That is the subject of my pome.
I'm not quite sure just how we do it—
We take a patch, I guess, and glue it.
Then when the need again appears,
Out comes another patch, with cheers.

We patch up quickly, that a fact is,
The skill we've learned through years of practice.
In view of all I've said above,
This you no doubt are thinking of:
With all these quarrels patched, rebuilt,
We must look like a patchwork quilt.

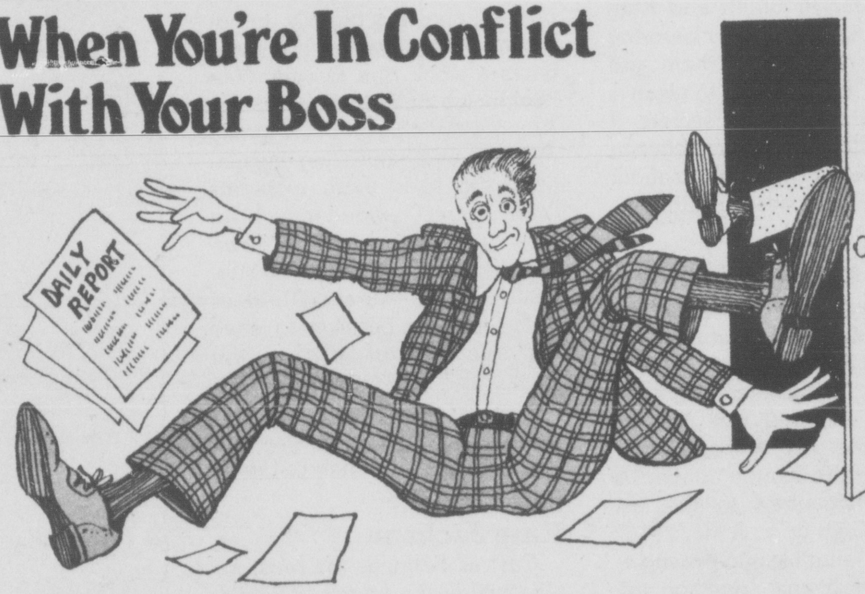
JOBMANSHIP

When You're In Conflict With Your Boss



If you want to stay with your job, forget about battling. You can't win. The boss has the power. According to Charles C. Vance, author of Boss Psychology (McGraw-Hill), "When you realize the boss is angry with you, go to him or her and say, 'I'm puzzled by what happened. Will you explain it to me?' Then listen. Try to control emotions that urge you to get angry or protest. When the boss finishes, say, 'I see the situation more clearly now. Here is what I think can be done to clear it up.'" This response returns life to normal between the two of you. At the same time it marks you as a sensible and responsible person.

In order to get the most from this method, remember there's more to listening than just hearing words. Dr. Ernest Dichter, father of motivational research, recommends you pay attention to the boss's emotion and try to understand what is behind his words. Never allow yourself to begin with a preconceived idea of what your boss is going to say. For example, says Dr. Dichter, if you're late with some project, do you think you already know what the spiel will be and have you already tuned out? Where possible, Dr. Dichter suggests you take notes as the boss talks. Under the emotional stress of the moment, your memory can play tricks on you. With notes, you're not open to the danger of later overlooking what the boss considers the most important point of the entire discussion. —S. R. Redford

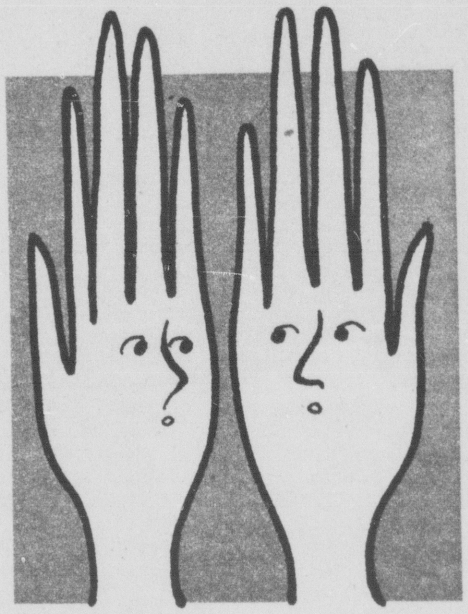
PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Are left-handers more independent than right-handers? Can a person control the temperature of his hands?

WHAT YOUR HANDS REVEAL ABOUT YOU

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Right-handed people have different personality tendencies than left-handers.
2. Left-handed people who use their right hand for writing are more likely to get ulcers and other stress ailments.
3. If your hands lack warmth — resulting in a cold, clammy handshake — there isn't much you can do, except wear gloves when you meet someone.
4. Left-handed people are better-suited for some occupations than right-handers.
5. There are both right-handers and left-handers who are skilled in the use of their hands, but this is rarely true of the ambidextrous person.
6. The ardent swain, intent on crooning sweet nothings into his lady's ear, should consider whether she is right-handed or left-handed.



ANSWERS

1. True. A Boston University study revealed left-handers to be more independent (expressing a more ruggedly individualistic I'm-my-own-man attitude) and more determined than the average right-hander. Other findings: the left-hander prefers to figure things out for himself, rather than accept what people tell him, and resents people or situations that he feels restrict his lifestyle. It's also noted that the left-handed person — growing up in a right-handed world — seems to experience more challenges to his competence and autonomy than does the right-handed person.

2. True. Studies of right-handed people at California Polytechnic State University showed that when the left-handed person switches to his right hand for exacting chores such as writing, the result is what behavior specialists term "crossed dominance," which produces nervous tensions that can have a negative effect on general well-being. The study also revealed that left-sided people who have poor coordination because they use their right hands experienced almost twice the number of broken bones as the group where "crossed dominance" was not present.

3. False. Experiments with volunteer subjects at the University of Missouri have demonstrated that many people can control the temperature of their hands to an appreciable extent simply by thinking them warm — or cold. In the tests, "subjects were randomly assigned to two groups; in one they were instructed to imagine their hands in very warm water, and in the other they were to imagine their hands in ice-cold water." The findings indicate control of hand temperature can be achieved by merely giving instructions to produce relevant (hot or cold) images. And Menninger Foundation scientists conclude: "In our opinion, almost 100 percent of healthy persons have the physiological capacity to increase blood flow in the hands at will."

4. True. For example, tests at the University of Cincinnati showed left-handers to have greater spatial competence (a better sense of space, distance and proportion), which is an important attribute in such professions as architecture. For this reason, two studies of architects and architecture students were made by investigators. They confirmed that: "1) both groups tend to be more left-handed than would be normally expected; 2) all the left-handed students followed complex directions about drawing a spatial maze (an architectural exercise) perfectly, whereas over 50 percent of the right-handed students erred."

5. True. In a study at the Brain and Perception Laboratory of the University of Bristol (England), using tests of manual dexterity, speed and control of hand movement, persons who claimed to be equally "good" with both hands rarely measured up to the adeptness of the average right-hander or left-hander. "Certainly," concluded the investigators, "those subjects with mixed hand usage were not equally good with each hand, but rather equally bad." And while granting that there may be exceptions to this conclusion, it's noted that a high level of skill with either hand is associated with a strong preference for either the right or left hand.

6. True. If she's left-handed, for instance, he will do well to choose her left ear. Research sponsored by the U.S. Public Health Service's Biological Sciences has shown that responses are significantly accelerated when auditory stimulation is presented to the left ear of a left-handed person. It's important, however, that the auditory stimulation be a melodic tune. So crooning a love song (in the correct ear, of course) would seem to assure the swain of an inside track where the lady's responses are concerned. fw

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

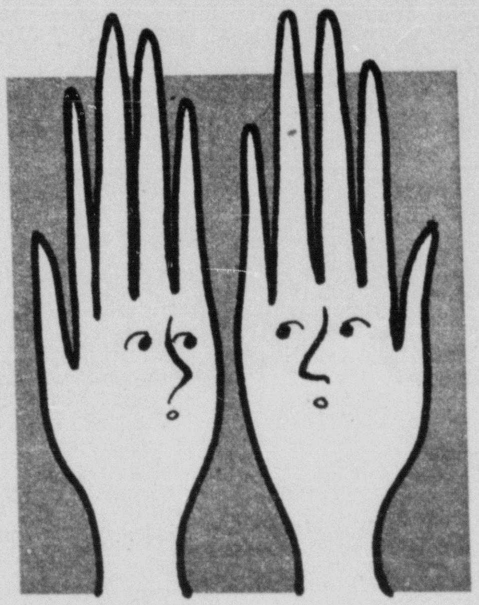
PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Are left-handers more independent than right-handers? Can a person control the temperature of his hands?

WHAT YOUR HANDS REVEAL ABOUT YOU



TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Right-handed people have different personality tendencies than left-handers.

2. Left-handed people who use their right hand for writing are more likely to get ulcers and other stress ailments.

3. If your hands lack warmth — resulting in a cold, clammy handshake — there isn't much you can do, except wear gloves when you meet someone.

4. Left-handed people are better-suited for some occupations than right-handers.

5. There are both right-handers and left-handers who are skilled in the use of their hands, but this is rarely true of the ambidextrous person.

6. The ardent swain, intent on crooning sweet nothings into his lady's ear, should consider whether she is right-handed or left-handed.

ANSWERS

1. True. A Boston University study revealed left-handers to be more independent (expressing a more ruggedly individualistic I'm-my-own-man attitude) and more determined than the average right-hander. Other findings: the left-hander prefers to figure things out for himself, rather than accept what people tell him, and resents people or situations that he feels restrict his lifestyle. It's also noted that the left-handed person — growing up in a right-handed world — seems to experience more challenges to his competence and autonomy than does the right-handed person.

2. True. Studies of right-handed people at California Polytechnic State University showed that when the left-handed person switches to his right hand for exacting chores such as writing, the result is what behavior specialists term "crossed dominance," which produces nervous tensions that can have a negative effect on general well-being. The study also revealed that left-sided people who have poor coordination because they use their right hands experienced almost twice the number of broken bones as the group where "crossed dominance" was not present.

3. False. Experiments with volunteer subjects at the University of Missouri have demonstrated that many people can control the temperature of their hands to an appreciable extent simply by thinking them warm — or cold. In the tests, "subjects were randomly assigned to two groups; in one they were instructed to imagine their hands in very warm water, and in the other they were to imagine their hands in ice-cold water." The findings indicate control of hand temperature can be achieved by merely giving instructions to produce relevant (hot or cold) images. And Menninger Foundation scientists conclude: "In our opinion, almost 100 percent of healthy persons have the physiological capacity to increase blood flow in the hands at will."

4. True. For example, tests at the University of Cincinnati showed left-handers to have greater spatial competence (a better sense of space, distance and proportion), which is an important attribute in such professions as architecture. For this reason, two studies of architects and architecture students were made by investigators. They confirmed that: "1) both groups tend to be more left-handed than would be normally expected; 2) all the left-handed students followed complex directions about drawing a spatial maze (an architectural exercise) perfectly, whereas over 50 percent of the right-handed students erred."

5. True. In a study at the Brain and Perception Laboratory of the University of Bristol (England), using tests of manual dexterity, speed and control of hand movement, persons who claimed to be equally "good" with both hands rarely measured up to the adeptness of the average right-hander or left-hander. "Certainly," concluded the investigators, "those subjects with mixed hand usage were not equally good with each hand, but rather equally bad." And while granting that there may be exceptions to this conclusion, it's noted that a high level of skill with either hand is associated with a strong preference for either the right or left hand.

6. True. If she's left-handed, for instance, he will do well to choose her left ear. Research sponsored by the U.S. Public Health Service's Biological Sciences has shown that responses are significantly accelerated when auditory stimulation is presented to the left ear of a left-handed person. It's important, however, that the auditory stimulation be a melodic tune. So crooning a love song (in the correct ear, of course) would seem to assure the swain of an inside track where the lady's responses are concerned. fw

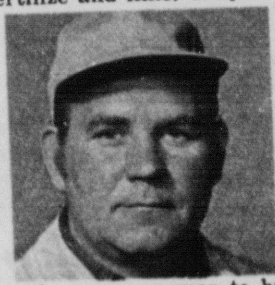
By Mike Sandin
Agronomist



Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

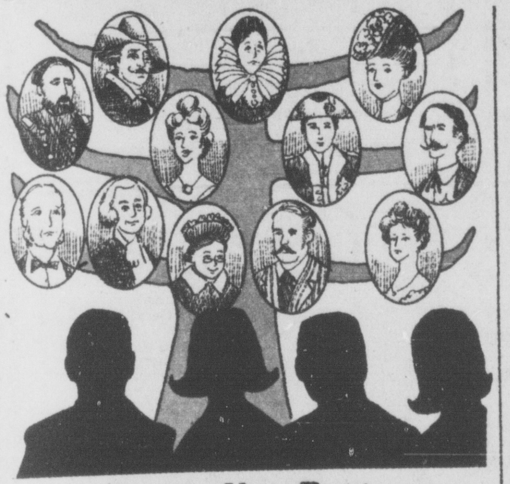
WHAT IN THE WORLD...



Tracing Your Roots

John La Corte, founder and director of the Genealogical Heraldic Institute of America, says that inquiries from Americans anxious to trace their family background have more than doubled since the TV broadcast of Roots. Unfortunately, he says, there is no central registry of facts for Americans who want to trace their backgrounds. Individuals interested in doing so are advised to start by looking at home. After locating as many names, places, certificates, dates and memorabilia as possible, they should interview living relatives. Once family sources are exhausted, turn to public libraries that contain newspapers, telephone books, census records and, perhaps, a local genealogical collection. Church and county records, available for anybody's inspection, may also be helpful. The next step may be to visit such institutions as the National Archives or the Library of Congress in Washington or the Mormon Church's genealogical library in Salt Lake City, which has microfilmed documents on more than 30 million names. In addition, there are hundreds of local genealogical societies and libraries throughout the United States, such as the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society with its collection of more than 55,000 volumes. The final stage often involves a trip to the family's country of origin. Professional assistance is another alternative. Local historical societies and churches frequently know of individuals and institutions whose business it is to trace family roots.

Coffee Grounds For Gardening

Coffee addicts trying to squeeze the last drop from their expensive habit should take up gardening. At the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, horticulturist Edmond Moulin says you can use spent coffee grounds as mulch or organic matter to retain moisture in soil for indoor and outdoor gardening. They're not as effective as peat moss in moisture retention, he warns, but they do help. The mixture he recommends uses one-part coffee grounds to three-parts soil for planting, or about one inch on top of soil as mulch.

A Formula That Allows You To Keep Control Of Your Credit

There's a simple formula that lets you keep control of your credit by warning you if you're too far in debt, says Alicestine Dalton, family-resource management specialist. "List all your monthly payments, excluding housing," she explains. "Then divide this total by your monthly take-home pay. Multiply that figure by 100 to find the percentage which goes to monthly payments. You're losing control of your credit if installment payments are between 15 and 20 percent of your pay. You can gain control by refusing to take on any new debts. Analyze your monthly payments to determine the debts that can be eliminated first. You should concentrate on debts that carry the highest interest charges."

Choosing A Safe Skateboard

Since skateboards are a major cause of injuries to children, here is the advice of experts on how to make sure your kid's board is as safe as possible. Fiberglass boards are superior to wood, plastic or aluminum ones. Look for wheels made of polyurethane; they give the best traction, absorb shocks best and last the longest. As for trucks, the mechanisms that connect the wheels to the board, stay away from those that are simply a bit of metal screwed into the board. A lot of flexibility and give are required for most skateboard maneuvers, and rigid metal screws won't hold for long. Finally, for the best assurance of top quality, assemble your own board from parts you purchase separately.

College Professors Face Growing Threat Of Malpractice Suits

Dr. Willis Truitt, president of the United Faculty chapter at the University of South Florida, says that any college course or event seems to be fertile ground for the growth of a new trend — legal suits filed by students against their professors. Not only are such suits expensive and potentially damaging to a professor's career but Truitt fears the increase in student-initiated suits will stifle professors and result in unimaginative classes. At the University of South Florida, more than 300 professors each carry $250,000 of professional liability insurance. Disputes over grades are the largest area for potential lawsuits.

Quick Takes

Americans use five-times more table salt per capita than the world average, the Salt Institute reveals.... Basic reading skills of 17-year-old students — especially blacks, ghetto dwellers, offspring of poorly educated parents and others who normally score lowest on reading tests — improved most during the early 1970's, says the National Assessment of Educational Progress for the U.S. Office of Education.... Chocolate chip cookies are the top- selling cookie in America, with an estimated $400 million worth sold last year, says a private industry survey. The $400 million worth amounts to 266 million pounds — or an estimated eight billion cookies.... Houseplant sales are shooting up faster than Jack's beanstalk. In 1971 $38 million worth of foliage houseplants was sold. Preliminary figures for 1976 show sales of $260 million, an increase of nearly 600 percent, reports Dr. Doug Crater, horticulturist at the University of Georgia College of Agriculture. "Five years ago the average houseplant enthusiast owned about 10 plants," he says. "Today such a person is more likely to own 25 or 30.".... The average age of the top 13 people in President Carter's Administration is 51, while the average age of the Soviet Union's top leaders (the 15 members of the Politburo) is 67.

Roaches Predict Earthquakes

Don't mash those cockroaches that may be scooting around your kitchen cabinets. A member of the U.S. Geological Survey says they may be helpful in predicting earthquakes. Dr. Ruth Simon has installations of cockroaches in three active California earthquake areas. She has found that there are certain times when the cockroaches are busy and other times when they're quiet. "Before an earthquake of even the smallest intensity, there's a marked increase in activity," she says. And although she has not started predicting earthquakes from cockroach behavior, she says the connection gets stronger with each comparison.

College Professors Face Growing Threat Of Malpractice Suits

Dr. Willis Truitt, president of the United Faculty chapter at the University of South Florida, says that any college course or event seems to be fertile ground for the growth of a new trend — legal suits filed by students against their professors. Not only are such suits expensive and potentially damaging to a professor's career but Truitt fears the increase in student-initiated suits will stifle professors and result in unimaginative classes. At the University of South Florida, more than 300 professors each carry $250,000 of professional liability insurance. Disputes over grades are the largest area for potential lawsuits.

Quick Takes

Americans use five-times more table salt per capita than the world average, the Salt Institute reveals.... Basic reading skills of 17-year-old students — especially blacks, ghetto dwellers, offspring of poorly educated parents and others who normally score lowest on reading tests — improved most during the early 1970's, says the National Assessment of Educational Progress for the U.S. Office of Education.... Chocolate chip cookies are the top- selling cookie in America, with an estimated $400 million worth sold last year, says a private industry survey. The $400 million worth amounts to 266 million pounds — or an estimated eight billion cookies.... Houseplant sales are shooting up faster than Jack's beanstalk. In 1971 $38 million worth of foliage houseplants was sold. Preliminary figures for 1976 show sales of $260 million, an increase of nearly 600 percent, reports Dr. Doug Crater, horticulturist at the University of Georgia College of Agriculture. "Five years ago the average houseplant enthusiast owned about 10 plants," he says. "Today such a person is more likely to own 25 or 30."....The average age of the top 13 people in President Carter's Administration is 51, while the average age of the Soviet Union's top leaders (the 15 members of the Politburo) is 67.

Roaches Predict Earthquakes

Don't mash those cockroaches that may be scooting around your kitchen cabinets. A member of the U.S. Geological Survey says they may be helpful in predicting earthquakes. Dr. Ruth Simon has installations of cockroaches in three active California earthquake areas. She has found that there are certain times when the cockroaches are busy and other times when they're quiet. "Before an earthquake of even the smallest intensity, there's a marked increase in activity," she says. And although she has not started predicting earthquakes from cockroach behavior, she says the connection gets stronger with each comparison.
